DERMATOLOGY.
JAMES H. ADGER, Dermatologist,
Office, 131, Elizabeth-street, Sydney, treats successfully all diseases of the skin and scalp, loss of hair, premature blanching, and general cultivation and growth of the hair; and, as a result of this experience, he may point to his flattering success during several years' practice in this city, without reference to the many special cures he has effected, as the best proof of the general efficiency of his system of treatment.
Mr. Adger may be consulted at his office, 131, Elizabeth-street, where letters and testimonials are open to inspection, which must satisfy the most sceptical, signed as they are by persons of the highest positions in society. It will be obvious that no person could have obtained such names as an endorsement of his professional ability without substantial proof of merit. Advice and remedy, 10s 6d.

MR. ADGER leaves Sydney on the 23rd July, and will be absent until further notice.

This property, which comprises mineral leases Nos. 10 and 21, in all 40 acres, directly adjoining the Bulga Gold and Silver Mining Company's property on the south, is one of great promise, and affords a genuine field for mining enterprise. As a proof of the confidence the proprietors have in the value of the mine they have signified their willingness to take the whole payment in shares, thus leaving the full amount received from the developing shares to be devoted to the opening up of the mine, and as the number of these shares is limited early application is necessary.

The shares will be allotted in priority of application.

Mr. Theodore Ranft, M.E., has inspected the property, and his report is subjoined, also plan of the ground showing the relative position of the lodes.

64, King-street, Sydney, March 14, 1888.

To Messrs. Campbell and others.

Gentlemen,—Herewith I beg to hand you my report upon portion No. 10, on the Bulga Mountains, near Orange, comprising 20 acres, as also on block 21 of 20 acres.

The geological features are talcose and steatitic schists, in places assuming felsitic, in others gneissic structure, through which several courses of lodes are traceable on the surface.

On one of these lodes, trenches, or more properly speaking, shallow holes have been sunk, the deepest not over 6ft. This line I will call the western, being about 6 chains from the eastern boundary of the block.

About 3½ chains from the eastern boundary, a mixture of quartz and gossan marks a central line on which no work has been done, and which appears in irregular bunches.

The eastern line is principally gossan, and is about 2 chains from the eastern boundary. These several trends show a divergence to the north, and a closer approaching to the south. The shallow holes on the western lode demonstrate the latter to be composed of quartz and gossan in veins, while in the bottom of one hole it is a solid floor of quartz over 3ft. wide, with cavities filled with gossan, having all the appearance of being silver and gold bearing, and I consider this the most favourable surface show on the block. The shaft now sinking some 30ft. was started immediately on the west of a bunchy gossan lode, which, underlaying west, met a body of quartz, which latter replaces the gossan.

Close to the west of the shaft a big body of quartz appears, which I consider to be the continuation of the central vein, and about 1½ chain to the west the line of the western lode strikes.

From this it is evident that the shaft now sinking is not judiciously placed unless it is sunk with the intention of driving to the west to intersect the central and western veins. Moreover, I consider that the site where the shallow holes are a shaft would have been more judicious than where it is placed.

The surrounding evidence especially to the north in block (9) with that of the ground under notice, is conducive to expect an ore deposit of considerable size, possibly at some depth. The assay returns said to have been obtained from the surface or near to it are encouraging.

Irrespective of its surface shows, the position of the ground would on some less promising fields command a fair price, and I consider there is sufficient inducement to warrant the ground being properly developed.

In portion 21, about 5 chains from its eastern boundary, a well defined large quartz lode is visible for over 3 chains, which I take for the continuation of what I call in portion No. 10, the "western lode." Although they are not in a line, I am pretty well positive that exploitations will establish them as one.

The accompanying sketch plan shows position of the several portions, and the various features noted in the foregoing.

I am, Gentlemen,
Yours truly,
J. A. H. THEODORE RANFT, M.E., &c.

As the property now before the public immediately adjoins that of the Bulga Gold and Silver Mining Company, the following extract from Mr. Phillip Davies's report upon the latter will be of interest :—

"The now celebrated Lewis Ponds Silver Mine of this locality had only ferruginous ore carrying gold and silver near the surface, but the 117ft. level has intersected very valuable grey lead ore and native silver. The Bulga mines, comprising the blocks now under my review, are situated on the same zone or belt of rock as the Lewis Ponds. We may therefore expect to get the same class of minerals and metals as that company if sinking and exploring be carried on to similar depth. I cannot see how it is possible that such an immense deposit of ferruginous ore like this can exist excepting in connection with permanent silver and gold bearing ore bodies underneath; besides the rocks are soft and kind, and in every way favourable to the existence of permanent lodes."

Work done on the adjoining leases gave results up to 460oz. of silver and over 1oz. of gold to the ton, and there is every prospect of the Bulga South giving equally good results.

Assays from the surface have given as high as 13oz. of silver and traces of gold.

NOTE.—This prospectus is published for public information only, the whole of the first issue of shares having been applied for.

This Company is being formed for the purpose of reconstructing the present Maryville Colliery Company, Limited, under an agreement which is proposed to be made between W. B. Bradley, of the first part; the present Maryville Colliery Company, Limited, of the second part; the Shareholders of the present Maryville Colliery Company, Limited, of the third part; and a Trustee for the New Company, of the fourth part; and a draft of which agreement can be seen at the office of the New Company's Solicitors, Pitt and Bond streets, Sydney.

The principal reasons and purposes for which the present Maryville Colliery Company, Limited, is being reconstructed, are as follows :—

The sum of £10,500, which was produced by the issue of 30,000 Shares in the old Company, having been found inadequate for the development of the property, private capital had to be obtained to complete the satisfactory opening out of the mine. It is now desired to liquidate this encumbrance by an issue of 30,000 Contributing Shares as above; but as the Directors of the old Company have been advised that the recent English case, in re the Almada and Tirito Company, has decided not only that new Shares issued by way of increase of capital cannot be issued as either wholly or partly paid-up, but that section 57 of the Companies Act only provides for the issue of fully paid up shares, for a consideration other than cash, and that the only way of doing so is by reconstructing the Company, it has been decided to reconstruct the old Company by the formation of a new Company on the terms above mentioned—terms which, considering the present profitable working of the Colliery, and the briskness of the coal trade, offer extraordinary inducement to investors, more especially as the Colliery is thoroughly equipped, and the weekly profit on the coal raised will be free of any charge outside of general working expenses.

The sum required to be liquidated, subject to the fluctuations of the account current, is £14,000, which under the before mentioned draft agreement, may be arranged for by instalments ranging over a period of 18 months.

The property consists of an area comprising 97 acres, only four of which have so far been worked, and the lease is current to the year 1904, subject to a royalty of 1s per ton on large coal and 4d per ton on small, together with £5 per acre per annum for any surface lands used by the Company.

The colliery is now in efficient working order, having good main and air shafts, and other workings, in strict accordance with the Mining Act regulations. An average weekly output can now be raised, which, with economical working, will leave a profit of £125 weekly, or £6500 per annum, without taking into consideration the increase in the output as the underground workings extend.

A seam of splendid coal, 9ft. 11in. thick, is now being worked towards the Wickham and Bullock Island side, and on the western boundary the Ferndale Colliery is working profitably seams of 12ft. thick, proving incontestably the extent of the Company's coal area.

Herewith is the report of Mr. John Thomas, Coal Viewer for the Victorian Government, also a local plan of the property, from which latter it will be seen that the Maryville Colliery adjoins several of the best coal mines in the Newcastle district.

REPORT ON THE MARYVILLE COLLIERY.

This Colliery is situated at Wickham, near the city of Newcastle, in the county of Northumberland, and within 500 or 600 yards of the Bullock Island hydraulic cranes.

I took a section of the seam at the face of No. 1 Bord, in H heading, with the following results :—

COAL BANDS.

—	Feet.	Inches.	Feet.	Inches.
Roof Shale ...	...	...	...	...	6ft. of solid coal, to be worked by a system known as Ripping Back.
Top Coal ...	6	0	...	...
Morgan ...	—	...	2	0
Little Tops ...	1	0	...	...	Present working face on Little Tops and Bottom Coal.
Jerry ...	...	...	...	10
Bottom Coal ..	3	8	...	...
Floor — hard sandstone ...	...	...	...	...
	10	8	2	10	13—6

Thus we have in 13ft. 6in. of ground, 10ft. 8in. of excellent coal.

The rippings, after having driven the several bords and headings to their respective distances or boundaries, as the case may be, leave a magnificent bed of coal, 6ft. in thickness in one coal, to bring back.

The section in the air-shaft shows a thicker bed of coal than at the respective faces in the several bords I visited, although the manager agrees with me that the section given is a fair average of the coal now being worked. I would not recommend the pillars to be worked without due precaution being taken by the management, and this, I may add, will have to be left to the skill, penetration, and good judgment of the mining manager in charge of the underground workings, in order to ascertain the quality of the roof, and its adaptability for working with safety to property and the men's lives. The yield per acre of this coal, including the rippings, will equal fully 15,000 tons per acre, so that a good area remains to be wrought of very excellent coal, being, as most people are aware, a continuation of the celebrated Borehole seam, or No. 3, in the upper carboniferous series of the Newcastle coal basin, and is identical with the coal now worked at Minmi, Co-operative, Wallsend, Old Lambton, New Lambton, Waratah, Hetton, Ferndale, Wickham and Bullock Island, A. A. Company, Newcastle, and Burwood Collieries.

In proceeding north-west and west from the present faces, a roll or pinch-up may be occasionally expected, but I do not think it of much importance. The rolling-stock, as far as it goes, appears in good repair, but in order to ensure success and a larger output, additional waggons will be required. Additional skips will also be required for underground purposes.

It should be borne in mind that good railway trucks are always in demand by the various colliery owners in the district at a good rental. The demand for the Borehole seam at present is something enormous, and as a common sequence a fair share of the trade must fall to the lot of Maryville. It is also a proverbially known fact that the Borehole small yields a greater profit at all the collieries than the round screened coal.

The fracture in the coal appears to lie about parallel with the cleavage in the floor, i.e., nearly horizontal, and I fail to observe any of that vertical fracture in the coal which is so indicative of brittleness, and which was the case near the winding shaft; so that upon the whole the prospects before the shareholders appear good.

The output at present (having so recently put down the air shaft, and effected the intersection with the main shaft) is about sixty tons per day, exclusive of small coal, and, I may add, daily increasing, so that I see no difficulty, within a short space of time, of working three to four hundred tons per day, ex small, for many years to come, provided additional rolling-stock be at once provided.

JOHN THOMAS,
Mining Engineer and Coal Viewer for the Victorian Government.
Newcastle, N. S. W., May 5, 1888.

Mr. Thomas' suggestions as to the increase of rolling-stock have been fully acted upon since the date of his report, and the mine, as before stated, is now thoroughly equipped.

VALUABLE TESTIMONIES.

Originals may be seen at THE PALACE EMPORIUM, HAYMARKET.

THE OLD MAN'S TESTIMONY:

"With withered locks and tresses grey, he wandered on his aged way. Was old, but 'cute. Had known the colony for over 70 years. Had seen flour at a crown a pound and the commonest necessities of life unprocurable. Had attended sales and auctions by the score for a period of 50 years, and remembered the good old days when he was hale and strong, and could earn his pound a day, but never saw anything for good luck and cheap stuff like
THE GREAT GIFT SALE
AT THE PALACE EMPORIUM."

THE OLD WOMAN'S TESTIMONY:

"Was the mother of 16, the grandmother of 90, the great grandmother, as far as she knew, of as many more, and the stay and comfort of the last witness. Knew a good thing when she saw it, and though not good at arithmetic was aware of how many beans made five. Had made hundreds of garments of flannel and calico in her time, and knew the value of the stuff as near as no matter. Had made her old man's clothes in the old days, and on a pinch had patched up his boots. But it did not pay since ANTHONY HORDERN and SONS took the matter in hand and brought down prices. Never in her born days, never since she commenced the study and practice of turning one shilling into two, had she come across anything like
THE GREAT GIFT SALE
AT THE PALACE EMPORIUM."

THE YOUNG MAN'S TESTIMONY:

"Was a working man. Always had been. Got his bread by the sweat of his brow, and enjoyed it accordingly. Never joined the unemployed. Couldn't see the necessity. Always earned good wages, and believed that a contented lot was a continual feast. Bought everything at ANTHONY HORDERN and SONS', from his Sunday suit to the tools of his trade. Did so because it paid best, and left plenty for other uses. Liked nice clothes. Couldn't work with bad tools to save his life, and that's why he bought those he wanted where he did. Was certain he saved a pound or two during the past few days by taking advantage of
THE GREAT GIFT SALE
AT THE PALACE EMPORIUM."

THE YOUNG WOMAN'S TESTIMONY:

"Was the eldest of eight. Sweet seventeen, but didn't like to say so. Considered good-looking, but didn't believe it. Joe thought so, but Joe was such a fool. Liked finery, and had a fancy for new ribbons and laces. Joe knew it, and also that if he wished to continue in favour he must now and then show an inclination in the direction of presents and kid gloves. Doted on the Palace Emporium. Considered it the most delightful place in creation, after church, of course. Always bought everything there, and had advised Joe to do the same. Joe did, for more than one good reason. Had been to the Palace a good deal more than usual lately; so had Joe, and the attraction was
THE GREAT GIFT SALE
AT THE PALACE EMPORIUM."

THE INFANT'S TESTIMONY:

"Couldn't talk. Hoped to soon. The first words would be 'Anthony Hordern and Sons,' and the next, 'Palace Emporium, Haymarket.' Gave evidence by proxy. Cried frequently. Howled occasionally. Utterly unmanageable at times. Always well-behaved at the Palace Emporium. Such lovely toys. Remembered last Christmas, and the lollies and the biscuits at the Palace. Can't remember longer—wasn't here. Hoped there would be some this year as well. Wore little frocks and frilled drawers. Liked those bought at the Palace best, because they were made well and looked nice. Intended to buy trousers there when the time came to wear the breeches. Have often heard mother and father talk about Anthony Hordern's, say they are grand folks, and ought to be supported. Mother and father are both nuts on
THE GREAT GIFT SALE
AT THE PALACE EMPORIUM."

THE HOUSEKEEPER'S TESTIMONY:

"Have kept an hotel, also a boarding-house. Made money in both. Am retired and living on my honest gains. Been 50 years in Sydney, and never went anywhere else for anything but to Anthony Hordern and Sons. Remember the little shop that used to be, and am pleased they have got on so well, and have built such handsome stores. They deserve it. When in business saved many five-pound notes by buying there, and always got what was wanted, whether it was a saucepan or a reel of cotton. When the eldest girl was married, her wedding outfit came from the Palace Emporium, and for three months afterwards it was the talk of the town. Have been a dozen times to

THE LARGEST ILLUSTRATED WEEKLY NEWSPAPER PUBLISHED IN AUSTRALASIA.

THE ISSUE FOR JULY 14
contains, amongst other illustrations, the following:—

ILLUSTRATIONS TO THE STORY "MR. MEESON'S WILL."

SKETCHES IN AND AROUND ROCKHAMPTON.

The capital of the central district of Queensland has during the past few years undergone one of the most remarkable transformations that has ever happened to any Australian city. Just when it appeared to be on the brink of ruin, as a consequence of a prolonged drought, the now famous Mount Morgan Mine startled the world with its riches, and gave new life and a fresh impetus to the town. We quite recently gave a view of the very beautiful river on which Rockhampton is built, viz., the Fitzroy, and now we present our readers with a series of sketches, which will afford some idea of what the town is like. Amongst them are:—

Trickett's Hotel
A Holiday Resort at Yeppoon
The Queensland National Bank
The National School for Boys
View Looking Across Rockhampton
View of the Finishing Course on the Fitzroy
The Fitzroy Bridge
A View of Yeppoon.

THE QUEEN'S VISIT TO BERLIN.

Whilst Her Majesty Queen Victoria was at Berlin recently, prior to the death of Emperor Frederick, she expressed a wish to see the famous regiment of the Gardes du Corps, and accordingly a parade was held. Our illustration shows the troops defiling past Her Majesty and the Royal Family at quick march. It is a fine animated sketch of this military display.

MR. MEESON'S WILL.

The interest in the pictures accompanying this wonderful story, by Rider Haggard, keeps pace with that of the story itself. The narrative has reached a very exciting stage. The steamer on board of which Augusta Smithers and Mr. Meeson are going to New Zealand collides with a whaler, and sinks, nearly all hands perishing. The catastrophe and its appalling incidents are illustrated in a very beautiful full-page engraving. The Kangaroo (s.) is seen slowly, very slowly, amidst the hideous and despairing shrieks of the doomed wretches on board, plunging down into the measureless deeps.

Three or four other illustrations accompany the story.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. Page Wood stated publicly in court that Dr. J. Collis Browne was undoubtedly the inventor of Chlorodyne, that the whole story of the defendant Freeman was deliberately untrue, and he regretted to say it had been sworn to.—Times, July 13, 1864.

Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne.—The Right Hon. Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians and J. T. Davenport that he had received information to the effect that the only remedy of any service in cholera was Chlorodyne.—See Lancet, December 31, 1864.

Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne "is prescribed by scores of orthodox practitioners. Of course it would not be thus singularly popular did it not 'supply a want and fill a place.'"—Medical Times, January 13, 1886.

FOR GENERAL USE IN PLACE OF SUGAR.
SACCHARIN.
One Pound equals about 280lb. of Cane Sugar.

One of the chief uses of SACCHARIN will be in the enrichment of the diet of those persons who are forbidden the use of sugar, and who will now be able to enjoy a sweet flavouring in the various articles of diet formerly denied them. It is particularly applicable to those suffering from diabetes, gout, rheumatism, dyspepsia, obesity, and liver complaints, or any form of disease where the use of sugar is objectionable. It cannot "create acidity," as sugar often does, since it is non-fermenting and antiseptic—characteristics of very great importance.

THE OLDEST and MOST EFFECTUAL COUGH REMEDY.

"H.M. Gunboat, Netley, Wick, Scotland.

"Dear Sir,—Having had a most distressing and severe cough, which caused me many sleepless nights and restless days, I was recommended by his lordship the Earl of Caithness to try your most invaluable Balsam of Aniseed, and I can assure you with the first dose I found immediate relief, even without having to suspend my various duties, and the first small bottle completely cured me; therefore, I have the greatest confidence in fully recommending it to the million.

IMITATIONS.

Only articles possessing some special and acknowledged excellence are worth imitating; and thus, induced by the unprecedented success of Powell's Balsam of Aniseed, dishonest traders with reckless audacity have tried to pass off on the public utterly worthless imitations, or to offer a "Balsam" of their own crude compounding. In order, therefore, to protect the public against such fraudulent imitations the well-known Trade Mark—"Lion, Net, and Mouse"—is conspicuously printed on the wrapper of every bottle of Powell's Balsam of Aniseed, and any imitation of the same is forgery, and a breach of the law relating to Trade Marks.

POWELL'S BALSAM of ANISEED.

The following letter has been received by Mr. T. Powell, from William Boards, Esq., an eminent agriculturist and land agent, residing at "Nightingale Hall, Edmonton.

"Dear Sir,—I have recently suffered much from a most violent cough, proceeding from a tickling in my chest, which no remedy out of many I resorted to could allay. My head was constantly aching, and my whole frame was entirely shaken. Having seen the good effects of your Balsam of Aniseed in several members of my family, I purchased a small bottle, and when going to bed at night took a teaspoonful in two tablespoonfuls of water just warm. The effect was immediate; it arrested the tickling in my chest. I slept well, and arose perfectly restored in the morning, with the exception of debility arising from fatigue by incessant coughing for some days previous. My cough entirely left, and has never returned. Having since heard of a lady in the neighbourhood who for a long time had laboured under a most distressing cough, and who had resorted to every remedy within her knowledge, I sent the remainder of the bottle to her, and that long-standing, obstinate, and (as she thought) incurable cough was perfectly cured.—I am, dear sir, yours very truly,

CAUTION TO PURCHASERS.

The value of this well-known Family Medicine has been largely tested in all parts of the world, and by all grades of society, for upwards of FIFTY YEARS. Its well-earned extensive sale has induced SPURIOUS IMITATIONS, some of which in OUTWARD APPEARANCE so closely resemble the original as to have deceived many purchasers. The proprietor therefore feels it due to the public to give a special caution against the use of such imitations.

Purchasers are therefore requested carefully to observe the four following distinctive characteristics, without which none are genuine:—

1. In every case the words JOHN STEEDMAN, Chemist Walworth, Surrey, are engraved on the Government stamp affixed to EACH PACKET.
2. Each SINGLE POWDER has directions for the dose, and the words "John Steedman, chemist, Walworth, Surrey," printed thereon.

WOMAN'S COLUMN.

THE AMIABLE WOMAN.

Olivia Kennyfeck, we are told, had been taught by her French teachers to be aimable, but, as understood by them, the word came nearer our "fascinating" than our homely "amiable" (the Latin derivative being synonymous with the Saxon "loveable"); and, if Olivia did not so practically translate it, the domestic outlook for the Rev. Mr. Jones—whom, descending from all her schemes of brilliant conquest, she had finally accepted—was dubious indeed. "What I most prize in woman," says Longfellow, "is her affections, not her intellect." Thus, according to him, a shrewish Aspasia might be admired but never loved, and pondering the question as one of those daily confronting us, we are led to ask—What is it, then, this amiability, lacking which woman cannot be what, from the halcyon bowers of Eden to the sorrow-stained homes of all succeeding time, a kind and compensating Providence has intended that she should be? Certainly not what the preceptors of Olivia Kennyfeck had inculcated; scarcely what poets and romancers have impersonated for us. Enveloped in a cloud of hazy sweetness, their creations strike us, for the most part, as holding up an unattainable standard, and is too unreal to claim affinity with beings of the work-a-day world. And why so unreal? Cannot they, who have the power of drawing, draw from life? "Ay, there's the rub!" With many marked and admirable exceptions, the Lares, we know well, have not been propitious to the literary hearth. Have writers, then, seeking solace in the realms of fancy, been too fond of giving us some Egeria whom—only because they did not know her well enough—they have invested with all angelic virtues—some Beatrice, seen through the veil of youthful imaginings, while the homelier Gemma could inspire no lofty song, furnish food for no poetic fire? And have they, too, not seldom, absorbed in the phantoms of their far-off dreamlands, forgot to guard the treasure close at hand, and then, awakening to wonder that it was not there, have limned the opposite of that their own neglect has made? Wordsworth indeed, one notable exception, has given us:—

> "The creature not too bright or good
> For human nature's daily food," in words so sweet and true, that they may find an echo everyday in households counted by the hundred; and we have Pope's not impossible

> "Mistress of herself tho' china fall."

But these are generic descriptions, not personifications. We fear—all beautiful as she is—to lay rash hands on Dickens's Agnes, yet who ever met her in real life? We can believe in Betsy Trotwood, with the rough eccentricities covering the kind heart, but Agnes—an ideal idealised—what touch of human frailty, what infirmity of temper renders her akin to the amiable woman of everyday life, for whom we shall look in vain, too, in the prim Harriet Byron, or among the heroines of Maria Edgeworth, with their severely well-regulated minds? Of the latter, indeed, it may be said, as Samuel Daniel said of his "Philosophical Observer," that they

> ——"of such a height hath built their minds,
> And reared the dwelling of their thoughts so high,
> That neither hope nor fear can shake the strength
> Of their resolvéd powers."

But the day of Richardson was the day of small things in the English novel, and like all first attempts at art, his drawings, when he would give us a model man or woman—see the priggish Grandison and his Harriet—are stiff and crude, yet both to him and to Maria Edgworth belongs the merit, long awarded to them, of trying to rob vice of the charms with which venal writers had sought to hide it, and to make virtue attractive. Of Moore's Alethe—that fancy passing fair—we can but feel, with Alciphron, that "her very perfections but widen the distance between us." Yet Moore had his own Bessy, whose likeness he might have preserved for us. The shrew of fiction is hardly less exaggerated. She seldom wears company manners, and her salient characteristic, as in Petruchio's Katherine and the mother-in-law of Clive Newcome, is always on show. Katherine, it is true, was soon tamed under Petruchio's judicious training; but if the play really was Shakespeare's (for it is questioned as being partly Fletcher's or some other's), her reformation was much too rapidly achieved to have been believed in as practically possible by that profound observer himself, in whose personal identity—in him of the wondrous forehead, whose dust sleeps quietly by the classic Avon—we are utterly persuaded not to disbelieve; and we can fancy him smiling quietly as he wrote of the "awful rule and right supremacy" established in the case in point. Surely Milton must have been comparing notes when he gave that startlingly unorthodox definition of the vicarial piety incumbent on a wife, "He for God only, she for God in him." Speaking of scolds, one can scarce, even at the risk of rambling and being recalled sharply to the main argument, avoid a parenthetical mention of the typical Xantippe. It is easy to give a dog an ill name. Was hers too inconsiderately bestowed? If it be true that Socrates—away up in cloudland, no doubt—made it a rule to be late for dinner, was there not some excuse for her? Housekeepers, reply.

It must be admitted that it is difficult for authors to paint after the pre-Raphaelite school, and show things just as they are. They must concentrate, must epitomise, and make the long speech in blank verse and the tirade in prose often do duty for looks and tones and manner, which go so far to make up the real person. Perhaps one of the most life-like portraitures ever executed by any great master is Walter Scott's Jeanie Deans.

Let us conclude, then, that we do not often, in books, recognise that amiable woman who—the world were a wilderness else—we often meet. In many forms, in all conditions, but always (may her tribe increase!) with the same strong family likeness. And where? In the spirit so monotonously humble that the subdued tones never vary, and "temper" seems non-existent. Occasion may arise when the sleeping waters will be stirred, and meek spitefulness take the place of meek submission. But conscience chides for using the adjective according to a too common parlance. What word is more frequently abused? We are apt to forget that the meekest of our race was one to whom true genius had taught true humility, one in whom met the lofty qualities of mind combined with all the culture of his times; too apt to forget that we have a still higher example of its real meaning.

In her perhaps whose temper a husband pronounces faultless? Without being two-faced, it is quite possible to have two faces; and that turned with uniform sweetness to him may not be the same always on view to servants, dependents, and general outsiders. Why should he be so highly favoured, and they bear all the brunt? Has the thing its root in vanity, constraining her for vanity's sake to be pleasing in his eyes, while all the rest may fare as they may? Alas, for the metaphysics of this poor human heart! No, we will not collect the suffrages of the husbands. In her then with whom the current of outward life runs so smoothly, that she may well reflect its unruffled surface on all around? Why should she not be amiable on whom "honour, love, obedience, troops of friends" wait as daily handmaids? Even, with all these, however, she is not invariably a pleasing person to deal with, but they conduce to the condition which is not easy of attainment under all circumstances: not always a simple, natural, and easy thing to return the quiet, self-contained answer—or no answer at all—to the cutting gibe or the undeserved imputation; to veil the workings of the sensitively wounded spirit, and carry the serene front through a cold, ungenial atmosphere; to be armed at all points, and ever mindful that those who evoke the "temper" are the readiest to comment on its appearance, and to forget that the more honest and open the nature is, the less will it be able to conceal, under a specious impassibility, the slights it feels so keenly. Amiability, like other virtues, having its snare, and a reputation for it being often procured at the expense of sincerity. And where, then, shall we find the truly amiable woman duly qualified to bear the name? She is no Egerian abstraction, no Beatrice dwelling amid sainted intellectualities, in some far-off starry sphere, but a creature of common mould, walking in the common ways of life, whose loving nature shows itself in loving actions to all around; who owns no pariahs in the circle which her large, sweet soul takes in, for it is like the pavilion of Eastern fable, and expands illimitably to all who seek its shelter; whose smile is not a mere play of feature, but shines from out the heart within; whose tongue is readier to bind up than to inflict a wound; who may not be the remarkable person described in the old Interlude as never having been seen out of temper in her life, and the magic mirror of the old tale, if held before her, might not, it may well chance, come away with its polished surface all undimmed; she may be quick to feel and quick to speak, yet in her steadfast kindness we may always trust, because, like Mrs. Primrose's wedding gown, she wears well. Of her sympathy, joying in our joys and sorrowing in our sorrows, we are always sure; she loves through all change, and though not faultless, even when she is in fault we can love her still. Such as she, thank God! we often meet—meet her in the glory of her prime, in her chastened middle years, in the wrinkled front of her calm old age, in maid and in wife, in mother and in widow; forecast her in the baby-girl who greets all comers with her innocent smile. And the character is within the reach of all; to some indeed easier than to others, for sweet temper is like greatness, inasmuch as some are born to it. The good fairy has stood by the cradle, and gifted the happy infant there and then. Like it too inasmuch as some, through hard wrestling with the enemy within, achieve it; unlike it in the respect that it is never thrust upon us, yet withal a thing which, honestly striven for, may be won; beyond doubt a thing worth striving for.

There is one woman to whom—though shy, reticent, even verging, it may be, upon melancholy, and with few engaging graces—we will not deny the title which forms the key-note of our subject, although to casual eyes she may not seem to merit it. The contracted look, the constrained air, the wrinkles which early in middle life may seam her face, and are set down by them as the indications of sour ill-humour, are read by the more practised observer as the lines of suffering; they can divine—perhaps with vision quickened by the freemasonry of sorrow—that salt tears and carking cares have worn those furrows; that the shadows in the heavy eyes are the shadows of heavy crosses; that here life has shown its darker side. Such an one was Mary Ann Ainley, whom Caroline Helstone, crushing down her own sharp pain the while, went to comfort and to cheer. A writer, speaking of the Duchesse d'Angoulême, daughter of the unfortunate Louis Seize, described her, in her old age, as sour and gloomy-looking. It may have been so, yet we could not read the words without a throb of indignation. May we not well ask if it was not grief which had stamped that look upon her face—grief which had overwhelmed her when she was just old enough to forbid of its ever passing away as a childish, troubled dream. The fury of that raging mob—those parting scenes, that long, lonely captivity in the Temple prison—the bitterness of that hour when, the first relenting of her gaolers showing itself in permitting the visit of an old and early friend, she learnt from her the completeness of her desolation—learnt that her mother and her aunt had followed her father to the scaffold, that her cherished boy-brother had perished still more cruelly. Were not these things enough to chase, for ever, the brightness from her face? The capacity for suffering inherent in earnest natures only proves, by analogy, their capacity for joy; and happiness, when it comes to them, is felt with a force and an intensity impossible to lighter minds. Therefore let us be careful how we stigmatise as ill-natured, or dull and uninteresting, those whose garments smell of the furnace they have passed through. We are not ignorant that there are the happy few who, "triumphant over pain," emerge from that furnace serene, strengthened, and strength-giving; but there are the many who do not, but bear about them the cruel marks of martyrdom. Oh, women, on whom fortune has showered many gifts, you whom sorrow may have touched, but not stricken to the core, is there not something here for you to do, some kindness to show which may soothe, and solace, and revivify? It is in deeds like these that the loving woman shows most lovable, and when we see her so fulfilling her peculiar, her divinest mission, our hearts rise up to do her reverence.

EXHIBITION OF WOMEN'S INDUSTRIES AND CENTENARY FAIR.

In the list of departments into which the forthcoming Exhibition of Women's Industries is divided horticulture and the fine arts are last named. Of the former some particulars have already been given, and the latter demands prompt attention, owing to the awards offered in certain sections, and the time necessary for preparing the work for competition.

The committee, in their classification, were doubtless right in placing those essential arts in women's training—a knowledge of needlework and domestic industries, at the head of their departments; but talent is distributed in divers ways, and it is quite possible for a girl to have a true eye for the beautiful in nature, and to acquire the skill of reproducing it with or without a corresponding sense and appreciation of the useful. As, moreover, all are not equally endowed it is quite right to give to each opportunities of displaying their skill; and it is the duty of the committee to recognise the advances made in the last few years in the education of women, and to encourage them to aim at excellence in the higher walks of art.

For the department of fine arts the delegate is Mrs. James R. Fairfax (the hon. secretary) and Miss Montefiore, Oak Lodge, Trelawney-street, Woollahra. The names of both ladies have long been associated in connection with the progress of art in the colony. The departmental circular divides the work into six sections; the first includes painting in oil and water colours on canvas, paper, and other fabrics, and embraces portrait, fan, and all varieties of card painting, also painting on china, glass, and wood and panels, pastels and illuminating. The second section comprises all drawings in pencil, crayon, pen and ink, charcoal, &c., etching and mapping. The third is for designs architectural, ecclesiastical, and decorative; the fourth is devoted to models in clay, terra cotta or wax, with inlaid work. The fifth embraces decorative work, screens, wall decorations, brass work, carvings and fretwork, painted curtains. The sixth section is set apart for photographic work in all branches, in which many girls are engaged.

As regards coloured photographs, the delegate has received a very liberal offer from Messrs. S. Hoffnung and Co., Pitt-street, who with a view of encouraging the painting of photographs by women, as an industry especially suitable and congenial to many—and an industry for which the scenery of the colony provides abundant material, have offered a first prize of 10 guineas, a second of five, and a third of three guineas for the best three pairs of photographs painted in water colours. The donors, through Mr. A. Hoffnung, suggested that the portraits of his Excellency the Governor, and the Lady Carrington would be the most suitable and popular for the purpose. This suggestion was made known to Lord and Lady Carrington, who, at the request of the delegate, gave a special sitting to Messrs. Charlemont et Cie. for portraits 15 x 12, taken expressly for the purpose. The negatives are very satisfactory, and in a few days will be ready for competitors, and copies supplied free of cost. Girls and women intending to compete must apply at the office of the Exhibition, 4, Moore-street, for an order for copies, and will be required to sign a prepared form, stating that they require the photographs for competition. All portraits so painted, including those which obtain the prizes, will belong to the committee, and will be sold by Mrs. Hoffning in her stall at the Centenary Fair. Messrs. Charlemont have supplemented Mr. Hoffning's liberality by presenting the negatives and a number of photographs. The committee of this department have decided to classify all competitors in three divisions—professional artists, amateurs, and pupils. The days when school girls were allowed to measure landscapes with scraps of paper from drawing-book copies, and pass off the results, when touched by the teacher, as works of art, are happily gone by; or, if such practices are still in force, the committee will not reward the efforts with a prize; for meritorious copies, certificates will be given, but excepting for freehand drawing and china painting, prizes will be awarded for original work only. The department offer silver and bronze medals in the several classes for first and second prizes, and certificates for third in order of merit, but as a rule no prize will be given unless there are at least three competitors in the class.

In addition to the departmental prizes the delegate has already received many donations for special prizes, including two from Lady Darley, each value £5, one for the best head painted from life in water colours, the second for the best painting of flowers from nature, open to amateur competitors; from Mrs. W. Cooper a handsome prize for the best fan, open to amateurs only; from Mrs. Eric Mackay, a travelling cloak, for painting on satin; from Mrs. Henry Garrett, a prize for the best charcoal drawing from nature; from Miss Phillips, Clergy Daughters' School, for the best drawing from the round, open to girls under 16, and for the best drawing from life of a part of the human form. Miss Fairfax also gives a prize in this class, and one for card-painting. Mr. Fairfax gives three sums of £5 for prizes to professional, amateur, and pupil artists, viz., £3 for the best landscape in water colours in each class, and £2 for the best model of a figure or bust in each class.

A list of the departmental prizes appears in the advertising columns this day, and gives ample inducement to all girls and women to enter the ranks of competitors; and there will be opportunities for the sale as well as the exhibition of their works.

The fortnightly meeting of the Waverley committee for the promotion of the Exhibition of Women's Industries and Centenary Fair, to be held in the Exhibition Building, Prince Alfred Park, during the month of October next, was held at the Waverley Council-chambers yesterday afternoon. Mrs. J. Moss occupied the chair, and about 20 other ladies were present. The report of the needlework committee was received and showed great improvement, many gifts being promised towards the section set apart for domestic industry. The branch delegate of the educational portion, Miss M'Kenny, stated that she had great difficulty in obtaining workers for her department, owing to the trained nurses' time being so occupied that they found it unable to give their services. A large number of exhibits were entered for the fine arts competition, for which several prizes are to be given. The finances are at present at a very low ebb, and after the incidental expenses for the current month had been deducted, a very small balance indeed was left. After some routine business had been transacted, the meeting adjourned till next Friday week.

THE LADIES' DRESSMAKING ASSOCIATION.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—No society has ever been launched into public life whose success has been more ardently prayed, more joyfully hoped, and more secretly sighed for than the abovementioned society, which was started not quite three months ago. It was supposed to be a genuine philanthropic undertaking meant to benefit largely and permanently that class of our poorer sisters who, although possessed of the highest attainments and refined accomplishments, are either through want of experience and training, or other reasons, debarred from obtaining a livelihood through the ordinary channel, namely, that of teaching, &c. I mean "the distressed gentlewomen," a class of poor ladies who are deserving so well of our kindly support and helping hand; who, through no fault of their own, have suddenly lost, in the bitter adversities of life, their happy homes—such homes as affluence and thorough refinement of manners only can make, finding themselves now friendless, helpless, almost homeless and hopeless, utterly weighed down with the heavy, unaccustomed burden of daily cares and troubles, and with the gloomy view of a sorrowful and friendless future before them.

It was, therefore, a most praiseworthy effort on the part of three or four ladies, well known in Sydney society, who started, three months ago, the Ladies' Dressmaking Association with the object of opening a new field for the employment of gentlewomen, for whose sole benefit the business of that society was to be conducted. The working members had to consent to work gratis for the first month from 9 a.m. till 5 p.m. daily, with half-an-hour for luncheon, and also to pay one guinea each as entrance fee, the salary to commence with the second month. The ladies, it is needless to say, gave their guineas cheerfully, although some of them, no doubt, found it extremely difficult to raise that sum, and had, therefore, to fall back upon a kind friend; or, lacking this—for we all know that when adversities appear our friends generally disappear—had to raise on valuable trifles the funds with which to pay not only the necessary guinea, but also a whole month's tram and train fares. However, there they were. They all paid their guineas cheerfully, worked on hopefully, with a light heart, and the heavy weight of cares from off their shoulders, for the second month, with its remunerative and steady employment, would soon arrive. The second month came, and with it results both astonishing and heartrending, especially to those who had calculated upon it as the termination of their earthly troubles. Some were told that the society had to dispense with their services; but, at the same time, would permit them staying on as long as they pleased, but without any remuneration whatsoever. Others seem to have had their time and work valued at so much per week's tram-fares, which the society was willing to pay for them, but nothing beyond it; whilst the most lucky and, I suppose, the most "efficient" ones were offered the magnificent salary of from 5s. to 10s per week, out of which they would have to pay their own tram or train fares.

These results are indeed most extraordinary and unaccountable, and everyone, I think, will sympathise with the poor ladies who have lost not only their valuable time, but their infinitely more valuable money, in needless travelling expenses, &c.

The Ladies' Dressmaking Association has been most successful, the total receipts for the three months being over £200. How is it, then, that these unfortunate ladies have been treated so bad? In fact, their treatment has been worse than that of Tom Hood's famous seamstress in his immortal "Song of the Shirt." I am, &c.,

CHIVALRY.

THE LITERARY PROFESSION IN FRANCE.

(From the Daily News.)

Not long ago a patriarchal writer in Macmillan's Magazine obliged the town with his opinion of literature as a profession. His remarks were in the spirit of the Frenchman who, speaking of the tree of knowledge, said that literature "was a good branch—to hang oneself from." Mr. Theodore Child, in the new Atlantic Monthly, rather gives the impression that the branch is a branch laden with golden fruits "a-top of the topmost bough." But Mr. Child is talking of literature in France. He gives figures which make the British literary man of all work regret that "he is an Englishman." The regret is vain, for Mr. Child says that a French critic looking through our journals remarked "How well informed they all are, and what a want of talent." The French reader does not want information, say about licensing, he wants diversion. It appears that our authors could not give them diversion, so there are no temptations to belong to other nations. Yet the French author is a lucky being. He has the Société des Gens de Lettres to tackle publishers and managers for him, and to screw up his prices as far as possible. This commercial activity is repugnant to many an author, who, however, probably does not mind having the bargain struck for him by a society. The newspapers make fortunes and reputations for novelists, article writers, and tellers of short and usually "gentleman's" stories. The ladies in one of Thackeray's novels always left the dining-room when Sir John began to tell the story of the Bagman. But in France the story of the Bagman (commis-voyageur) is being told every day and every week in the Gil Blas and La Vie Parisienne. The refined M. Armande Silvestre and the high-souled Gyp tell the stories, and nymphs listen, as well as satyrs. A smoking-room anecdote is the germ; it is padded out with pessimism and style by M. Guy de Maupassant, with broad jests by M. Armande Silvestre, with feminine subtleties by the good and great Gyp, and these renowned authors are paid large sums a line; not perhaps exactly "half-a-crown a line," like Sir Walter Scott. Next the tales are collected in neat volumes, and a sale of 50,000 copies may await the volume, even before it is illustrated by the last blottesque process. Naturally authors wax wealthy in France, even if they do not dramatise their inventions.

The mere literary character thus flourishes like the wicked man, because the French are not exclusively devoted to politics. Even during the Presidential election, Mr. Child says, the popular newspapers did not cut down their novels and their anecdotes. The Frenchman thinks it is possible to have enough of political reading. Six columns of a speech without a new fact or argument in it does not seem to him so desirable as an instalment of M. Xavier de Montépin's new tale, or a gentleman's story by Théo Critt. Thus the author has his chance; he is not shelved for a discourse by M. Floquet. Consequently, M. Xavier de Montépin, it seems, becomes wealthy beyond the dreams of British novelists. Successful French authors are of two kinds, the literary and artistic, and the mere popular. Of the first kind is M. Paul Bourget. His irreproachable natural want of interest is enlivened by little adventures of an astonishingly "intimate" character. Infamous persons in some of his pages behave infamously, "with pleasing circumstances of good taste," as the dog in De Quincey's essay committed a murder on another dog. These combinations, accompanied with moral reflections, and fastidiously written, are very fashionable. But the good Xavier de Montépin is not criticised at all. "The French critic, being a man of letters, a personality, an artist, would not demean his pen by reviewing a work by Montépin." But M. Xavier does not care. He applauds himself when he rakes in the dollars. Last year he was to receive 30 cents a line from the Petit Journal, with a percentage in proportion to the increase of the circulation which his novel might secure. The percentage went up to 60 cents a line, and then the author got £2400 for the right to republish in a cheap weekly, while another publisher bought the privilege of producing the books. Nobody who has found M. de Montépin help him through many an hour of tedium, of illness, of travel, will grudge the author all his golden gains. With M. Xavier de Montépin you are morally safe, if a person of mature age. Your sympathies are never asked for erring angels, or passionate young poets who happen to be cads. No, the villain is a villain out and out. There is not one spot of light in his character. He happens to learn that a man is travelling from Marseilles to Paris with a fortune in his pocket. He kills him in a railway carriage, and throws the heroine (aged 16) out of the window because she happened to come in just after the murder. Later—for she is rescued by the hero—he throws her into a canal. When she comes out again, with cataract, he, being an eye-doctor, means to operate on her so as to blind her effectually. But there is a heaven above us, and in spite of forging, murdering, bearing false witness, the villain is baffled, and all virtuous characters marry, and inherit large fortunes. It is a regular gallery piece, and combined with astonishing ingenuity and candour. There is a miraculous coincidence in every chapter. There are six volumes, and there might just as easily be 60, and all the time (except a slight affection for raffishness) M. Xavier de Montépin, is on the side of kindness, of courage, of youth, of first love. There is no style at all, and the heroine is invariably abducted; but, through perils by water, steel, and fire, she comes harmless to the altar at last. The French critic may be too good and great to review M. de Montépin, but the great public loves him even better than M. Ohnet. There is no pretence about the former; he does not pose for a genius.

Of course, the case of M. Xavier de Montépin is an exception. Reading his novels is like seeing Mr. Bonnor hit. It looks as if anyone could do it. Probably almost any man with a pen could turn out quite respectable Montépinisms to any extent. They would not be of the very first water, not of the master's best, but, signed with his name, they would spell wealth. Now nobody but M. Guy de Maupassant could write his things, and the same may be said of all the other authors who are artists. They all seem to have discovered treasures at the bottom of the ink-bottle, and even the mere writer of articles, if they are liked by the public, may easily make £2000 a year. He may also get into the Academy, and wear a green swallow-tailed coat with gold embroidery, and probably a patent place will be found for him somewhere. M. Henri Fouquier gets £1200 a year for writing two weekly articles in a newspaper. M. Jules Claretie has soared to heights of lucrative respectability which actually do not exist in the world of English letters. And what is M. Claretie? Not a very witty or learned man, not an original genius, merely a versatile and industrious wielder of the grey goose-quill. As to men like M. Alphonse Daudet—who, with respect be it said, has made novel-writing a form of society journalism—they are sure of £4000 for any romance they care to publish. Happy France, happy Frenchmen, where it actually pays as well to be a diverting penman as it pays in England to be a dull, diligent barrister, not to mention the added pleasures of renown.

REVIEWS.

Correspondence of Henry Taylor. Edited by EDWARD DOWDEN. Longmans, Green, and Co., London and New York. 1888.

As might naturally be expected, this collection from the correspondence of the author of "Philip Van Artevelde" is of a highly interesting nature. The first letter in the volume before us is from Wordsworth to Sir Henry Taylor, and is dated 1823; and the remaining correspondence covers the whole of the subsequent eventful period, extending to 1885. With the most prominent of the literary and political characters filling the stage during this period Sir Henry Taylor was on terms of greater or less familiarity. With Southey in the early part of his life he was in constant correspondence, as any reader of the former poet's life and correspondence will remember, and of Southey's poetical powers he had a strangely exalted opinion, placing him upon an equality with Wordsworth, an estimate which the sounder judgment of the public has long since pronounced extravagant. Indeed, Sir Henry Taylor himself exhibits symptoms of having undergone that penalty which almost invariably attaches to so long a literary life, of seeing the golden images of his youthful admiration ruthlessly put down from their elevation by the succeeding generation, and those which he thought of brass elevated into their places. The natural effect of this—a distrust of the worth of his own powers of appreciation—is perceptible in his letters to his latest poet—correspondent, Mr. Swinburne, where he feelingly alludes to himself as too old to offer an opinion of any worth on matters of poetical criticism. The judgments of his earlier life, which he imagined solid and permanent to face the rush of time for ages, he had seen reversed in the compass of his own life, and there was certainly enough cause for bewilderment to the strongest watcher who had been privileged to observe the rapid march of literature in taste and production, from the days when Southey was laureate to those which felt the fire in the swinging verse of Swinburne. "What a half-century has passed since first I knew you—how towering amidst its fellows," wrote Gladstone to Sir Henry Taylor in 1883, and a scrutiny of the names of the prominent actors in that half-century which appear in the correspondence of the author of Van Artevelde will of itself bear out Mr. Gladstone's brief and characteristic commentary upon its exceptional activity.

Sir Henry Taylor's letters are models of simple, clear, and eloquent English. The writer rather plumed himself upon his letter-writing, somewhat ingenuously confessing that he often devoted as much time to a single letter as he did to the composition of an ode or sonnet. The letters show their author manly, upright, and affectionate, with a keen perception of the duties and a deep sense of the sadness of life; but to us they are chiefly valuable for the glimpses they afford of those of his contemporaries into whose lives his exceptional opportunities enabled him to gain a more than ordinarily familiar insight. These were mainly literary men, for though Sir Henry Taylor's excursions into politics are marked by keen and profound judgment, yet, on account of the absorbing literary bent of his mind, these were few, and, as a consequence, Mr. Gladstone was almost his sole political correspondent. But to borrow an adjective of De Quincey, who, by the way, finds little favour with Sir Henry Taylor, the orbicular nature of Mr. Gladstone's powers makes him almost as interesting a character in literature as in politics, and it was mainly through his literary efforts that he corresponded with Sir Henry Taylor. Of Gladstone Sir Henry had the greatest estimate. When someone wrote to him placing Gladstone below Palmerston he replied:—"I am much surprised at learning that you would put the latter above the former in any capacity except that of tactician. I should put him down, down, below, 'full fathoms five.' The mind of the one seems to me a sort of ocean in which the other's mind might duck and dive and frisk unobserved." Speaking of a visit to Coleridge, at that time suffering severe illness, Sir Henry Taylor wrote: "One heard from him, however, things which could have come from no one else; not such continuous and unintermitted eloquence as I have sometimes heard from him, but the flash and outbreak of a fiery mind from time to time." "Professor Wilson," he writes, "I have always esteemed to be the most gifted of the many men who have put their talent into the pig-trough in these times, and his appearance squares with my estimate of him—a jovial, fair-haired ruffian, full of fire and talent, big and burly, and at the same time wild and animated. His forehead is one of the most lively and capacious looking foreheads that I have seen. . . . Altogether he is a remarkable person to look at, and it occurred to me that I had never seen two men, each striking in himself, whose appearance bore so much of the same moral stamp as he and O'Connell. His talk I find answerable to his looks, and well worth listening to." Of Jeffrey he received a mean impression: "One only wonders that he could ever have been considerable enough to be a curse to the literature of his times; and one only learns that the mischief which men may do bears no proportion to their means of doing anything else." Writing of Carlyle, he says: "Carlyle is in great force, full of fire and fury against everything that is in existence in the present age. He is very interesting as a specimen of a peculiar kind of character, standing out as a contrast as well as an antagonist to his day and his generation, and very admirable as possessing a peculiar kind of genius; but with all his fire and force, not conveying (I think) any portion of his sentiments into my mind, nor indeed, any very distinct impression of what he would be at. He is full of renunciations, denunciations, disavowals, and contempt of everything that is current in the opinions and proceedings of mankind; but it is difficult to understand what he would wish to substitute." Tennyson he found "a very interesting person, a singular compound of manliness and helplessness—manly in his simplicity, and I should think in his understanding also. . . . . Except Wordsworth for some 10 years of his life, I should think he is the only really popular poet since Byron. His intellect at large, though good, is not, I think, great in proportion to the imaginative and poetical elements of it; and, therefore, I do not anticipate that he will take any such place in poetry as is filled by Coleridge or Wordsworth . . ." Macaulay's "books were so wholly unattractive, so commonplace, so devoid of meaning, or animation, or grace, or shapeliness, that the best one could say of them was that there was no harm in them. . . . Even when I knew nothing of his nature, or its ardent affections, its tender emotions, its generosities and sensibilities, and recognised only his intellectual vigour and vivacity, his books always seemed to me the most impudent contradiction of himself that Nature had ever dared to throw in a man's face." A curious circumstance that Sir Henry Taylor detected was that the great Reviewer was under the impression that his face was decidedly a handsome one, describing himself once as being "sick of the picture of his own face," an illness that according to Sir Henry Taylor, the public was much more entitled to feel. The "correspondence" abounds with interesting passages such as we have quoted, and it may be noted that the editor has adopted the admirable system of placing the dramatist's letters amongst those which called them forth or replied to them, so that the volume before us is actually a "correspondence," and not merely a collection of Sir Henry Taylor's letters. An amusing anecdote illustrative of that phenomenal energy in Mr. Gladstone, which seems to indicate that he finds in variety of intellectual exercises that refreshment which other men find in complete rest, must conclude our extracts. "Gladstone was induced, by way of getting a little rest, to go on a visit of a day or two to a nephew of his who is an undermaster at Eton. The nephew was enjoined to get him to bed at 10 o'clock; but, unfortunately, Mozely's Reminiscences came up after dinner, and he talked of it until 3 o'clock in the morning, having by that time so little exhausted the subject that he said he could talk of it for three weeks longer. What could exhaust Gladstone no man knows."

Scotland and Scotsmen. From the Ochtertyre MSS. Wm. Blackwood and Sons, Edinburgh and London, 2 vols. 1888.

These volumes are compiled and edited by Mr. Alexander Allardyce from the MSS. of Mr. John Ramsay, a Scotch gentleman known to readers of the biographies of Scott and Burns as a friend of the former and a patron of the latter. They comprise the personal experiences of Mr. Ramsay among the more eminent of his acquaintances, with a sketch of the persons and the manners of his time—the latter half of the 18th century. Mr. Ramsay's own life was of a retired and peaceful description, and his part in the work of the period which he describes was altogether a social one. By far the most interesting portion of the present volume are the carefully drawn portraits of the notable men of his time. Some interesting reminiscences are given of Lord Kames, President Dundas, Lord Alemoor, Lord Monboddo, and other prominent legists of the day, many of whom dabbled in metaphysics and literature, as well as devoted themselves to obtaining a sound knowledge of law. In a series of footnotes Mr. Ramsay records numerous witticisms and satirical sayings of these men, which prove incontestably the Scotch claim to the possession of a fund of dry, keen, crackling humour unsurpassed by the best efforts of English or Irish wits. From the selections given by Mr. Ramsay it would appear, however, that there is a spice of malice in the best Scotch humour which prevents it from being altogether harmless. For instance, Lord Kames, the author of a book called the "Elements of Criticism," somewhat widely discussed in its day, met Lord Monboddo, also an aspirant for literary fame, in the street. "Well," said he to Monboddo, "Have you read my book?" "I have not, my Lord. You write a great deal faster than I am able to read," returned Monboddo. On another occasion Monboddo was expatiating on the minute beauties of the Greek language, when Lord Alemoor remarked to him, "Monboddo, that may be; but there was not an herb woman in Athens who did not know more of the matter than you." Lord Braxfield, on one occasion, hearing one of the Judges advance strange and novel legal doctrines, asked him where he had got that law. "From Lord Stair," he answered. "No, no," replied Braxfield, "that cannot be, for there is no nonsense to be found in Lord Stair." It will be observed from these extracts that a high consideration for the feelings of each other was not a pronounced characteristic of the great Scotchmen of those days. It would be an extraordinary thing for the following passage to take place to day between two eminent Judges of any bench in the civilised world. We give the incident in Mr. Ramsay's own words:—"One day, in excessive hard frost, while Lord Hailes was warming himself at the Parliament House fire, he was joined by Monboddo. "What, my Lord," said he sarcastically, "do you require artificial heat like us mere moderns?" The other looked very grim, but made no answer. On Hailes returning to his seat, Monboddo exclaimed: "Well said of him that leads the life of a bug!" The point of this remark was derived from the fact that Lord Hailes was extraordinarily apprehensive of exposing himself to anything like inclement weather, and kept himself closed up as much as was compatible with the performance of his professional duties, while, on the other hand, Monboddo delighted in the roughest and bleakest of weather. In the discussion of a point of law a certain Mr. Dalrymple, an advocate, requested from the Court the same indulgence which Cicero had met with from Cæsar when arraigning his proceedings. "Mr. Dalrymple," said President Craigie, "though you are a clever man, you must not think yourself a Cicero." "And I am sure," said the other, loud enough to be heard at the bar, "You are no Cæsar." The foregoing specimens of Scotch wit are not surpassed in the traditions either of the Irish or the English courts, and Mr. Ramsay evidently retails them with peculiar relish, albeit throughout his own composition he does not make the slightest attempt at humour. Unfortunately for the interest of the book before us, many, in fact the great majority, of those who figure in its pages have in the hundred years that have intervened since they lived passed completely out of memory, and the reader who takes a lively interest in the bulk of these pages would need to have something of the taste of an antiquarian.

Mr. Ramsay apparently studied the literature of his country with great assiduity. His critical remarks, although couched in language of peculiar quaintness, are in many instances indicative of taste and scholarship. Except the composition of the work before us Mr. Ramsay does not appear to have essayed much literary work himself, confining his efforts to the rather novel exercise of inditing moral and other inscriptions in Latin, with which he decorated various monuments about his place of residence, and which betray a considerable command over that tongue. His taste in poetry was inclined to the classic; and so little did he recognise the free untrammelled character of the genius of Burns that he gave him the dubious advice to cultivate the drama on the model of Allan Ramsay's "Gentle Shepherd," and to direct his genius to the production of "Scottish Eclogues." He, like everyone else who was brought into contact with the inspired ploughman, was impressed beyond measure by his wonderful personality. "I have been in the company of many men of genius, some of them poets," Mr. Ramsay writes, "but I never witnessed such flashes of intellectual brightness as from him—the impulse of the moment—sparks of celestial fire. I never was more delighted, therefore, than with his company two days' tete-a-tete. In a mixed company I should have made little of him, for, to use a gambler's phrase, he did not always know when to play on and when to play off. When I asked him whether the Edinburgh literati had mended his poems by their criticisms, "Sir," said he, "those gentlemen remind me of some spinsters in my own country, who spin their thread so fine that it is neither fit for weft nor woof." It is somewhat disappointing to find so little in this work relating to the two men who were by far the most distinguished of the author's acquaintances—Scott and Burns. Any fresh information concerning either is at all times acceptable to the literary world. One of the most noticeable features in Mr. Ramsay's narration is the amount of hard-drinking which was carried on in his time, particularly by lawyers. Scarcely an individual figures in his recollections of whom he has not to write that he was "too fond of the bottle." Perhaps it was this widespread devotion to wine among the men of merit whom he knew which prompted Mr. Ramsay to write of one that "he was stanch and sober, though good!"

Wealth and Progress: A Critical Examination of the Wages Question and its Economic Relation to Social Reform. By GEORGE GUNTON. London: Macmillan and Co. 1888.

The central idea of this book, as the writer himself expresses it, is "that the standard of living is the basis of wages, and that social opportunity, or more leisure for the masses, as expressed in less hours of labour, is the natural means for increasing wages and promoting progress." This inviting theory was the property of Ira Steward, of Boston, whose life we are told is the history of the labour movement in Massachusetts, but who did not live to complete a book he projected on the development of that idea. This work was taken up by the present writer at the request of his friend, and the book now before us is the result. The author professes extensive practical experience in industrial affairs, and in the study of economical questions. Investigating the rise and development of the wages system, he finds that all consideration of the subject has hitherto failed to recognise the true economic relation the material condition of the masses sustains to industrial and social progress. An adequate treatment of this matter from his standpoint seemed to require a review of the entire question, and a reconstruction of the accepted doctrines of economics. He divides his task into two parts—one devoted to the "much-misunderstood question of wages and its economic and practical relation to social reform," and the other to a presentation of the principles of social economics. The first of these forms the present volume, and professes to deal with the matter in a direct practical manner that can be understood by the labouring classes; while the volume that is to follow will be more in the nature of a text-book for students.

For this writer, the distribution of wealth is a question only of wages. The production of wealth is wholly a question of tools and implements. The aggregate of wealth per capita, then, can be increased by increasing the use of machinery in the process of production; and that increase of wealth finds its way to the labouring classes by increase of wages. The practical problem of the book is therefore stated by two questions drawn from these postulates:—First, how can the use of improved methods of production be increased? and secondly, how can the general rate of real wages be permanently advanced? These two problems are discussed in Parts I. and II., and Part III. is devoted to an exposition of the writer's views on the principles and methods of true social reform. One of the first contentions is against the dicta that "labour creates all wealth," and that "all wealth belongs to those who create it." The idea these sentences express is, he says, well-nigh universal amongst working-men:—

> "This is not merely the official dogma of a single society, but it constitutes the basis of nearly every proposition, and the essence of nearly all economic literature put forth in the name of industrial and social reform. With financial reformers the robbery is labelled 'interest and usury;' with land reformers it is 'rent;' and with the Socialists, in the language of their own economist, Karl Marx, it is 'surplus value,' which is more sweeping than any of the others, and includes all rent, profit, and interest."

This position the writer controverts. When man lived on berries, and fish, and game caught by hand, then all wealth was produced by labour, and there was no landlord, capitalist, employer, or politician, claiming rent, profits, interest, or taxes. The use of machinery or implements increased his catch, however, and he found it worth his while to pay for the improved facilities. In proportion as wealth is produced by human labour it is scant and dear, and the masses are poor and barbarous; in proportion as it is produced by steam, and so forth, it is abundant and cheap, and the masses are materially prosperous and socially civilised. Thus the labourer is not robbed by capital, but gains by its use, "not because of any generosity on the part of the capitalist, but by the inexorable operation of economic law, which prohibits the use of capital except on the condition that it will yield increasing return."

In Part II. the law of wages is historically considered, and amongst others the theory of Henry George is combatted which states that "where land is free and labour is unassisted by capital, the whole product will go to labour as wages." The truth of this simple statement is indeed admitted,—"witness the case of the tribal communities of Australia, India, and Africa, the Esquimaux, the Patagonians, and the American Indians." Says Mr. Gunton:—

> "On this point Mr. George, like many others in whom sentiment predominates over reason, and feeling over facts, appears to assume that if the labourer receives all he produces, he necessarily has one-third more than when he only obtains two-thirds of it. Nothing can be further from the facts of the case. Wherever all the wealth is produced by human labour, and none of it by capital, the whole product per capita is sure to be very small."

This subject is treated at considerable length, and the law of wages gone into in exhaustive and interesting detail in Part II., "How the standard of living is determined," social wants, and the influences which determine social character, are subdivisions of the same subject, and these lead up to Part III., in which the inadequacy of the more familiar Socialistic methods are dealt with, with the tendency of the social philosopher to idealise overmuch in the face of the tritest facts of self-evident social laws. "How to enlarge the social opportunities of the masses" is then discussed in a tone which sufficiently indicates the healthy character of the writer's sympathies, and proves his good faith as an opponent of "popular" theories previously touched upon. The eight-hour law and its effect on profits and rent, the history of factory legislation in England from 1800 to 1840, the half-time law of 1844 and the ten-hour law of 1847, and the social progress shown by the rise of wages, the fall of prices, and the diminution of illiteracy, pauperism, and crime, are deftly handled and closely considered. The industrial progress in England as compared with Continental countries is then gone into, then as compared with the United States; and this very readable work concludes with a long chapter on the social and political necessity of shorter hours for labour, eight hours being the standard advocated.

A Fight with Distances (Kegan Paul, Trench, and Co.), by J. J. Aubertin, is the story of a rapid run through the States, the Hawaiian Islands, Canada, British Columbia, Cuba, and the Bahamas in 1886 and 1887. It was the author's first visit to the States, and he expresses with happy ease the effect on his mind of the new scenes and people with whom he met for the first time. From Quebec, his first landing-place, he visits most of the show-places along his irregular lines of route, diversifying his descriptions with many pleasant sketches of character, and observant detail and anecdote. The book is illustrated with eight page pictures and two maps, with a chart of the route pursued.

A volume of sermons by the late William Maturin D.D., is published under the title of one of them, The Blessedness of the Dead in Christ (Macmillan and Co.). It contains some 24 discourses, on subjects ranging from devotional to social subjects.

Mephistopheles in Broadcloth, by George Francis Armstrong, M.A. (Longmans, Green, and Co.), is a satire in rhyming couplets, giving a view of London society, politics, literature, art, drama, and all that goes to make up that microcosm, from the point of view of a chair in Rotten Row in the season. Mr. Armstrong is not an unfledged songster, having already tried his wings in previous flights of verse, his Ode on the recent Jubilee being one of the finest published. The satire in the present book is mordant, and often witty, and the writer's observations on men and things are evidently those of a shrewd observer and a practised man of the world. Many of these couplets are sharply epigrammatical, but we think few would care to go with the critic in his condemnation of Lewis Morris—whose "Epic of Hades" is made to rhyme to "harmless reading for insipid ladies"—or his praise of others, who go to make up a budget of judgments which, though clever and entertaining enough in many instances, contains at the same time, like most efforts of the kind, a good deal of the commonplace.

Another of Nelson and Son's Royal Upper Class Readers—Great Authors series—is issued, being the third period, Macaulay to Browning. It contains well-selected extracts from Macaulay, Carlyle, De Quincey, Irving, Longfellow, Ruskin, Dickens, Thackeray, Tennyson, Browning, and several contemporary writers. The readings given are calculated to serve a good purpose in introducing the great authors of the language to young readers, and laying the foundation of a taste which will be able to satisfy itself by the complete works of these masters in literature later on.

Plato, by Henry Cary (Bell and Sons, New York), contains the Apologia, Crito, Phædo, and Protagoras, with introductions by the translator. These dialogues are submitted as being the best selections available for a small popular volume. A somewhat similar issue of selections from the Prose of Seneca, edited by Walter Clode (Walter Scott, London), gives a view of the career and moral teaching of the Cordovan philosopher. This little book is one of the Camelot series.

A useful book for lay, as well as professional, readers should be Redress by Arbitration, a digest of the law relating to arbitrations and awards, by H. Foulks Lynch (Wilson and Co., London). The writer, who is a solicitor, speaks of the growing disinclination of commercial men to submit their differences to the decision of the courts and the comments of Justice Manisty on that fact. The Judge had occasion to remark upon the inquisitorial and offensive system of vexing suitors, even of the best class and of the great commercial houses of the city, by "interrogating impertinently into every circumstance of their concerns and career." This would, in his opinion, drive the best business away from the courts if persisted in. These suitors are led to prefer arbitration, for which the bylaws of the Chamber of Commerce and a clause in most contracts already provide. This handbook is intended to serve as a guide wherein the law may be found clearly set forth on this subject, for the information of both arbitrators and law-students. It is divided into chapters treating of the law as it regards the submission of a matter for arbitration, the arbitrators and umpire, the award, and incidental matters relating to witnesses and costs: with appendices of cited cases, forms, and court orders.

Song Tide: Poems and Lyrics of Love, Joy, and Sorrow (Walter Scott, London), is a collection of poems and sonnets by Philip Bourke Marston, edited by William Sharp. The rather sad story of the career of the accomplished verse-writer, is given in an introductory memoir by the editor, who tells us how his blindness commenced in a child's fever in his fourth year. His early indications of ability were somewhat discounted by his being unable to avail himself of the ordinary means of acquiring information. For many years he continued to spell phonetically, though, his biographer says, "in course of time he came to write as correctly as most educated people." His first volume was published at the age of 21, in 1871, and made some sensation. Most of the extracts from this little volume are sonnets from this first volume, "Wind Voices," "All in All," and "For a Song's Sake." Among these are many pathetic references to his affliction, and some exquisite tributes to a sister who walked through life by his side, in single-minded devotion. There are other pieces, like "Out of Eden," "The Last Revel," "Before Battle," evidencing a reality of experience far removed from the colourless and uneventful existence which the blind are supposed to lead. They display as strong a power of sympathy and mental projection as his verses in other places show a delicate fidelity in descriptions of natural scenery, with that faculty of idealisation of which the unattainable always brings out the best results in both literature and art. This collection belongs to the series of the Canterbury Poets.

ENGLISH GOSSIP.

(FROM OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.)

LONDON, JUNE 8.

If certain prominent newspapers really desired England to be attacked they could not offer a more general invitation than they do in their persistent statements that we are altogether unarmed. The Globe has followed the Telegraph with a sensational series of papers entitled "England's Agony." They relate how we were invaded, and how, after much bloodshed, we defeated the enemy. Then the moral is pointed. Meetings are being held on the subject, and quite a scare has been got up. The Telegraph begun it and did it well; but, that sensation over, there the matter ought to end. The whole thing is a great exaggeration; even foreigners see that, for they argue that the affair has been got up by the Government in order that they may put the country to a lot of extra expense without protest. Certain naval lords have now stated that we have not enough ships to properly protect the Mediterranean; that if we were beaten there we could not protect the English Channel. Then we are told the French are building more ships than we are. When naval lords were told this kind of thing in the olden days admirals rejoiced, and were glad because they knew sooner or later that the new French ships would belong to England by virtue of new victories at sea. It is quite certain the old spirit is not dead within us; but the truth is, too many people write about great subjects with only a superficial knowledge of them. And yet only one or two journals have had the courage to pooh-pooh "the England-in-danger" scare.

Nevertheless, yesterday, Lord Wolesley, under the pressure of the naval lord's statement that it would take 480 tons of shipping to bring a hundred thousand soldiers from France for a landing on our shores, felt it necessary to declare that only 150 tons of shipping would be necessary for that formidable operation; and he emphasised his statement by the further assertion that there are always a sufficient number of French ships in port to transport this army without any preparation and without more than as it were a day's notice. Lord Wolesley has long since told us there is no reason for a scare, but he is anxious for an increased land force always ready and equipped for service, and the fact emphatically stated that France could any day launch a hundred thousand men against England without any maritime preparation, is an excellent argument in favour of an augmented land force. This, as it were, starts the subject afresh, and so the ball is kept rolling. But London does not allow these alarming possibilities of invasion to trouble her much, though the newspaper articles look very alarming on the contents' bills at shopdoors and displayed by the street newsvendors. The proprietors of the Daily Telegraph are, nevertheless, said to have made recent purchases of freehold land; the Duke of Cambridge smiles pleasantly when he is interviewed upon the subject of "England in Danger," by civil and military friends; and Lord Wolseley shakes his head with something like a wink in his left eye; while everybody knows that if the question of local defence was seriously troubling the chiefs of the nation, political, naval, or military, there would not be all this talking and writing about it. The subject is worthy of discussion, no doubt. But the navy of to-day is quite equal to its duties, and the new ships on the stocks are many, and of considerable importance. "It is English, you know," to run down our own power and resources. We are so jealous of our naval supremacy that we are always exaggerating our weaknesses before the world. There underlies all this the good purpose of keeping the naval Powers up to their work, and encouraging them not to fear any necessary expense in the way of maintaining the efficiency of the naval arm.

The State ball at Buckingham Palace on Wednesday is spoken of in society as a very grand affair. The Prince and Princess of Wales, attended by the great officers of State, entered the ballroom at 11 o'clock, when the dancing began, their Royal Highnesses opening the ball. The Princess wore pale blue and silver, with pale blue ostrich plumes, and she wore the diamonds presented to her by a distinguished company of ladies on the occasion of her silver wedding. The Princess Christian, of Schleswig-Holstein, had a wonderful headdress of torquoise and diamonds, and wore a dazzling number of Orders. Her dress was a moire, cream-coloured, and was trimmed with Irish lace.

Mr. Carnegie, the Scotch-American millionaire, started on his coach-drive to Scotland yesterday. He was accompanied by a party of relatives and friends. Mr. Blaine was of the company. Mr. Carnegie told a reporter that he much regretted that Mr. Blaine had refused to be nominated for the Presidency. It is pretty well certain, by the way, that Cleveland will be re-elected.

The meet of the Four-in-hand Club in Hyde Park on Wednesday was not as large as usual owing to the weather not being quite as propitious as could be desired. We have one day hot, the next cold, the next full of spring sunshine, the next wet with summer rain; but altogether we cannot complain of entertainment between the showers, or the absence of any single forecasted fashionable event from each day's programme whatever the weather may be. Only a score of the coaches turned out, but the Prince of Wales was on one; and the Princess drove out in a pretty victoria to meet the club. She looked singularly young and handsome in a morning costume of light grey. Lord Onslow with his team of browns was the first to put in an appearance. His Lordship wore the club-coat, brown with brass buttons, which indeed is de rigeur. The Prince of Wales honoured Lord Fife's coach. One of the new members of the club, Mr. Deichman, a well-known German merchant, made his first appearance with a superb team of browns. Lord Charles Beresford drove a fine team of bays, and Lady Randolph Churchill rode on the merry sea-lord's coach. Sir Henry Ewart is fond of chestnuts. He recently sold a team to Lord Lonsdale for 2000 guineas. On Wednesday I heard an expert value his new chestnuts at an equally high figure. Lord Ardilum and Lord Fife both drove blacks; while Lord Shrewsbury sat behind four magnificent bays. The scene in the park was an unusually gay one, in spite of the dull clouds and the touch of cold in the wind. The Row was crowded with vehicles; there were many riders in the Ladies' Mile; and upon the walks a multitude of fashionable and well-dressed people. Lord Londesborough was conspicuous by his absence. This popular nobleman drove to and from the Derby last week, as he has done for many previous years, though he recently lost an eye by a gun accident, and there is reason to fear that the other eye is much weakened. His party to the Derby included Mr. Burnand, of Punch, Mr. Linley Sambourne, Sir Arthur Sullivan, Mr. Toole, and Mr. Lionel Brough. Lord Londesborough courts theatrical society, is a personal friend of the leading actors, and has indulged in several theatrical speculations; he was for some years Mr. Henry Neville's backer at the Olympic. His houseboat at the Henley-on-Thames regatta is always the rendezvous of the gayest throng on the river. His guests are mostly franked to Henley and back, and he entertains them with princely hospitality.

The Prince of Wales at his Derby dinner had to meet a difficulty, and he met it with his usual good judgment. You know all about the trouble between Sir George Chetwynd and Lord Durham. It is the one great modern feud of the turf, and is the subject of an action for libel, which is looked forward to with intense interest. But both men are equally great sporting lights, and neither could be ignored by the Prince without the Prince seeming to take sides. His Royal Highness therefore invited both men, and like good subjects they both went to the Marlborough House dinner. They were both announced almost at the same moment, but at the dinner their seats were far apart, and of course they contrived not to look in each other's direction, and nobody referred to the burning question between them.

There is no truth in the report which has appeared in some minor journals that young Lord Dudley is giving his mother and friends "some anxiety" on account of "his passion for gambling." The handsome young fellow has no aspirations in the direction suggested. He has evidently all the manly instincts of a country gentleman, a love of manly sports and English pastimes, but he has shown no wish to go on the turf—no particular desire to keep racehorses; if he did he could afford it, and if he wished to bet he might and no harm done. But the truth is Lord Dudley is an exceptionally strong-minded young man, and nothing is more pleasant to contemplate than his devoted attachment to his widowed mother.

The opera is doing well. The expenses are £800 a night. Almost to this extent Mr. Harris is backed by a committee. The house is crowded on great nights. It is a splendid list of aristocratic names that adorns the boxes. Minnie Hauk has repeated her former successes as Carmen. It is thought that the present very fashionable patronage of the opera is hurting the theatres; and this may well be so, coupled with popular outdoor fêtes and exhibitions. Not that the weather is, as I have already pointed out, altogether favourable to al fresco entertainments. We have had a few hot days, but not yet a week of real summer weather. The parks are green and lovely, it is true; the streets are full of flowers, the Derby Day was fine and sunny, and the Upper Thames is bright with summer costumes and summer rowing men. Among the novelties of the moment, in connection with the theatres, are two performances of different versions of Hawthorne's "Scarlet Letter." The first is by Mr. Coleridge, a son of the Lord Chief Justice; the second is by Mr. Charrington and Mr. Nelson. Neither of the pieces is worthy of the subject, and Mr. Coleridge has taken a most unwarrantable liberty with the story. He makes an enraged mob kill Chillingworth and lets Dimmesdale escape, leaving it to the imagination to understand that he and Hester Prynne go to England and are happy ever afterwards. Mr. Charrington wrote a prologue to the Nelson version, and it was a very pretty scene, both as to setting and acting. The two Hesters are Miss Calhoun and Miss Achurch, neither very bad nor very good. Mr. Forbes Robertson was an interesting Dimmesdale, and Mr. Fernandez a fine Chillingworth. "The Scarlet Letter" was dramatised 10 years ago, and played with some success in the provinces; and oddly enough it forms an important chapter in a well-known novel called "The Queen of Bohemia."

The Daly Company from America have been an artistic, but not a money success, at the Gaiety. In "The Taming of the Shrew" Miss Rehan made a distinct mark and all the critics have praised her with a unanimous enthusiasm. Mr. John Drew was an excellent Petruchio. On the first night the house was chiefly filled with Americans, and they acted upon their American habit of coming into the auditorium all through the first act. This seemed to annoy a good many untravelled Londoners, who did not understand that it is an American custom to stroll into a theatre even on the most important night while the first act is being played. Possibly one of the reasons for this lies in the habit of buying tickets on the side-walk and delaying visitors to the theatre until the demands of the ticket speculators are somewhat modified by the fact of the play having begun.

Mr. Toole has taken his comedy of "The Don" to both Cambridge and Oxford. Last week the comedy was played in the University city on the Cam. Yesterday it was given in the new theatre at Oxford. At both these classic centres of learning the amusing play has been received with unanimous favour. Yesterday I was at Oxford, and before the play met Mr. Toole at luncheon, in the company of several real dons of a famous college, and it was very gratifying to see how pleasantly they received the genial comedian. The theatre was crowded, and every hit, satirical or humorous (and there is very little satire in the piece), or illustrating college life, went with roars of laughter. Mr. Toole, in his gown and hood of a Dean of Chapel was welcomed with genuine enthusiasm; and the play went from first to last with a ripple of merriment. Oxford looked very lovely, bright with the lilacs, and laburnums everywhere in bloom; and next week, or the following, is the joyous commemoration time, when the city is filled with guests, and a genial allowance is made for the youthful eccentricities and animal spirits of undergraduates. Among Mr. Toole's audience was Mr. William Winter, the well-known critic of the New York Tribune, who is on a visit to London. Mr. Winter spoke at the annual dinner of the Green Room Club the other night, and forged another oratorical link of friendship between England and the United States.

It is announced that Mr. Noah Brooks has finished his "Life of Abraham Lincoln." The work will contain much that was said to Mr. Brooks in conversations with the martyr President. Mr. Brooks is not much known in England, though his "Boy Emigrants" was almost as popular here as in the United States. He is a journalist of high reputation, and is one of the few American journalists who combine newspaper work in a prominent and successful way with literature. He was for many years a leader writer on The New York Times; and his name is almost a sacred thing at the Lotos Club, of which he is one of the fathers. He held some kind of official position at Washington during the war, and was a personal friend of Abraham Lincoln at that stirring time. I remember his telling me that he had an invitation to accompany the President to his box at the theatre on the night when he was assassinated, and that owing to some prior and important appointment he was unable to be present. He also told me that Lincoln acted that night, before he went, as if he was under the influence of a bad dream or omen. Mr. Brooks is sure to write a very interesting and reliable book.

Mr. Sala's "Reminiscences" are indefinitely postponed; while Mr. Frith's have made such a great success that he is preparing a new volume, to be called "More Reminiscences." This will be illustrated. Mr. John Hollingshed says, as soon as the other leading books in this way have appeared, he will tell his story and correct the others; but the readers are not particular as to dates and mere facts, so long as they are entertained with some good stories.

Poor Mrs. Chippendale; her death was not exactly sudden, but it was quite unexpected. You knew her in the colonies for the clever bright woman she was, an excellent comedienne, and a woman of high character and of a fine disposition. She had just put her house in order when she died, and had got over all the little troubles that belong to the responsibilities of the bread-winner who has to care for others and provide for the future. She had recently furnished a pretty home and had begun to be very proud of her garden. Mr. Henry Irving and Miss Ellen Terry went to the house of death and placed flowers by the side of the dead actress and friend with their own hands. One of Mrs. Chippendale's favourite pupils sent a sweet bouquet of lilies. The greatest sorrow was felt by the Lyceum Company, to every member of which she had endeared herself. She was an old friend of Mr. Irving's. Among her colonial friends the chief was Miss Cornwell, of the famous Midas mine; and in England one of her most intimate acquaintances was Mrs. John Strange Winter, the author of "Bootle's Baby." Talking with Mrs. Winter about her the other night, I was very pleased to hear this clever sympathetic woman pay a high tribute of friendship to her memory. She said Mrs. Chippendale was one of the best, most genial, most kindly charitable women she had ever known.

The panorama-like picture of Niagara is a great success; it is coining money. On Sunday Mr. and Miss Hollingshed gave a reception at the show to an aristocratic company. Royalty was present, and the tea was delicious. Sunday, it seems, is the only time when Hollingshed and the proprietors can show the pictures to their friends, it is so overcrowded on other days.

Music never flourished in London as it does to-day. Concerts, opera, festivals, music meetings of all kinds are the order of the day; and, as if this were not enough, the Lyric Club has taken new and fine premises, and will give some of the most remarkable musical evenings of the time. It has a magnificent opponent, or will have next week when the Meister Singers' Club is open. This is a great enterprise. The members are to be "selected," not proposed, and elected only on invitation. The building adds much to the picturesqueness of St. James's-street, the first home of London clubland.

The Italian papers (says an English contemporary) are full of gossip about the King of Sweden's visit to Rome. His simplicity took all the courtiers by surprise. King Humbert put four State carriages at his disposal. King Oscar used them only once. His experiences at the Vatican have been in a way unparalleled. He is the first crowned head whom Leo XIII. has received. Papal etiquette lays down that if a king on arriving at Rome does not visit the Vatican before the Quirinal he will not be received by the Holy Father. The rule is relaxed in the case of Protestants; but if the King of Sweden had come to the Vatican in one of King Humbert's State carriages his reception might have been quite different. As it was it has furnished a new precedent, not so much for the reception by the Pope as by his guest. The King of Sweden kissed the Pontiff on both cheeks. Such a salute was quite irregular. Long usage had established the fashion of merely kissing the hand. In the case of Pio Nino it was broken by the President of the United States. General Grant merely shook hands with the Pope, and said, "How do you do, sir?"

PARISIAN GOSSIP.

(FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.)

PARIS, JUNE 8.

The topics of the week have been the re-opening of the two Chambers, the expected appearance of the "Bras' General," as deputy for the Nord, his first Parliamentary utterances, which all were curious to hear, and comments thereupon—which have been abundant—not only in France, but throughout Europe, and in general anything but complimentary.

According to his habit of contriving to attract attention, "the General," instead of making his appearance at the re-opening of the Chamber of Deputies, deferred his appearance until the third day of the new session, his friends taking care to let the public know, the preceding day, that their new idol would really take his seat in the Chamber on the morrow. In expectation of crowding in the streets, on the line of the General's landau, the police were massed in force outside the Legislative Palace, and the doors of the latter were kept shut, only being opened to those who had the right to enter, despite which prudential arrangement the Chamber was densely crowded, from basement to roof. The would-be dictator drove to the scene of action, with his satellites, in an open carriage, and without much demonstration in the streets; the public awaiting his return from the Chamber as the most convenient time for getting a sight of him. The police closed the bridge to the public, at both ends, as soon as the handsome turnout had passed, and the gatekeepers of the Chamber secured the entrance against all comers as soon as the General's carriage had entered the Court.

Most carefully got up, by tailor, hairdresser, and serving-man, the future Cæsar, accompanied by his devoted adherents, came quietly into the hall, casting contemptuous glances around him, and took his seat on the extreme left. Feeling himself watched with curiosity, the new member hastened to ascend the tribune, a roll of manuscript in his hand.

"I lay upon the table of the Chamber," said the elect of all those who are using him as the means of upsetting what—from half a dozen contradictory points of view—they all desire to get rid of, "a proposal for the revision of the Constitutional laws. I demand urgency, and wish to read the preamble of my bill. After the electoral demonstrations which have brought my name into such prominence," . . . but here the House broke out into such a storm of laughter, exclamations, hisses, catcalls, braying of donkeys, cockcrowing, &c., as had never before been heard in any House of Parliament, rendering it impossible for some minutes for the new-comer to proceed. The General, in his purple necktie, surveyed the scene through his blue eyeglass with a dignified frown, and awaited the subsidence of the storm. He then resumed the reading of his paper, which stated that it was his duty to lay before the House the evils of which these demonstrations were the sign, and to point out the remedy, which was the revision of the existing Constitution. The country had no confidence in the future. It repudiated the policy of party, which used up the strength of the country in barren struggles, brought about by Opportunism, so that Ministers could have no fitting or durable policy; and the Government was only occupied in granting favours and making deplorable appointments, while the country was going to ruin, &c., &c.

The interruptions which had been hurled at the speaker from every part of the House only stopped him for a moment at a time, and he had resumed the reading of his paper as they ceased; but, at this point of his indictment, the President curtly forbade him to insult his colleagues. From this moment to the end of the hour and a-hour which "the General" occupied with his attacks on the existing regimé and all connected with it, his demand for a Constituent Assembly, a Plébiscite, a Ministry responsible to the President alone (until the Presidency should be abolished, as he wished to see it), who should have the right of opposing the promulgation of laws, the appointment of a Senate by universal suffrage, and the entrance of France upon the condition of a regular and stable Government, based on the principle of the Plébiscite, the cries, contradictions, and contemptuous comments of the Assembly kept pace with every sentence of the "bill" the General persisted in reading, M.M. Andrieux, Clemenceau, and Felix Pyat being among the most condemnatory of the General's opponents, after which M. Floquet came out with a speech which called forth immense applause in the House, and has been commented on with general admiration from one end of Europe to the other.

The Prime Minister said the Government had already admitted the necessity of revision, but would choose its own time for proposing the modifications to be made in the existing Constitution. He then replied in most masterly style to the various points of the programme of the orator, who, he said, "had lectured the Chamber and the country as though he were a General returning home after a series of victories." "Bonaparte the First," he exclaimed, turning to the new member with a gesture of passionate depreciation, "when the country was weary of its struggles for liberty, came with some stray Republicans and seized on the supreme power. As for you, General Boulanger, remember that at your age Napoleon was dead. You will never be anything else than the Siéyès of a stillborn Constitution!" which turning of the tables on a bunch of the General's assertions and allusions elicited a perfect storm of applause.

After various other speeches, and M. Clemenceau's declaration that he should support the Government, "because, though the Republican party had committed faults, that was no reason why they should commit greater faults" by adopting the vague and inconsistent programme just set forth by the General, the Chamber divided, rejected Boulanger's motion by 377 votes to 186, and ordered M. Floquet's speech to be printed and posted up throughout the country.

The upshot of the General's severe infliction on the patience of the Chamber is a general perception that France possesses, in the person of the present President of the Chamber, a really strong and able statesman, that Boulanger's programme is meagre, merely destructive of what is, without giving any practical conditions for anything better than the existing Constitution, which, it is felt, it would be safer to improve than to destroy; and that as each party of the General's supporters disclaims all the sympathy with the others, the upsetting of the existing régime would find France as far as ever from escaping from the curse of party and personal selfishness. The cause of "Boulangism" will probably be found to have received a severe blow from the evidence of insincerity and emptiness of everything but personal vanity and ambition, which the General so abundantly furnished by his speech; which, being generally disapproved, as pretentious and empty, his friends now declare to have been written for him by one of themselves. His committee, however, is still busy with the attempt to impose "the General" on the popular fancy. Its latest move is the issue of medals, the size of a five-franc piece, bearing the General's effigy, with the words, "General Boulanger, Deputé du Nord, 172,528 votes, 15th April, 1888." On the reverse, the Republican motto, "Liberté, Egalité, Fraternité," is arranged on the three sides of a triangle containing the Pretender's programme, "Dissolution, Revision, Constitution." They state that "the General" will visit Charente on his way to the Dondogne to present his thanks to the electors of that department for having nominated him as their deputy, the real object of which visit is known to be to aid M. Paul Deroulède in his electoral campaign, concerning which Boulanger has issued an address to the electors of that department, winding up with the words, "Remember that in voting for M. Deroulède you are voting for me." The great Masonic Congress has just declared it to be the duty of all Masons to oppose the present absurd and culpable campaign that has been organised in favour of setting up a new and dangerous dictatorship, pregnant with evil for France, and for the peace of Europe and the world. It is rumoured that Boulanger will prolong this new visitation by crossing the Channel and proceeding to London, where a party of public men (who might be supposed to be capable of forming a more correct view of French affairs and European prospects) are said to be making arrangements for lionising the "Future Ruler of France."

The Horse Show, now closing, has been a great success, as also the attempt to get up, in the Bois de Boulogne, a Battle of Flowers in imitation of the famous doings of Nice. On the whole, it is judged that this rivalry may be acclimatised in Paris, and may become, in time, a recognised addition to the charms of Parisian spectacles. This floral festival, which was combined with shows, games, and illumination of the Bois as evening drew on, has realised a handsome sum for the budget of the "Society for Aiding the Victims of Duty," in whose behalf it had been got up."

The wealthy owner of a splendid residence near the Bois de Boulogne, M. Molier, whose ruling passion is horses and all that concerns them, with a general blending of all that goes to make up the attractions of a circus, has been referred to in former letters, has just given the first of the two magnificent entertainments he gives every year, in the immense and superb circus he has constructed in his establishment. His amateur troupe, of which he is himself one of the most accomplished members, is composed of people of rank and standing, passionately addicted to the performance of the astonishing feats of the most accomplished leapers, flyers, climbers, riders, rope dancers, &c., that charm the frequenters of such establishments. After these feats come shows of various kinds, the affair winding up next morning with a ball and a wonderful supper. The excitement caused by the announcement that M. Molier is about to issue invitations for one of his fêtes is something curious. All who can obtain cards are the object of the envy of those who cannot do so, and though this private circus is very large, and also crammed to its utmost capacity, the latter are always much more numerous than the former.

That favourite establishment, the Hippodrome, is having a brilliant success with its Russian military pantomime, a glorification of the great Russian hero, Skobeloff, in three tableaux, got up with wonderful success, intermingled with Russian national songs, bell-ringing, and performance of Russian airs, including the National Anthem. Russian war scenes and popular fêtes, a march-past of Russian troops, Russian dances, &c., the costumes and accessories all brought from Russia, make up a very original and interesting spectacle, which the present adoration of Russia causes the Parisians to find exceptionally charming; and when the hero of the piece finally makes his appearance, amidst a grand wind up of spectacular and orchestral splendours, the enthusiasm of the house is most vividly displayed.

The constant succession of serious accidents in the streets of this capital has led to the foundation of a "Society of Urban Ambulances," in emulation of the admirable system so successfully carried out in the United States for affording immediate relief to persons meeting with injuries in the streets and factories. The inauguration of this charitable organisation, in which a number of ladies of the highest rank have taken a leading part, has just taken place in the square in front of the Opera, in presence of a distinguished gathering, the ceremony being presided over by M. Jules Simon. The signalling for the ambulances (by telephone), the arrival of the vehicles, fitted up with mattresses and supplied with balls, the ringing of which is to clear the road, all passed off well; and as every day supplies occasions (alas!) for the activity of the staff of agents attached to the institution, it is tolerably certain that the urban ambulances will soon be in excellent working order.

The excellent communication addressed by the French Chamber of Commerce of London to the Minister of Commerce has failed to attract the attention of this city. As this paper conclusively proves the non-protective and simply fiscal character of Mr. Goschen's proposed changes in regard to the taxation of French wines, which have excited such general fury throughout France, the few papers that have alluded to this communication have simply indulged in anger against its writers, without any reference to the facts, figures, and conclusions so ably brought together by them. Much anger is also expressed at the displeased surprise excited in England by the claim of the French Government to the Minquiers, a group of small rocky islands between the French shore and Guernsey, which the English Government has always regarded as belonging to England, but to which France now lays claim on the ground of having established a lighthouse upon one of them in 1865. Of no importance in itself, this rock would be a point to be looked after in case of complications that can only cease to be possible when common sense shall have accomplished the establishment of the principle of arbitration for the settlement of international differences, which a deputation of the Peace League has just been urging M. Goblet to call together a congress to examine and decide.

The Count de Conbertin, who has been inspecting the great public schools and educational systems across the Channel, has returned to this country with an enlightened admiration of English training of youth, especially in the physical department. His book, just published, may possibly lead to a modification of the French system by the establishment of "exercise parks" on the outside of Paris and other towns, for giving exercise and physical amusement to the pupils of the French schools, now sadly overworked with lessons, and being seriously injured in health by the physical inactivity to which they are restricted.

The Queen's Birthday has been celebrated by a dinner at the embassy to the English colony here, followed by an open reception, the whole passing off most successfully, to the satisfaction of all concerned.

The Duke of Aosta, aged 43, is about to marry his niece, Princess Letitia, daughter of Prince Jerôme and Princess Clotilda, aged 21. Uncle and niece are both remarkably handsome and charming, and have long been in love with one another. The Italian Court, so long unsuccessful in their efforts to decide the Duke to marry again, are enchanted. The Pope, while stating that "the laws of the Church forbid marriage between uncles and nieces," goes on to say that he is happy to do his utmost to give pleasure to Princess Clotilda, whose piety is that of a saint, and the Duke of Aosta, so firm a supporter of the Church, Catholic and Roman." How Italy, so resolutely determined to keep Rome as its capital, will judge this strengthening of Pontifical ideas and claims, remains to be seen.

BRITISH VERSUS FOREIGN GUNS.

(From the Daily News.)

An important contribution to the discussion upon the state of our national defences appears in this week's Engineer. Comparisons between the strength of our ships and those of other countries have been repeated almost ad nauseam, especially as they are all intended to point the moral that while the fleet is certainly strong enough to guard our shores, it is by no means competent to protect our enormous commerce. The article in the Engineer deals chiefly with a comparison between our guns afloat and those of foreign Powers. It points out that many of the breech-loading guns of foreign Powers are not to be compared with our own most modern types, being inferior even to many of our muzzle-loaders. We have on ironclad ships 313 modern guns, weighing in all 4089·5 tons. Each of these weapons delivers its shot with the average energy of 500 foot-tons for each ton weight of gun. Hence if all these guns were discharged, the joint energy of their projectiles could lift 2,044,750 tons one foot high. Besides these we have 393 guns of old type, including, however, such excellent weapons as those of the Inflexible, whose average muzzle energy per ton is 300 foot-tons. These have a total muzzle energy of 1,592,250 foot-tons. The French guns are of different types, and their mean muzzle energy is put at 398 foot tons per ton. The result is that while the total energy of the British protected guns is 3,637,000 foot-tons, that of the French weapons is 2,758,737. If to this be added the power of Russia, 949,020 foot-tons, the result appears that the guns of the combined ironclad fleets of Russia and France are about one-fiftieth more powerful than those of Britain. In other words, as the Engineer puts it, while the discharge of the British guns could lift the combined ironclad fleets of France and Russia seven and a half feet out of the water, their own weapons combined could lift the somewhat heavier fleet of Britain seven and a quarter feet. Turning to the unprotected guns, it appears that we have afloat 1138 with a joint energy of 2,218,245 foot-tons, while France and Russia can boast of 1116, with the much lower energy of 1,231,166 foot-tons. We have given these facts without adopting the alarmist tone of our contemporary's article. It is clear, however, that in the matter of guns we have to go on substituting new ones for the old ones which are out of date, and accumulating a stock of weapons for the prompt equipment of merchant cruisers in time of need. We learn from a return just published that 238 guns were issued for sea service last year, but that nine ships are still waiting for guns which were promised in 1886 and 1887.

A parliamentary return (says an English paper) shows that the number of paupers in every 1000 of the population in England and Wales was 27·5 at the end of January last, and 28·1 at the end of February and March. The proportion was smaller than in any of the other years except those of 1884, 1885, and 1887. The proportion of paupers to population, however, during the quarter ended March last did not compare favourably with former years. In the metropolis at the end of January the proportion was larger than it had been at the end of the same month in 10 out of the 12 preceding years.

PETER MOLLER'S COD LIVER OIL has such a thoroughly established reputation that it seems almost superfluous to say that it is not an emulsion, and contains no water—charged for at the price of oil. The manufacture, from the finest and freshest livers only, is perfected in one operation, without any after manipulation, which should be carefully guarded against. Its superiority and efficacy have secured the approbation of the whole medical world, and the Highest Awards at all chief Exhibitions.—(ADVT.)

THE FRENCH SALON OF 1888.

(FROM OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.)

PARIS, MAY 22.

The 1888 Exhibition of the works of art gathered by the "Societé des Artistes Français" is most characteristic in that it so fully manifests the peculiar talent and distinction of the French people, to wit—their faculty of invention. The Exhibition is, therefore, as usual, one of surprises, pleasant or otherwise. No matter how familiar one may be with an artist's work, one can never forecast what novelty he may determine on for his next picture; nor how, having determined on his subject, he will treat it. The result is, a freshness in the Exhibition which is seldom equalled in other equally important annual collections. This is the one great and distinguishing feature of the Salon; and it is the quality which most impresses one in every department of pictorial art—portraiture, historical painting, landscape, and decorative work. In all the sections into which one might classify an exhibition of pictures is discernible that combination of imagination and inspiration which we call invention, or, in other words, the capacity to let the imagination be acted upon by the objects and circumstances of the situation and the moment.

While this Salon is not so full as some former ones of pictures which harrow the soul, there are some sufficiently painful. But even these manifest inventiveness, and they have their compensating quality in their motif—which is a moral one, springing from sympathy and compassion. Pity, for instance, for the perils of workmen, a subject now being discussed in the Chamber of Deputies, has actuated M. Jones Capdevielle in his "Explosion in a Slate Quarry," in which the powder-laid mine has suddenly exploded. But great invention is manifest in his treatment. Few men would have attempted an explosion in the very instant of its occurrence, but would have indicated its force by means of its effect. Not so M. Capdevielle. The flash, the rending of the rigid rock, the blinding of one poor wretch, the stunning of many, and the instantaneous death of one on whom a huge rock uprooted from the bed of centuries has fallen, dashing him headlong against the stones and crushing his legs as under a Nasmyth hammer—this is all attempted, and, what is much more, achieved. Of the painful order, too, is Mr. Patrick Douglas's "Brutality"; and, though an American, this artist in this work seems to have caught something of the inventive faculty of his French teachers. It is a work to adorn the board-room of a humane society. It is a life-size horse and cart—the cart laden with street paving stones, led by a brutal carter; and represents a scene only too common, unhappily, in Paris and elsewhere. The horse, though huge and powerful, has evidently a trouble in drawing his load; and the carter has thereupon struck it with a huge stick—now blood-stained—over the mouth and nostrils; and is tugging, sufficiently to tear the poor animal's mouth, at the bearing-rein. The terror on the horse's eye, and the determined brutal look on the man's face, are very clever, and manifest considerable skill in dealing with a difficult subject in design and motive, and on a scale unusually large. In "The Remorse of the Drunkard," by M. Auguste Zwiller, we have, sad to say, an everyday occurrence in large cities. A poor neglected wife is dying in a wretched attic, in the presence of her four starving ragged children. At the last moment enters the half-sobered husband and father, who is filled with sorrow and regret. What a subject to paint! but what a moral! In "Grimaces and Misery," M. Fernand Pelez has given to the world a peep of a fast passing away institution, namely the outside platform of a travelling "show" or theatre. In the centre, on the top of the entrance steps, are the clown and "merry-man" making grimaces to attract a rustic crowd; on their left is the band—three old half-starved men, pictures of misery—while to their right are four children in spangles and tights. The eldest three are girls, whose ages range from 16 to 10. On the face of the eldest is an expression of confirmed despair. The second casts her eyes heavenward on thoughts of a mother of whose care she has been deprived. The third, while attending to "business," looks wistfully at the little weakling brother, who is quietly crying from misery and hunger. In a moment the poor little wretches will be smiling and dancing, and what not, to amuse a gaping crowd. It is a wonderfully clever work in dealing with hard, crude colour, in strange and difficult juxtaposition, but in its humane quality it is even grander.

Of portraits there is a large number, mostly of beautiful women. Fair dames are the patrons of art in Paris—public men are so in London. Of the latter, there are few at the Salon. The most noteworthy are M. Adolphe Yvon's "Portrait de M. le President de la Republique," M. Carnot; M. Leon Bonnat's "Portrait de S. E. le Cardinal Lavigerie," and that of M. Jules Ferry, by the same eminent artist; and M. Laissement's group of portraits, painted for the "Societé de la Comédie Française," of "A reading to the committee of the Comédie Française." In the treatment of the scarlet and black robes of a cardinal, M. Bonnat has shown himself a perfect master in his portrait of Monseigneur Lavigarie; and the striking likenesses of the well-known dramatic authorities in M. Laissement's group, render that picture one of the most popularly attractive in the exhibition; but for pure portraiture, that of M. Carnot is the noblest of them all. The only ornament worn by the President on his dress suit is the sash of the order of the Legion of Honour; but there is a strength and dignity about the man, as here represented, which shows him to be a very king of men, as was his grandfather in the time of the First Consulate.

Of religious works there are few. The old superstition, now almost dead amongst French artists, is represented by M. Delance's "Legend of St. Denis," which is a life-size picture, in which the saint is seen carrying away his own head after decapitation. The legend says:—"Then the Saint" (that is, after his head had been cut off) "took up his head, and started to walk across the plain: the frightened peasants clearing out of his way." This is the scene depicted. One cannot help feeling that even to Catholics this story savours more of the grotesque than the reverential. The older and yet newer religious faith is represented by Mr. Bukovac's "Suffer the Little Children to Come unto Me." In this work there is shown considerable archæological knowledge and scholarship, and the types of character are ably defined. Our Lord is shown standing, with a child in His arms, and to Him, generally, the children flock with eagerness and confidence. Some few hold back through diffidence or evil temper, and some are restrained, not without protest from the mothers, by the too officious disciples, conspicuously of Peter. This, within certain limitations, is a worthy picture; but it must be confessed that religious art, of any order, is not a conspicuous section of the Paris Salon of 1888.

The most prominent, and at the same time most able examples of historical painting are "The Black Prince before the Corpse of the King of Bohemia after the Battle of Crecy, 1346," a wonderfully dramatic rendering of an incident which embraces at once the glory and the pain of war, by an Englishman resident in Paris, Mr. Julian Story; "Attila Consulting the Soothsayers before the Battle of Chalons," by M. Ernest Cordes, a work typifying the repose of self-confidence, as symbolised in Attila, and of excitable and hysterical superstition, as embodied in the Chief Soothsayer and his fellows; the "Jeanne d'Arc," by M. Guillaume Alaux, and "Camille Desmoulins at the Palais Royal, July 12, 1789," by M. Felix Barrias. The Joan of Arc commemorates the great Orleans heroine's fortitude and faith, and the cruelty of her English persecutors. "Joan walked to execution, and as Ladvenu tried to console her, speaking to her of heaven, the Bishop entered. He came to watch the supreme anguish of his victim, and, while he still had the power, laid for her a last snare to make her confess that she had used witchcraft. But he found in Joan a resigned victim, who, addressing herself haughtily to the Judges, said; "I appeal from you to God, the great Judge, in regard to the wrongs and injustice which have been done to me." The picture is fine in conception, and would have been wholly satisfactory if Joan's face had been more pleasing; but then the real Joan was no beauty, and a French painter never shrinks from a fact just because it is an ugly one. The "Desmoulins," by M. Barrias, is a work of talent, not only as a representation of a notable incident in the year of the Revolution—a year for the celebration of which the most extensive preparations ever known in the history of exhibitions is being made at this moment in the Champs de Mars—but as illustrating the tinder-like readiness of the French people to be inflamed by revolutionary speech. The incident at the Palais Royal is thus described by Michelet in his "History of the Revolution":—"A young man, Camille Desmoulins, went out from the Café de Foy, leapt on to a table, drew his sword, showed a pistol, and shouted 'To arms.' He plucked the leaf of a tree and stuck it on his hat. Everybody doing the same, the trees were stripped." It is a notable instance of the power of speech, when expressing earnestness and enthusiasm. M. Barrias shows us a swaying, surging crowd, where old and young, rich and poor, man and woman, boy and girl, are carried away into action by the brief impassioned words of a youth who had been aroused to passion by the wrongs of his country.

Coming to a section which may be regarded as reflecting the French love of glory, it is a little painful to remark how in so many cases the spirit of revenge is manifest, and a feeling of bitterness towards the Germans is engendered. For instance, here is "Janville, 1870," by M. Paul Grolleron. The picture represents a cartload of French wounded soldiers, who are depicted as in anguish, and dying from the torment caused by the motion of the vehicle over the bad roads, and by the fever which is consuming them. "After a five hours' march," says an eye-witness, "we at length arrived at Janville. We were succumbing to fatigue and pain. Here a Prussian officer ordered the convoy to continue the journey to Toury, which would, alas! require still three hours of travelling. 'No, no, abandon us on the roadside,' cried the wounded desperately; 'we are able to do no more.' At this moment the Lady Superior of the Janville hospital appeared. 'Sir,' cried she, 'these wounded belong not to you; they are mine, and I will not allow them to linger any longer.' The Prussian officer would have protested. 'Enough,' cried she imperiously; "the religious woman who would permit the wounded to suffer uselessly is a wretch. Now then, carter, take out the horses.'" A painful incident this, certainly, but due to German discipline and redtape rather than to policy. But it can be imagined how exciting to the French mind a picture powerfully painted, as this is, would be. And presumably this was so designed by the patriotic painter. "The Dream," by M. Edouard Detaille, M. Maissonier's gifted pupil, is a surprise to us, and is another instance of French invention. One would, on hearing this artist's name, imagine a work of his to contain brilliant military uniforms, accoutrements, prancing horses, and all the gay paraphernalia of militaryism. But here we have a mere lonely bivouac, with the soldiers, enveloped in their cloaks, fast asleep, a line of stacked rifles, and watch fires. Not a hint of glory in the mundane scene; but high up in the heavens the rolling rain clouds are forming themselves into a gallant aggressive army, with flags and banners, and lo, the regiment of foot to which the dreamer belongs is in the van. This is a beautiful canvas indeed, and has been bought by the Government. There is, too, only the slightest suggestion of the prevalent sentiment. More pronounced in this respect is M. Gaston Claris' "Vive la France," with its motto—"They could not die for their country." This represents a detachment of French wounded prisoners being marched through a French village under a German escort, amid the sad plaudits of the peasants. More pronounced, too, is M. Nils Forsberg's "The End of a Hero; Souvenir of the Siege of Paris 1870-1." This shows a poor fellow dying on a bed in one of the churches, which had been turned into a hospital, and receiving "extreme unction." The beautiful architecture, the picturesque ecclesiastical group, and the perspective of beds on which lie pain-wrung victims, go to make up a fine scene; but the subsidiary motive, undoubtedly, is to stimulate a retaliatory sentiment, which unfortunately needs no such stimulus.

In concluding this review reference must be made to two or three works which even yet more conspicuously illustrate the great inventive powers of the French mind. These are M. Nepiano Chega's "The Carrying Off of Proserpine," in which the fair girl is being driven to the regions Plutonian—regions suggested by the gloomy rocky ravine through which the road lies—in a chariot drawn by four fierce black horses abreast; M. Albert Maignan's "Voices of the Fire Bell;" M. Paul Joseph Jamin's "Rape: the Stone Age;" M. Maximo Faivre's "Two Mothers," a scene of the Stone Age also, presumably; and M. Alfred Agache's "Enigma." The "Tocsin, or Fire Bell," is an attempt to embody the sounds of this most terrible alarum. Edgar Allen Poe, in "The Bells," has as far as words may, rung out, in many jarring sounds, the alarming notes of the tocsin, but M. Maignan has done more, he has embodied every horrid sound. The power of invention could scarcely go further. Below the belfry the fire rages luridly through the darkness, while in the belfry the bell ropes are being wildly and irregularly pulled by frightened and unreasoning abstractions—nude and fantastic figures of men, the bell swings dangerously, so wildly is it being wrung, and from the bell itself fly off, in every attitude of haste and terror imaginable, male and female forms, which embody the alarming sounds which fall upon the air of night. There is the shrieking strident sound which pierces the ear like a knife in the form of a woman hasting to descend, while she is held and restrained by the hoarse raucous-voiced fellow of equal frenzy but slower pace. In other figures we have the solemn and mournful undernotes, with here and there an accidental merrier one. The picture is a wonderful example of pure and simple artistic creation. "The Rape" represents a young girl being carried off by an elderly man, who is being garotted from behind by her lover, and having his eye dug out by the poor girl's thumb; and "The Two Mothers" is a work in which a woman (armed with a flint axe) and her two infants are caught on a ledge of rock, with a precipice on one side and a cliff on the other, by a she bear and her cub. In both cases the painful question arises, what will the issue be? And both pictures evince great powers of imagination in realising the hard conditions of life in a savage age when the struggle for life was so very terrible. But for simple pictoral realisation of a mere abstraction, M. Agache's "Enigma" is, perhaps, the most striking. It represents a beautiful woman in a deep sage-green robe and a black crêpe-de-chine veil about her head, and falling in folds about her to the floor, where it trails. In her hand and on the floor are poppies. She is the embodiment of religion and mystery, the priestess of enigma, and the daughter of mystery, and is a seer of the future. Thus lifted, perchance painfully, by knowledge above the sisters of earth, she closes her soul against every human affection and the hopes of earth. It is difficult to describe the sad dignity of this beautiful figure. It is, indeed, a fine example of the peculiar talent to quote the opening words of this article, and distinction of the French people, an example, to wit, of their faculty of invention.

A rather curious episode in natural history (says St. James's Gazette) occurred the other day on board the French steamboat Abd-el-Kader during the passage from Marseilles to Algiers. Just as the vessel was about two hours out the skies became quite black with swallows. It was then about 6 o'clock in the evening. The birds alighted in thousands on the sails, ropes, and yards of the Abd-el-Kader. After a perky survey of the deck from their eminence aloft they descended coolly on deck, hopped about among the sailors and passengers, and eventually found their way into the cabins, both fore and aft. The birds were evidently fatigued, after a long flight, and allowed themselves to be caught by the people of the ship, who gave them a welcome reception and provided them with food, which they enjoyed heartily. The little winged strangers remained all night on the vessel, and in the morning at seven o'clock the head look-out bird had, no doubt, sighted the Balearic Isles, for the whole flock made for land, after having spent a comfortable and refreshing night on board ship.

ELGIN WATCHES
ARE THE BEST IN THE WORLD.

THE LEADING AMERICAN TIMEKEEPERS.

THE MOST EXCELLENT WATCHES FOR RAILWAYS.

These celebrated watches are unsurpassed for excellence of material and workmanship, and are universally acknowledged to be the most accurate timekeepers.

Astronomers and explorers have unhesitatingly pronounced them more trustworthy than the best known chronometers.

Nearly all the Observatories throughout America are provided with ELGIN WATCHES to correct any error in the rate of their Chronometers.

In taking observations astronomers frequently use ELGIN WATCHES in preference to their chronometers.

Explorers tell us that on expeditions made into some parts of the uninhabited globe they have been provided with no less than "four chronometers," but that the only "horological instrument" upon which they were able to rely was an ELGIN WATCH, all the others having become useless.—Vide Astronomer Powell's report.

"Ay, marry ! now unmuzzle your wisdom."—ROSALIND.

This excerpt from the Herald's report of the debate in the Legislative Council on Thursday night upon the torpedo defences of the colony is not without especial interest :—

"Mr. Salomons said that he must object to Mr. Creed sitting opposite to him and indulging in grimaces that were not pleasing to himself, and certainly not improving to Mr. Creed. (Oh ! and laughter.)

"Mr. Creed said he was only smiling. The reason he did so was because some of the statements of the hon. member were so ridiculous.—

"Mr. Salomons submitted that the hon. member was highly disorderly. (Hear, hear.) He had the impertinence to say that his remarks, made in a most calm and proper manner, were ridiculous.

"Mr. Creed begged to withdraw the remark, and to apologise to the House. He had no intention of being disorderly. He was giving the reason why he smiled at the hon. member. (Oh, oh.)

"Mr. Salomons objected to Mr. Creed sitting opposite to him. There were plenty of other places in the chamber which the hon. member might usefully occupy.

"The President thought that the hon. member was now out of order himself. (Laughter.)

"Mr. Salomons thought he was. It only showed how one disorderly remark led to another."

As far as I can make out from this report, the President of the Council has not actually laid it down that for a member of that Chamber to smile at another is a breach of order, or unparliamentary for any other reason, although Mr. Salomons raised that question on his point of order. So the point may be considered as still undecided, and open to ordinary comment. If that be so, I would most respectfully point out that the effect of a ruling in the direction asked by Mr. Salomons will be to make the debates in the Council still more dismal than they are now supposed to be. The very spirit of dejection will brood over that Chamber, not to be exorcised even by a medical man's smile. Moreover, the liberty of the subject, never better asserted than by a smile, or even a laugh—always supposing that you are not assisting at a funeral, or a lying-in-state, or some equally solemn ceremony—is called in question by the point raised by Mr. Salomons. That well-recognised dictum of a forgotten Lord Chancellor, "A cat may look at a king," is supposed to lie at the foundation of the vaunted liberty which subjects exercise towards kings ; but as between subjects themselves, it would seem that the maxim does not apply, at least in the Legislative Council.

If I am not mistaken, Mr. Simpson, her Majesty's Attorney-General demurred not many days ago to these same medical smiles of the doctor's, but the demurrer was not argued, and the point was still at large when Mr. Salomons took it. The practical question seems to be how far Dr. Creed ought to be compelled, by a sitting order of the House, to seat himself from the places occupied by the Vice-President of the Executive Council and the Attorney-General, to prevent his smiles from doing them mischief. There is a vignette in "Alice in Wonderland" which represents a cat in a tree. It was the cat which the Duchess said "grinned like that because it was a Cheshire cat," which cat afterwards vanished slowly, beginning with the end of the tail and ending with the grin, which remained some time after the rest of it had gone. Would Mr. Salomons be content if Dr. Creed smiled at him from a distant point like that occupied by the cat, "beginning at the tail and ending with the grin" ? That would take the Doctor at least as far as the wall of the western gallery ; but if he were posted that far from the President he might laugh, and then what would happen ?

Big heads are generally considered to contain big brains, and every big brain is supposed to be the physical home of a big metaphysical mind, ditto soul, talent, genius. That is the common opinion, just as it is the common opinion that a typical murderer should have a flat-topped head, receding from a heavy sinus, and bulging out over the back of a short neck, and behind large flap ears ; and that the head of a typical philanthropist (not necessarily a member of the Local Option League or the Social Purity Society) ought to be shaped as to his Olympian front like a beetling precipice descending to his nose, so as to make an angle therewith of about 120deg. 30min. (by Greenwich time). I judge from the article of Miss Cobbe in the Englishwoman's Review, noticed in an extract from the Daily News which was given in last Saturday's Herald, that Professor Romanes in some measurements of female skulls published by him, and in his deductions therefrom, has been treating the ladies with much craniological discourtesy. Male professors are rather prone to disparage women who might qualify some day as female professors. But, as Miss Cobbe points out, Professor Romanes might have remembered what a little head held such a vast amount of well-digested knowledge, mathematical and physical, when Mrs. Somerville possessed it. The writer in the Daily News confines his remarks to women, but what is true of their skulls is just as true of the skulls of their so-called lords. Voltaire's was a very small head, so were Pope's, Pascal's, Diderot's, and scores of other famous skulls. On the other hand, Thackeray's big head has been unable to redeem from a stupidity irreclaimably crass thousands of bulbous-browed and big-headed men who ought to have been on the first line of megalocephalic distinction.

* * * * *

The idea of the Daily News writer is that the only way to arrive at correct conclusions on the relation of heads to brains in women, is for intellectual women to bequeath their skulls to the Royal College of Surgeons ; as Miss Cobbe did by one codicil to her will, but afterwards revoked it by another (second thoughts, &c.). The collection in the college is principally made up of the skulls of murderesses and female paupers. Intellectual women out of these categories are unrepresented. But will intellectual women of the desired class be likely to follow the example set by Miss Cobbe in her first codicil ? I have doubts about it. Not many marriageable spinsters make wills, and those who are in a position to bequeath property would hesitate before they put such a gruesome obligation on their executors as this suggested legacy of their skulls. A clever but unpropertied woman within marriageable age (and I never knew where that limit could be satisfactorily fixed) would hesitate still more before she made the College of Surgeons or any anatomical exhibition the reversionary legatee of her head, even after she had done with it. For by marriage (which every woman looks upon as a probability) her will would become waste paper ; and even if the law were to be altered in that respect, what woman would like her husband and children to know that they had only a sort of tenancy pur autre vie of her head, and that the reversioners in fee would exhibit it in a glass case ?

* * * * *

After all we should not be angry with Mr. M'Elhone, nor should Mr. Abigail be too hard upon him for drawing attention to that amiable weakness which the Minister for Mines displayed at Orange. We must of course, condemn the manner ; but we have ceased to expect anything pleasant from Mr M'Elhone. No one supposed that Mr. Abigail had betaken himself to a low publichouse ; or if any here or there doubted for a moment it was only because they felt that in going to any place less aristocratic than the Masonic Hall, Mr. Abigail must have bowed to hard necessity and the requirements of all tuneful souls other than those that have sought grace through the Salvation or Blue Ribbon Armies. But had it not been for the action of Mr. M'Elhone we might never have known of that little redeeming weakness. Mr. Abigail has always been considered to be such a pattern of all the virtues that we began to feel that he was a silent reproach to us. We now find that he not only goes cheerfully to a "social gathering" but when there sings a song, and even that in the opinion of the company, he sings it very well. We may even begin to hope for supplementary particulars, and to know something of the accompaniment —musical and otherwise.

* * * * *

But what is even more important to us than the fact that Mr. Abigail "obliged the company," is the suggestion that our political customs may undergo considerable modification. Hitherto it has been the habit of Cabinet Ministers, even at social gatherings, to improve the occasion by demonstrating to the company that they are members of the best of all possible governments, to review policy, and end by a few graceful allusions to the resources of the district, and assurances that the Government have their eyes most steadfastly fixed upon it and their minds made up to supply all local wants. Mr. Abigail introduces us to a different state of things altogether, and leads us to speculate upon the value of the Gilbert and Sullivan operas, less as amusing works than as serious prophecies. We do not, of course, know what theme it was which inspired Mr. Abigail's tuneful strains ; but we may imagine a poem devoted to the praise of irrigation and smiling cornfields, fertile pastures and drowsy cattle, or at least a hymn in which were shadowed the glories and riches which shall follow from the new and perfect Mining Act which the Minister is supposed to be incubating. But we may go further. We are sometimes told that in the coming years Australians, favoured by climate, will develop vocal powers even beyond those of the Italians. Under these circumstances the musical practice, not yet tuneful, of our school-children will be turned to useful account. The discord of a general election will become harmony. The chairman of election gatherings will no longer invite candidates to expound their views in prosaic fashion. A scheme of taxation will develop into a cantata ; when women get the franchise Parliament itself may become a national opera ; the sale of tickets will enable us to pay off the deficit ; and the Governor will be petitioned to invite Mr. Inglis to undertake the duties of Prime Minister.

* * * * *

I was so favourably impressed by M. Blanchet's performance in "La Joie de la Maison" that I may be forgiven for expressing a certain amount of disappointment with "Le Voyage de M. Perrichon." It may be that M. Blanchet has heard that we like to be amused, and with a pardonable desire to make his points obvious to an audience which does not always catch them, he may have adopted a method which is perhaps somewhat different to that which he would have chosen in his own country. But after all we go to the French comedy to witness a class of acting of which we have heard much but which we have little opportunity of seeing, and M. Blanchet's M. Perrichon hardly seemed to me to give us the M. Perrichon that we find in the book. M. Perrichon is surely unconscious of his own mean qualities, and ceases to be amusing when he expects us to laugh at him. Nor is the habit of the company generally of taking into their confidence an audience, whose presence they recognise, entirely happy. Altogether the play was something of a disappointment, and I would add one thing more—that four or five people should march down to the footlights in a line may be in accordance with the best French traditions ; but, especially when the dialogue becomes humorous, it is apt to recall to an English audience the memory of Mr. Johnson and the two funny men at the corners.

T.
J.

IN THE HOUSE.

There is no more irritating word in our tongue than the monosyllabic substantive "knot." Even when the initial letter is removed—when, in the language of conundrums, the word is "beheaded"—the negative adverb remaining is phenomenally cross-grained and unaccommodating. But it is not with the old-time knot with which the name of Alexander is inextricably interwoven, nor even with the connubial tie which our own Sir Alfred Stephen desires to simplify, that the present paragraph has to deal. It is with the Parliamentary knot that resulted from Mr. Young's leaving the Speaker's chair on Tuesday afternoon, shortly after the House met. The result of this abdication was a marvellous exhibition of low comedy with a woof of seriousness running through it. For a time it appeared as if the Lord of Misrule had complete sway. How the incident arose has been already detailed in the papers so that it is necessary to merely advert to it here. Mr. Buchanan, a member of notoriously reticent proclivities, became pregnant with the conviction that the chair was entirely too large for the Speaker's capacité—that Mr. Young wobbled in it, and in a word, didn't fill it satisfactorily. With the Central Cumberland representative to think is to act ; so he placed on the business paper a motion to the effect that, although Mr. Young might serve as a model in other walks of life—though he might be an indulgent parent, an upright citizen and an astute merchant—as Speaker of the New South Wales Legislative Assembly he was a dismal failure. On Tuesday the motion was brought forward, when, with the concurrence of the House, Mr. Young vacated the chair, and Mr. Cameron—looking none the worse for his recent and dangerous illness—occupied it. Then occurred an hour's political casuistry that would have delighted the old philosophers who reasoned and wrangled under the Portico of Athens, or the more recent schoolmen who, profitably no doubt to themselves, passed the period from the 5th to the 15th century in pleasantly arguing in a circle, and who would have probably continued in the same tempting round but for the ominous signs from Northern Europe that their long night of sophistry and chicane was drawing to a close.

* * * * *

Mr. Buchanan contended that the Speaker had no right to vacate the chair under the circumstances. This contention was so obviously sound that the Central Cumberland member saw ranged on his side representatives who, as a general rule, studiously avoided his political company. It was clear that if Mr. Young could not vacate his seat, Mr. Cameron could not occupy it. "Excuse me, Mr. Cameron," insinuated Mr. M'Elhone, with something like regret, "but you've no business there." Mr. A. Allen alluded somewhat regretfully to the extreme difficulty of pleasing everybody — if the Speaker had not left some members would no doubt have condemned his bad taste in remaining. To be all things to all men is given to few. For half-an-hour or more members rose to points of order much as in an old harpsichord with the top removed, one might see the wee padded strikers jump up and strike the wires when the performer touched the keys. It was the best possible Parliamentary example of an Irish row—when you see a head hit it, without inquiring too minutely who possesses the accompanying trunk. As a personal favour, Mr. Cameron requested Mr. Buchanan to put his (Mr. B's—how the want of a full armoury of personal pronouns is felt by all writers in this much-vaunted Anglo-Saxon tongue of ours,) objection in writing. But Mr. B. knew better. To put on paper what you have to say is a dangerous practice. This is how matters stood at about 5 p.m. on Tuesday—there was no Speaker, ergo, there was no House. It was, therefore, impossible to proceed with business ; it was equally impossible to adjourn. In fact, the Parliament of New South Wales found itself for the first time in a cul-de-sac, where advance was blocked by a dead wall and retreat cut off by an ever-widening moat. To Mr. Dibbs belongs the credit of throwing a bridge over the ditch behind, and so providing for a retreat with all the honours of war. During a blizzard in America a canal barge with three passengers was endangered by the violence of the tempest, when one of the travellers suggested that a plank might be run out from the starboard side to the bank, some 6ft. away. The plank proposed by Mr. Dibbs was the return of Mr. Young, who accordingly came back, ousted Mr. Cameron, and requested Mr. Buchanan to proceed with his condemnatory proposal. Even then there was a hitch. It was gravely suggested that whatever right the Speaker had to leave, he had none at all to return. This was too great a refinement of casuistry, and so one of the drollest interruptions to which a deliberative assembly of representative men has ever been subjected passed harmlessly away.

* * * * *

Mr. Buchanan's charge was a comprehensive one. As a sample of what was coming, he began by mildly asserting that "the Speaker had never given a decision which was not absolutely wrong." This is probably an exaggeration, for the simple reason that it is an impossibility. Some men, it is true, have a natural aptitude for embracing wrong views ; still, they occasionally espouse right ones. Nothing short of inspiration would make a man always run "crooked," and there is no evidence to show that Mr. Young is so inspired. One of Mr. Buchanan's grievances was that the Speaker had ruled the word "hifalutin" out of order. The advice given by the peevish little Pope over a hundred and fifty years ago comes in opportunely (the words are from memory, and may be incorrect in an adjective or so) :—

> "In words, as fashions, the same rule will hold
> Alike fantastic if too new or old ;
> Be not the first by whom the new is tried
> Nor yet the last to leave the old aside."

Whether "hifalutin" will ever secure a place in our lexicons it would be impossible to say. Swift ridiculed "mob" and other substantives, which have now obtained as firm a footing in our tongue as his own "Yahoo." The noun to which Mr. Young seems to have taken exception has certainly little to recommend it either to eye or ear. Its etymology is uncertain, its meaning hazy ; still, it might be suffered to pass in a conclave that tolerates "bilk 'em" and "tiddly-winking." Regarding Mr. Ives, who had injudiciously interpolated something, Central Cumberland delicately responded that what puzzled him most was how Mr. Ives could be properly classified in the wide domain of natural history—whether as a "creeping thing or a four-legged animal." This sort of repartee may make the vulgar laugh, but, parbleu ! how it makes the judicious—those jealous of Parliamentary decorum—to grieve.

* * * * *

The Premier's response was in his best vein. It was calm and argumentative. Some things he certainly said which old men will endorse and young ones dispute. He referred to Mr. Gladstone and to Prince Bismarck, and asked where their successors were to be found. Similar questions have been asked since the twilight of trustworthy history, and answered in the only way they could have been—by finding successors. In the domains of politics and of war there has rarely been a statesman or a soldier who had not an equal to fill his shoes. The fact is, statesmen and soldiers imagine that their callings are the highest ; whereas for every person worthy to walk in the footsteps of Gibbon or of Voltaire a hundred might be found (were the times propitious) to succeed Chatham or Bonaparte. What is Gladstone or Bismarck for that matter, compared with Faraday or with Franklin ? To a reflective man one of the most delightfully facetious pieces of assumption extant is the assumption of politicians that theirs is the human calling that requires the highest and rarest faculties. One of these days a giant Edison or Tyndall will arise to treat their claims for pre-eminence much as Gulliver the clamour and conflagration of Lilliput. Fifty-five members asserted their private conviction that Mr. Young was an ideal Speaker, while a forlorn five, including Mr. Buchanan, thought him one of the hugest of antipodean anachronisms.

On Wednesday Mr. Hesson demanded to hear more of one Mr. Foley, who, at Broken Hill, engaged to drink six pints of beer in as many minutes and failed. The cause of the failure was owing to the intervention of one constable Death, who beckoned Foley away and would take no excuse. The Premier very properly responded that men were, or were supposed to be, reasoning beings, and that the punishment for any infraction of natural laws might fitly be left to Rhadamanthine nature herself. This is as it should be. Teach a man by all means that, by transgressing certain obvious natural canons, he will have to pay for it sooner or later. Then, if he will insist on persisting,—why, let him. Mr. Waddell appeared in a new rôle—the mover of an adjournment. His anxiety took the form of a desire to know why certain Crown lessees, who were entitled to a refund of money from the Treasury, could not obtain it. It was one of those awkward questions that could not be answered by a straight "Yes" or an emphatic "No." Simple people think that all questions can be answered by a frank affirmative, or an equally decided negative. Not so. Let an affectionate husband answer either Yes or No to the question, "Have you left off beating your wife yet ?" and reflect upon the position in which either response will put him. That the lessees were entitled to the refunds no one seemed prepared to deny. Why the refunds were not paid no one appeared prepared to assert. On the part of the Government, Mr. Burns hinted that he was merely waiting for some aggrieved person to bring a test case to the Law Courts. It seems a little hard that land measures open to misrepresentation are constantly passed by the House, and that the onus of discovering the meaning of such laws is thrown on the unfortunate lessees. As an illustration of the agrarian legislation which seeks to settle on the land a sturdy yeomanry, it is not too much to say that no Crown tenant in New South Wales is really safe. The Government of the day, instead of finding out at their own expense the law's interpretation, throws that burden on him. One would think that having passed a law, the least the authorities might do would be to explain it.

After the violent explosion of a few weeks ago, there seemed to be a gradual rapprochement between Sir Henry Parkes and Mr. Neild, but judging by Wednesday's sitting, their views on land taxation are hopelessly irreconcilable. The Paddington member, for instance, thought it grotesquely objectionable to tax land and let go free the tenements placed upon it. In fact, he appeared more than lukewarm on the subject of a land tax at all. The Premier's speech, on the other hand, might have been printed and inserted in the very centre of a book that probably contains as many truths, and certainly as many errors, as any volume (always barring Croker's edition of Boswell) published during the present century—George's "Progress and Poverty." "Land," said Sir Henry, "is given to us for the use of all, given to us without any effort of our own, and as much for our use as the atmosphere we breathe, and just as indispensable to our existence." If this could not be inserted in a future edition of the "San Francisco Prophet's" work, then that work has been misunderstood. Thus while the Premier showed his acquiescence in one prominent feature of the Georgian codes, Mr. Neild evinced his dissatisfaction with another feature equally prominent—the taxing of lands irrespectively of the tenements erected on them.

The third reading of the Land Tax Bill monopolised Thursday. A few crackers, however, were let off before members fairly settled down to the argumentative tug-of-war. Mr. Abbott related how, for the due administration of justice in a distant country town, 12 wooden forms were required. No one having interrupted by recalling Sydney Smith's primeval joke concerning the town council's supplying the wood by "putting their heads together," Mr. Abbott was allowed to proceed. By some mistake, the forms were ordered in Sydney as well as from an honest tradesman in the rustic hamlet where they were required. The Sydney dozen came to twice the price of the locally-manufactured 12, and, as the cost of transit about equalled the country price, the unoffending metropolitan 12 were delivered at just three times the price of the others.

Mr. Abigail explained. A rumour was abroad that during his recent visit to Orange he had sung, sung a song—sung it in a pothouse without any accompaniments save the customary accompaniments of such places—quart pots and bucolic hiccups. All this the Minister circumstantially denied. He had sung in Orange it was true, but who would not sing in such a pure atmosphere and surrounded by such company ? Besides, his song was encored, and it was too bad to think that because a man accepted a portfolio he was to relinquish harmony. The Orange magnates who heard him said they'd never heard such a song or voice—which is far from improbable. Again, it was not at a pothouse but in the Masonic Hall he had chirruped ; it was not to an audience of frowsy swagmen, but to the crême de la crême of the district, including the Mayor and aldermen, he had warbled. In fact, his hearers unhesitatingly allowed that, for originality combined with artlessness, they couldn't call to mind anything to compare with the Minister's ditty and execution. At this stage Mr. O'Sullivan broke in with an entirely uncalled for "encore, let's hear it again." When one reflects upon it, it does seem a little hard that a Minister of the Crown cannot sing to a rural town council without being asked to favour Parliament with a rehearsal.

Mr. Neild expressed alarm to think that any remark of his could be construed as deprecating a tax on land. As a matter of fact his unalterable opinion was that nothing offered a fairer field than dry ground for the imposition of a telling tribute. How he could have been so far misunderstood was to him a matter of keen regret as well as of profound surprise. Mr. Melville insinuated that as Ministers had taken to music the responsibility for prolonging the session did not lie with the Opposition. Some very plain statements regarding the absence of the Minister for Lands were indulged in. At a late hour Mr. M'Elhone held the ear of the House, and was bawling into it a variety of statements whose meaning it was impossible to misunderstand.

The first few hours of last night's sitting saw the rapid passing of quite a number of private measures. One dealt with the desirableness of allowing the municipal authorities of Parramatta to acquire and work quarries within a certain radius of that old and fastidious settlement. Mr. Frank Smith asked with some feeling if anything was better calculated to give a person a jaundiced view of life than the having a quarry opened in the neighbourhood of his back door. He drew a melancholy picture of the feelings of an elderly citizen—a man who had chosen a quiet spot to spend the evening of his days after a life of adventure in the retail trade—on observing a sturdy navvy passing his hall door with some sticks of dynamite and a crowbar. With the exception of a powerful quartz-mill, it is doubtful whether there is any more noisily demonstrative neighbour than a flourishing quarry. In spite of Mr. Smith's forcible appeal, the bill passed, and with it the adaptability of Parramatta as a place of retirement for those in pursuit of a locality conducive to meditation and repose. A measure to allow town councils the privilege of borrowing money under certain circumstances went through with a celerity indicative of a desire on the part of Parliament to remove all obstacles from the path of struggling bodies anxious to run into debt. A small measure intended to allow the sale of some church property in the vicinity of Cooma was favourably and rapidly considered. Years ago the land was set apart for devotional purposes, the assumption at the time being that Cooma would grow round the plot, and raise its value in both a religious and a monetary sense. But growing towns are as fickle as grown females, and Cooma was no exception. It developed in an entirely opposite direction, until at last the church was left helplessly bogged some miles away. This should be a warning to those who are in the habit of expressing positive opinions regarding the route an Australian hamlet will follow.

The after-dinner deliberations, having struggled through a spasmodic quarter-hour, ended in an ignominious fizzle. Mr. Haynes had the House's ear, and was treating it to some wholesome truths when attention was invited to the slender attendance. At frequent intervals during the succeeding 10 minutes corridors and passages, lobbies and lounges resounded with the Speaker's warning summons. All to no purpose. For a moment—and for a moment only—a quorum would be completed. Then would Mudgee's representative approach the table, take up the thread of his interrupted argument, flip his fingers in contemptuous indifference to the claims of ecclesiasticism—the measure under discussion was of a sacerdotal character—whatever its hue, and retire baffled to his corner as the ominous "I beg to call attention to the state of the House" arose with persistent malignity from yawning listeners. At last a painful silence followed the Sergeant-at-Arms' most vigorous tintinabulation, and the second Chamber of the Parliament of New South Wales stood adjourned.

MEETINGS.

CONFERENCE ON THE LAND QUESTION.

In the saleroom at the Exchange, last evening, a conference, promoted by the Commercial, Pastoral, and Agricultural Association of New South Wales, was held. The purpose of the conference was to discuss the land question, and to suggest amendments to the Act now in operation. Mr. W. M'Millan, M.L.A., presided, and in opening the meeting said that he need hardly say that it was with feelings of great pleasure that he presided at that meeting, in the absence of the worthy president of the Commercial, Pastoral, and Agricultural Association. With regard to the business of the meeting he, understood that the desire was that it should not be of a formal character, but that it should partake more of the character of a committee of the whole, where every one could express his opinions freely. He had not prepared any formal address, because of the character of the meeting ; but, at the same time, he would like to make a few remarks. They might be useful. And he might say that his remarks would be the result of his attendance in his place in the Assembly, and also the result of the little thought he had given to the great question of land legislation. He would like those interested in this question to think of the enormous difficulty which surrounded it. They were now asked to deal with this question after years of mismanagement, misgovernment, and legislation upon false principles. They had inherited this mass of complications from previous generations. The question was one which on all sides was studded and bristled with difficulties, consequently he would like those gentlemen who had purchased knowledge upon this matter not to imagine that the question was one that was to be judged or settled from their own small sectional point of view or from the peculiarity of the occupation of the land in any particular portion of the colony. He would like them to understand that in dealing with the matter they must all be prepared to compromise in the matter of legislative opinion, in order that the subject might be dealt with in a broad and general way. Now, that simply meant this, that if they were to effect the purpose they desired—that was to bring about land legislation of the character that would be acceptable to the people of this country—they must all be ready to compromise to a certain extent, for he held that it would be better to have half a loaf than no bread at all. That at any rate would be much better than for them to attempt to attain some ideal land legislation which would be of an utterly incompatible character. If they could not get all they desired they should be satisfied with the nearest approach to what they considered to be justice, and they must all be determined to accept that and make the best of it. This matter of land legislation ought to have been initiated at a earlier part of the present session of Parliament, and then, instead of having the elaborate bill which had been introduced, they should, it seemed to him, have taken the Land Act of 1884, and by an Amending Bill, which would in all probability have passed, they would have got a large portion of the full justice they asked. One of the great facts which lie at the root of land settlement was not so much to legislate with a view to extract money from the tenants in the shape of rent or purchase as the endeavour that should be made to get the people on to the soil of the country. It was a deplorable mistake in dealing with the lands of the country in that they had forgot to induce or to encourage to come to the colony the middle class English farmer, who, by his skill, his capital, and long hereditary knowledge and experience, would have entirely remodelled the face of the country. (Hear, hear.) He always liked to speak plainly. He did not know whether or not there were at that meeting representatives of a large section of the farmers of the country, but he had said before in another place, and he would say it again, that it was not so much protection the farmers of this country wanted as skill and industry. He said most distinctly that the farmers of this colony are behind in the matter of skill, industry, and in general intelligence a great many of the farmers of New Zealand or Victoria. It was far better for them to look at the matter fairly, and see what are their faults. He considered that he would be unfaithful to his trust as a member of Parliament if he did not say clearly what he thought upon this matter. He said most distinctly that this matter had much to do with the complaints that had been made regarding the want of agricultural progress in the colony. Another important matter mooted at the last meeting of the association was the question of the expiring leases in the Eastern Division of the colony. This was indeed a difficult question—not only a difficult, but an important question—because it would, he feared, give rise to a great deal of class feeling. There could be no doubt that in matters of this kind legislation was very difficult, and of serious consideration to those men who were anxious in promoting what they believed to be the general interest of the country. They could not but regret that they should have to contend with class feeling, which was often found to lie at the bottom of a great many agitations. When they came to deal with the question of leases in the Eastern Division of the colony it should be their endeavour to do justice to all. In considering the matter they would have to remember what these people had done to develop the country—a matter which was deserving of consideration as much as the public works which the Government had caused to be carried on or constructed. There could be no doubt that before the settlement of this question a great deal of class feeling will have been engendered, and it will require a great deal of conciliatory policy and moderation to bring about a fair and equitable adjustment of this important question. There was another subject to which he would allude. It was the question which was made the subject of a motion for the adjournment of the House the other night, on which occasion he was unable to attend in his place. They were all well aware that under the Land Act of 1884 a man who was assessed at the minimum had the right of appeal. When Mr. Farnell passed the bill and divided the squattages of the country he thought he would be able to arrange matters in an equitable way in about six months, but instead of six months it took two or three years before the work of adjustment was completed, or rather that that time had elapsed before the appeals against the rents could be heard, therefore the question arose whether those men who had had their rents reduced should have the refund made to them upon the amount they had paid as the fixed minimum. He had no hesitation in saying, as a member of the Assembly, and also as, he hoped, a man of common sense, that to act equitably and to carry out the intention of the Act the refund should undoubtedly be made. If any Government, from the fact that it found itself in financial difficulties, tried by means of a technical or legal quibble to keep back or decline to refund the money that had been paid to them in good faith by the public, it was nothing less than a national repudiation. Questions such as this, and, in fact, all questions, should be judged in the light of justice, and not in the light of the peculiar difficulties of the country. The men who had brought about the deficiency in the public accounts—men who belonged to both sides of the House—those were the parties who were to be blamed for the present result. He did not fix the blame upon one particular Ministry, he simply said that from the time the country had a surplus those in charge of affairs had lost their heads, and they did not know where they were until they found themselves landed with a deficit. That surplus in the revenue was the greatest curse that had ever happened to the country. He was glad to have noticed that there had of late been a better understanding between the different classes who occupied the soil. This association was not acting in the interest of any one party, but in the interests of all, they believing that what was injurious to one party would be injurious to all. Years ago it was a difficult matter to get a squatter to allow his land to be touched for mining purposes, but now they found the squatter going hand-in-hand with those who were carrying on mining investigation and explorations with a view to realising the wealth of the country. He believed that the land question overshadowed all other questions, free trade and protection included. He was in favour of a combination of those members of the House who are interested in the land question, and not for those who were supposed to be representing some interests to be opposing each other. He would do all he could, as a member of the Assembly, to promote the interests of those connected with the land, no matter to what class they belonged.

Mr. A. W. BUCKNELL said that he had been a squatter for 44 years, and there was nothing which grieved him so greatly as the awful muddle that had been made with our Crown lands. (Hear, hear.) He thought they had sold 20 millions of acres of Crown lands to about 500 freeholders, who each held 30,000 acres and upwards. In the next place they had grown a patch of pine scrub covering an area of 20,000,000 acres, and they had so managed the land law that four-fifths of the selectors had sold to the big owners—(hear, hear)—under the Land Act of 1884, he believed that there were 60,000,000 acres of Crown lands kept open waiting for settlement now, and anyone who knew the country must know that these Crown lands while they were allowed to remain unsettled were constantly deteriorating. Perhaps, from 1,000,000 to 2,000,000 acres would be taken up by selectors and homestead lessees, but in 10 years time no more land would be taken up, as no more would be worth taking up. They would have one-fourth of the Crown lands heaped up in big estates, and another fourth would not be workable at all, because they would be covered with pine scrub, prickly pear, and rabbits. (Hear, hear.) The present state of the land law was paralysing pastoral industry and the investment of capital in the colony. (Hear, hear.) He had heard it stated by one of the inspectors of conditional purchases that if the country was to continue in the way it was going now, they would have a lot of impoverished tenantry, because the lessees and selectors were so harassed by the existing state of the land law that they could not manage at all. They paid for grass and for water, and when they got neither how could they be expected to pay ? He felt a most profound conviction, which he had always felt, that the Crown lands of the colony should have been let on improvement leases. The men who used the land should have been forced to improve it. Indeed there would have been no forcing in the matter, because the lessees, if proper regulations had been made, and fair leases given them, would have improved the land for their own benefit, and thus it would have been rendered very much more valuable by being cleared of noxious pine scrub and weeds and destructive vermin. If the Government gave the lessees a chance, and did not charge them such dreadful rents, and if scrub leases were granted wherever the Government could do so, the position of the lessees would be improved, and if scrub leases were granted now the land would be cleared ; but if delay was allowed to occur in the matter, they would never get rid of the pine scrub at all. Mr. Garrett's bill, if it had passed, might have been an improvement ; but he altogether objected to the Minister for Lands having the power to override the decision of the local land boards. They should press for a good tenure for the land, and they should also press for the rent which the land boards had fixed both for the squatters and selectors, and also that scrub leases should be granted wherever the Government could do so. (Applause.)

Mr. H. C. FRASER moved the following resolution,—"That this meeting expresses its great regret that the present session of Parliament is about to close without any substantial reform being effected in the Land Act of 1884, as many questions of the greatest importance still remain in an unsettled and unsatisfactory state." As the country progressed so did the town, and as a city man he might tell them that when the Land Bill was before the House, and more particularly the 18th clause, business in the city increased, and everybody hoped and anticipated that they were going to have a very bright future. It was thought that this abominable land question would be for ever settled, and that people would turn to and improve their property, thereby improving everything, connected with the land of the country, and that the people of the city would benefit therefrom. But what did they find ? Why, that the depression during the last two years was such as he had never known before during his experience extending over the last 35 years, and all owing to the way in which the Land Act of this colony was administered. (Hear, hear.) He firmly believed that, if the Land Office was closed and every squatter and selector had his land given to him by deed, the country would have been benefitted thereby. The rent of the land was fixed by Parliament, but they found that the Minister had power, or assumed the power, to override the law. How was it possible that the squatters, after five years of drought, during which they had encountered heavy losses in cattle and sheep, could afford to pay heavy rents ? (Hear, hear.) It all meant a decrease in the individual wealth of the people, and thereby the national wealth of the country generally. (Hear, hear.) The land belonged to the people, and the sooner it was occupied productively by the people the better—(hear, hear)—but there would be no decrease in the present depression under which the colony laboured until something was done. Another great injustice was that lessees received no compensation for improvements. In Victoria everything was prosperous, and the price they were getting for suburban property was something past believing. (A voice : "What is the cause of it ?") It was not protection. But he was not going to bring that up now. If there was a fair and equitable Land Act there would be no necessity for any change in our fiscal system. The rents must be altered because the Crown lessees could not live under them, and he hoped the time was not far distant when the matter would be settled by Parliament upon a permanent basis. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. T. HUNGERFORD seconded the resolution. He had narrowed watched the progress of land legislation throughout, and he felt that never was there an epoch when good land legislation was required as at the present time. They had a Government coming forward and attempting to legislate on behalf of the country upon a question about which they knew nothing whatever—(hear, hear)—and they had a Minister for Lands taking upon himself to fix the rents, when a sworn and competent body had stated what a fair rent would be. Their land legislation was driving out the energy, intelligence, and capital of the people, and men of means were going into Queensland, where every encouragement was given to enterprise. (Hear, hear.) There was no individual, high or low, that was not interested in this question of a fair and equitable adjustment of the land laws of the colony, but he feared that any improvement was not likely to be carried out in the present state of things. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. G. WHITLEY said that the impression made upon his mind by attending that meeting was that Sydney was a capital place for talking, for the people there seemed to do nothing else. When the Act of 1884 was passed there was a howl that it was an unjust Act, but since then they had done nothing in Sydney but talk about it, and if they went into Parliament they would find the same thing. They all talked about land legislation being such a mysterious thing. Now there was nothing mysterious about it, but he thought they should set apart a day for prayer for a simple-minded Minister for Lands. They had been burdened with a lot of land jugglers year after year, and they wanted a simple-minded Minister for Lands before anything could be done. Then it was said that there was no knowing what the squatters wanted. He would tell them what they wanted. The first of all they wanted a fair rent. The squatters were thoroughly satified with the rent fixed by the appraisers, and why the Government should not be satisfied with the rent fixed by the appraisers and the land boards he could not understand, because they appointed these people themselves. The appraisers and local land boards who had everything at their fingers' ends fixed the rent, and yet after they had done so, the Minister for Lands sitting in his own office increased the rent to 2d. or 3d. per acre. The next thing the squatters wanted was fixity of tenure, and that was not an unreasonable thing to ask for. The squatters took up back country, often denied themselves food and raiment, and punished their families by taking them out into the wilderness, and they fought the battle of life out there to keep this great city going, and that being so they ought to get fair play. (Hear, hear.) Another thing they wanted was compensation for improvements—(hear, hear)—and their fourth want was that the excess which the squatter had paid during the last three years over and above the rent fixed on appeal should be refunded, and that the Government should not be guilty of repudiation. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. O'SULLIVAN supported the resolution.

Mr. C. E. FETHERSTONHAUGH said that his opinion was that the association had done a good work in their past actions. Their object was to bring about a settlement of the land question, upon a basis that would be satisfactory to all classes.

The CHAIRMAN, in putting the motion, said he believed that the educational influence exercised by the association had been very good.

The motion was carried unanimously.

Mr. C. E. FETHERSTONHAUGH proposed,—"That the action of the present Government, in refusing to pastoral lessees refund of rent paid during the last three years in excess of that finally fixed by the Minister for Lands, is a distinct act of repudiation, which should be strongly condemned by every citizen in New South Wales." He said that the Government might be described as an Administration of "collar," for they seemed to "collar" all they could lay their hands on.

Mr. H. S. BYRNE seconded the motion, and said that to be successful in the matter of land agitation more combination was needed among those interested.

Mr. SMITH, M.L.C., said that so far as his experience went there had been no antagonism between the squatters and selectors and pastoralists, the antagonism was against blackmailers. He believed that had the author of the land laws purposely endeavoured to set people by the ears, he could not have been more successful.

Mr. LESLIE said that it appeared to him that compensation for improvements to be paid out of the public funds would be wrong. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. T. SLATTERY, M.L.A., said that those who agitated against the pastoralists' interest were those who had been a curse to the country—the "blackmailers." It was an insult to say that there was any "magic" or "mystery" in the land question. What was wanted was a Minister of high integrity who could say "yes" or "no," and mean what he said. He believed it would have been a blessing to the country if Mr. J. P. Abbott had the administration of the land affairs. He was an able man, and one who had the confidence of all parties.

The motion was carried unanimously, and a vote of thanks to the chairman closed the meeting.

The monthly meeting of the Charity Organisation Society was held on Wednesday last, under the presidency of Mr. F. C. Griffiths. There were present : Sir A. Roberts, Messrs. J. Keen, C. B. Fairfax, A. H. Maxwell, and the secretary (J. Sidney). After the usual routine business, the secretary brought under notice of the committee the great increase in the number of applicants sent by non-subscribers, entailing a large amount of work and expense in investigating and relieving such as were found genuine. After some discussion as to the objects of the society, which are to prevent indiscriminate and wasteful charity, and, at the same time, protect members against imposition, it was agreed that for the present only cases sent by subscribers could be entertained, unless it was a case of urgency, the funds of the society being inadequate to cope with this additional strain upon its resources. The register for the month showed that during June 198 persons applied for relief : of these 88 were married couples, 36 widows, and 2 deserted women, upon whom 267 children were depending. There were also 3 single women and 63 single men. Several special cases of distress were dealt with, and further allowance of food and, in one case, money granted. The secretary reported receiving parcels of worn clothing, which have been readily disposed of to the numerous applicants for such.

A large and influential meeting was held on the 28th June, at Ticehurst, near Ivanhoe, to consider the railway proposals of the Government, and the announcement that the line from Forbes or Molong to Wilcannia was included in the Government proposals was received with much gratification. A resolution was passed strongly opposing any change in the route proposed to connect Wilcannia with Sydney. The meeting was composed of pastoral and homestead lessees and others representing nearly 4,000,000 acres, and it was pointed out that this was by far the most direct line that could be chosen to connect Wilcannia with Sydney, and that it would cut off a great deal of the trade that now went to Melbourne, and bring it to our own metropolis. The line was one that was not difficult of construction, and would be of immense benefit to the wheatgrowers in the Forbes and Molong district in enabling them to send their produce into the interior, and would confer an equal benefit on those who required the produce.

The monthly meeting of the Steamship Owners' Association of Australasia was held yesterday afternoon in the rooms of the association, O'Connell-street, at which there was a full attendance of members, the chair being occupied by Mr. James Burns (A. U. S. N. Company). The usual routine business being disposed of, the following matters amongst others were discussed :—The present and prospective competition of Government railways with colonial steamship companies, claims against the Government for the carriage of "forward" mails and overpaid shipping office fees, notification by telephone of the arrival of steamers on the coast, the proposal to remove the quarantine station, the collision clause in marine policies.

The installation of the newly-elected officers of the Burwood Masonic Lodge took place on Thursday evening at the Burwood School of Arts. Bro. A. H. Bray, P.M., D.G.S., was the installing master. The following are the officers who were duly installed :—Bro. W. Cornish, W.M. ; Bro. G. E. Russell-Jones, P.M. ; Bro. R. C. Parker, senior warden ; Bro. J. T. Wedderburn, junior warden ; Bro. Kelso King, director of ceremonies ; Bro. W. D. Cansdell, secretary ; Bro. H. B. Simpson, treasurer ; Bro. E. Scholes, senior deacon ; Bro. E. C. Nicholas, inner guard ; Bros. F. Lockyer and W. A. Pratt, stewards ; Bro. J. Findlay, organist ; Bro. H. E. Nealds, tyler. After the ceremony an adjournment was made to the large hall, where supper was laid. This having been attended to, harmony, was indulged in.

A meeting of the electors of Newtown was held last night in the Newtown Town Hall for the purpose of protesting against the exorbitant scale of charges for water fixed by the Water and Sewerage Board. Mr. R. T. Bellemey, Mayor of Newtown, presided. As there was a rather small attendance, there being not more than 20 present, the chairman in a few remarks showed the injustice of the board's rate, especially stating that city property had been very lightly rated in comparison with the suburban property, but he believed that it was the intention of the board to make matters more equitable. He then thanked the gentlemen present for their attendance, and formally closed the meeting.

The Sydney University Union held its weekly meeting on Friday evening. Mr. H. A. Russell, B.A., in the chair. The report of the special committee of the union, with regard to amalgamation with the University Association, was received. Mr. A. G. Saddington, B.A., the leader of the ministry, opened the debate, "That the principles of local option are unjust," and in the course of his remarks dwelt forcibly on the moral aspect of the question. Mr. W. A. Walker, B.A., in support of the question, urged that mere legislation has effected comparatively little, and that all the improvement the world has made is the result of the slow growth of public opinion and the knowledge of right ; that where man has the greatest moral freedom, there he rises to his highest pitch ; that it is not by violent and spasmodic efforts, nor by any drastic measures, but rather by individual efforts and by personal sacrifice that any permanent improvement will be brought about. On behalf of the opposition Mr. R. Windeyer pointed out that people should have liberty, as long as it did not interfere with the rights of their fellow men ; but when this was the case, legislation should step in and guard their rights. Mr. H. Davis said that since a legislative enactment did not last for ever, but changed with changes of opinion and parties, therefore restrictive legislation was not the tyranny it was represented to be. Mr. Russell made a powerful appeal on behalf of the Ministry. On a show of hands being called for, the question was decided in favour of the Ministry. The debate for the following Friday was announced to be, "That the abolition of capital punishment is desirable."

On Wednesday evening last the annual meeting of the St. Leonards Literary and Debating Society was held in the East St. Leonards Town Hall. The chair was occupied by Mr. T. G. Brocklehurst, president. Several gifts were reported, among them being a very handsome speaker's rostrum presented by Mr. D. Fox. The annual report was then considered, and was generally received and spoken to with a great amount of satisfaction. The present condition of the society is very pleasing. Its members now number 109, and the average attendance for the last half-year is 35, against 21 for the previous half ; and in the smoke concerts and other efforts at general entertainment a proportionate success has been attained. After some discussion the report and treasurer's balance-sheet were adopted. The election of officers for ensuing 12 months was then proceeded with, and resulted as follows :—President, Mr. F. J. Cahill ; vice-presidents, Messrs. S. G. Robey and D. Fullarton ; editor of Critic, Mr. L. Taylor ; hon. treasurer, Mr. L. Armstrong ; committee, Messrs. Brocklehurst, Paine, Fox, Crowley, and James ; hon. secretary, Mr. W. R. Church. During the evening the prize for the best essay on free trade, consisting of four volumes of Shakespeare, was presented to Mr. W. K. Keyto. The prize was the gift of Mr. W. A. Payne, and the award was made by Mr. Pulsford, of the New South Wales Free Trade Association. The usual votes of thanks were passed, the name of Mr. T. G. Brocklehurst being especially well received. The syllabus for the coming half-year is, we believe, one of the best ever put forward by the society.

HAY, FRIDAY.

A large and important meeting of selectors was held last night, the Mayor in the chair, for the purpose of considering the administration of the land laws by the local board and by the Minister for lands. The following resolutions were unanimously passed :—"That in the opinion of this meeting the interpretation and administration of the Land Act by the local board is at variance with the spirit of the Act, and is unjust, harrowing, and vexatious to the selectors and lessees, inflicting injury upon them, and preventing settlement on the lands of the district. That a committee of three be appointed to collect evidence of cases of hardship and injustice to selectors in the district, and forward same with resolutions passed at this meeting to members for the district, and that other members of Parliament be respectfully asked to attend to lay same before the Minister for Lands. All the speakers condemned in strong language the way the board was worked, and strongly censured the chairman for the harsh manner in which he treated those who came before him. Mr. John Gale, member for Murrumbidgee, spoke at length on the land question and matters affecting selectors.

PARLIAMENT OF NEW SOUTH WALES.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

FRIDAY, JULY 13.

The SPEAKER took the chair at half-past 3 o'clock.

ANSWERS TO QUESTIONS.

Mr. SUTHERLAND, in reply to Mr. Taylor, said that the estimated cost of the proposed Borenore route of railway between Forbes and Long's corner was £226,712; and between Long's corner and Borenore, £139,038.

Sir HENRY PARKES, in reply to Mr. F. Farnell, for Mr. Nobbs, said that the plans of the alignment of Bay-view-terrace, Meriton-street, and Ashburton-place, at Gladesville, had been examined, and the case would shortly be ready for preliminary notification in the Gazette.

Mr. SUTHERLAND, in reply to Mr. Waddell, said that a wharf was erected at Bourke last year. There were no funds available for the erection of another wharf.

Mr. SUTHERLAND, in reply to Mr. O'Sullivan for Mr. Fletcher, said that any new hands—men without previous experience—employed on the railways were taken on the probationary staff, and paid 6s. per day for six months; if at the end of that time they were found to be efficient, they were paid 7s. per day. The minimum rate for men who had been previously employed was 7s. per day. If they were reemployed in a positions, the minimum wages of which were above 7s., they were paid the minimum of the class they were in.

Mr. SUTHERLAND, in reply to Mr. F. Farnell, said that the question of the route of the proposed Field of Mars tramway was now under consideration by the Government.

Mr. W. CLARKE, in reply to Mr. A. Allen for Mr. Neild, said that the Crown did claim or accept costs in law suits in which the Crown was the successful party; such costs were paid into the Treasury.

BANKRUPTCY ACT AMENDMENT BILL.

Mr. WILLIAM CLARKE moved the third reading of the Bankruptcy Act Amendment Bill.

The motion was agreed to, and the bill was read the third time, and forwarded to the Legislative Council.

CRIMINAL LAW AMENDMENT BILL.

Mr. WILLIAM CLARKE moved the third reading of the Criminal Law Amendment Bill.

The motion was agreed to, and the bill was read the third time, and returned to the Legislative Council.

PARRAMATTA MUNICIPAL QUARRIES BILL.

Mr. TAYLOR moved the second reading of the Parramatta Municipal Quarries Bill. He explained that the bill was a simple one, designed to enable the Parramatta Municipal Council to purchase two allotments of land adjoining the quarries which they now held. This land was useless for any other purpose except as quarries.

Mr. J. P. ABBOTT said that the House was entitled to a fuller explanation of this matter, and until this was given he would do all in his power to prevent the bill getting through. The debate had better be adjourned until a proper plan and description of the land which it was intended to purchase could be laid before the House. He moved that the debate be adjourned until this day week.

Mr. TAYLOR said he would accept the adjournment of the debate.

Mr. MELVILLE said that he trusted the House would not accept the adjournment, as he considered the bill ought to be passed, the powers of municipal councils in these matters being much too small.

After some further discussion the amendment was negatived, and the bill was read the second time.

The House resolved itself into Committee of the Whole to consider the bill in detail.

Clause 1: "Council may purchase land for stone quarries, and make bylaws for regulating same."

Mr. F. SMITH said he was strongly of opinion that the lands mentioned in the bill should be properly described, and he therefore moved an amendment to qualify the word "lands" in the clause by the words "described in the schedule hereto."

After considerable discussion the amendment was withdrawn.

Mr. WALKER moved the omission of the words "not exceeding three miles from the boundary," as he did not consider it was necessary to restrict the council in this way.

The amendment was negatived, and the clause was agreed to.

The remaining clauses of the bill were agreed to, the bill was reported to the House without amendment, and the report was adopted.

PARRAMATTA CHURCH-STREET ALIGNMENT BILL.

Mr. TAYLOR moved the second reading of the Parramatta Church-street Amended Alignment Bill.

The motion was agreed to, and the bill was read the second time, and passed through committee without amendment.

MUNICIPAL LOANS BILL.

Mr. DAY moved the second reading of the Municipal Loans Bill. The bill, he explained, was simply one to enable municipalities to borrow money on lands which they might purchase, on the security of the town hall or other building which they might erect on the site.

The motion was agreed to, and the House went into committee to consider the bill in detail.

All the clauses were agreed to. The title and the preamble were verbally amended and agreed to.

The bill was reported, with the amended title, to the House, and the report was adopted.

COOMA CHURCH OF ENGLAND LANDS SALE BILL.

Mr. DAY moved that the Cooma Church of England Lands Sale Bill, as amended and agreed to in select committee, be read the second time. He pointed out that the bill was introduced in order that certain land purchased for the erection of a church at Cooma might be sold. It appeared that the land was originally purchased under the impression that the town of Cooma would have extended in the direction in which the land was situated, but as the town had extended in the opposite direction, the land was useless for the erection of a church, and they desired to sell it and devote the proceeds to paying off the debt upon the church which had been built in Cooma.

The motion was agreed to. The bill was read the second time, and the House resolved itself into a Committee of the Whole to consider it in detail.

The bill passed through committee, and was reported with two verbal amendments. The report was adopted.

GOULBURN AND TUENA TRAMWAY BILL.

Mr. STEVENSON moved,—"That the Goulburn and Tuena Tramway Bill as amended and agreed to in Select Committee be read the second time." He stated that the bill had been before hon. members for a considerable time, and he hardly thought there would be any opposition to it.

Mr. HAYNES said as far as he understood the railway policy of the Government he considered that the Government would not agree to the passing of a measure such as this.

Mr. ABBOTT said he did not object to the construction of private railways where the public interests were fully conserved; but he should like to hear what the Government had to say with regard to the undertaking proposed in this bill. He would suggest that as the close of the session was so near at hand the hon. member should not press the bill on.

Mr. BURNS said he considered the House had not sufficient information with regard to this matter, and he would therefore move "That the debate be adjourned until Monday."

Mr. JEANNERET opposed the adjournment of the debate, and pointed out that the tramway in question was badly needed to enable the mining operations in the district to be carried on. He believed that unless the bill was passed this session it would not be passed at all.

After some discussion the debate was, on the motion of Mr. J. P. ABBOTT, adjourned until Monday next.

CHURCH OF ENGLAND PROPERTY BILL.

Mr. WISE moved that the Church of England Property Bill be now read the second time. The bill originated in the Legislative Council, and was there passed unanimously, and almost without amendment. It was founded upon the report of a select committee appointed by the Legislative Council, and the design of it was to carry out, as far as could be ascertained, the wishes of most of the members of the Church of England. There was nothing in any of the provisions of the bill that could give rise to any serious opposition. The object of the measure was merely to confer upon the Church of England as a body the same rights in dealing with matters relating to that body as were already possessed by the Presbyterian and Congregational bodies, as well as by the Sydney diocese of the Church of England, in dealing with matters belonging to those bodies. The bill merely extended to country dioceses the same rights as were conferred by the Sydney Bishopric and Church Property Act of last session upon the diocese of Sydney. The measure would enable the various dioceses to deal with land and buildings—whether consecrated or not—the original purposes of which had changed through circumstances it was impossible to anticipate—as, for instance, cases where land had been set apart for a church, and the population had gone past the spot originally granted for the erection of a sacred edifice. In no case could land or buildings be dealt with under the bill unless first of all the Synod, and secondly the Bishop of the diocese, approved of what was proposed to be done. In some cases the consent would also have to be obtained of the incumbent and churchwardens of the parish. Every safeguard was provided to prevent lands from being carelessly diverted from the purposes for which they were originally granted.

Mr. HAYNES rose to a point of order. He maintained that the bill should be a public bill, and not a private measure, because it swept away three or four public measures and dealt with the public interests of this country. The bill if passed would practically wipe out the provisions and powers of the Church of England Temporalities Act, and would also come into conflict with the Acts No. 7 of William IV., and No. 8 of William IV. As far as he could see no bill of the same character had ever come from the Upper House to this Chamber.

Mr. ABIGAIL said there could be no doubt that the bill now under consideration would clearly override the provisions of the Church of England Temporalities Act, and come into conflict with other measures.

Mr. SPEAKER said he did not know of a single precedent for this House, or the chair of this House, ruling out of order a bill which had come from the Legislative Council. It had always been the practice to consider as having been regularly introduced a bill which came from the Legislative Council to the Legislative Assembly, and when it came to this chamber they received it, subject to their standing order No. 69, which was in these terms:—"Private bills coming to this House the first time from the Legislative Council, if accompanied by printed copies of the reports and proceedings of the select committees to which they may have been referred, shall be proceeded with in all respects as public bills 'presented' in pursuance of orders of this House, unless the House shall otherwise order." Therefore, it seemed to him that power was entirely taken away from the Chair with reference to this particular bill. The arguments used by the hon. member on his point of order might be very good arguments to advance as to whether the bill should or should not be read the second time. It seemed to him that it was beyond the power of the Chair to rule any bill which came from the Upper House out of order, although it might be liable to a preliminary objection if introduced in this House.

Mr. ABIGAIL said that with the consent of the hon. gentleman who had charge of the bill he would move that the debate be adjourned until Tuesday next.

Mr. HAYNES rose to speak, and attention was called to the state of the House several times, and ultimately, there being no quorum present, the House adjourned at one minute past 8 o'clock till 3 o'clock p.m. on Monday.

The following members were present:—Sir Henry Parkes, Messrs. Wall, Melville, Hawken, Jeanneret, Barbour, H. H Brown, Day, Haynes, See, Ives, Stevenson, Burns, Teece, Inglis, Roberts, Sutherland, and Waddell.

NEW NOTICES.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.—TUESDAY, JULY 17.

Mr. O'Sullivan to move,—That the report of the select committee—Messrs. Hugh M'Neill and party—mineral lease at Captain's Flat, brought up on 12th July, 1888, be now adopted.

DEPUTATIONS.

NYNGAN TO COBAR RAILWAY.

Yesterday morning Mr. Waddell, M.L.A., introduced to the Colonial Secretary a deputation in favour of the extension of the railway from Nyngan to Cobar. There were present Messrs. Lyne, De Courcey Browne, Hurley, Wilson, Day, O'Connor, M'Court, Barbour, and Kelly, Ms.L.A., Messrs. Hogan (Mayor of Cobar), Williams (manager of the Great Cobar Mines), Hall and Prince (Nyngan), Kinkead (Cobar), Jones, Kelly, Molyneaux, Gillespie, and Dodds.

Mr. WADDELL said the object of the deputation was to bring before the Government additional reasons for the construction of the railway line from Nyngan to Cobar. The deputation wished to draw attention to the great development of the mining industry around the Cobar district. Many important mines had been discovered there, and some of them had proved payable and permanent mines.

Mr. HOGAN, Mayor of Cobar, said he had much pleasure in placing before Sir Henry Parkes certain statistics which had been collected to show what revenue the Government would be likely to derive from this line. The Cobar line had been passed for some time by both Houses of Parliament, and the people had been anxiously expecting that tenders would have been accepted for its construction, and they were greatly disappointed when they found it was not included in the proposals of the Government. Statistics were collected in 1886, which was not a prosperous year for Cobar, and was hardly a fair average year. It was admitted, however, that in that year 13,433 tons of goods were sent from Nyngan to Cobar, and there was also on the road 4102 tons of coal and copper, and out of that some 1040 tons of wool went down the river Darling to Adelaide, but if the line had been constructed it would have come on to Sydney. There was also in the year in question 600 tons of copper at the mine, and 400 tons at Nymagee. Then there were other goods to be considered, and it was estimated that altogether some 17,535 tons of goods would have passed over the line in one year. The town of Cobar contained a population of 3600 and the town of Nymagee 2000 people, therefore 5000 people were directly interested in the construction of the line. Then, again, the resources of the place would be developed to a very large extent if a railway line was constructed. Since 1886 gold had been discovered in payable quantities in the district, and upwards of 100 men were engaged in prospecting. Cobb and Co. received in the year mentioned no less than £4370 4s. 2d. for the carriage of passengers and parcels. The revenue received at the Lands Office for five months in 1886 was £2062 9s. 3d., and for the same period this year it was £6027 18s. 5d. A large revenue was derived from the post and telegraph office at Cobar. Upwards of 75,000 tons of firewood were consumed annually at the mine, and the carriage of that in itself would prove a source of revenue to the Government. The people of Cobar felt that they had a strong claim for consideration from the Government, and trusted that their claim would receive consideration.

Mr. WILLIAMS, manager of the mine, endorsed the remarks of the previous speaker. He pointed out that there had been paid away a million and a half of money in wages, goods, and machinery at the Cobar mine. There were between five and six hundred people employed there, and the consumption of firewood in carrying on operations was from 70 to 80 thousand tons per annum. It had been stated that the mine was worked out, but he did not think any present would live long enough to see the Cobar mine worked out. If the line was constructed it would prove a great boon to the district and to the mine. He considered that the proposal was worthy of the attention of the Government, for he believed if it was constructed it would prove one of the best paying lines in the colony.

Messrs. HALL, PRINCE, and TRAVERS JONES also addressed the Premier briefly in support of the proposal.

Sir HENRY PARKES, in reply to the deputation, said with regard to this particular line it was his duty to again remind them, as he had reminded other deputations, that the circumstance that this line was not included in the statement made to Parliament did not imply that the Government was opposed to it, or that it had been overlooked. The fact was that the number of railways which different sections of the community required were altogether in excess of the number which the Government was prepared to submit to Parliament at this time. With regard to the question as to whether the railway would pay, he thought there was some doubt, looking at the extreme statement made by the Mayor of Cobar. From his statement it would appear that there would not be many more than 1500 producers in the district. A population of 5000 would not give, at an extreme calculation, more than 1500 producers, and to incur an expense of £300,000 for that number would mean a very large sum per man for the State to pay. He did not mean to say that the line should not be constructed, but it was perfectly clear that the Government, to be on sound ground, must look beyond the statement which had been put before him. Under the new change of law with respect to public works, the Parliament of the country had, with its eyes open, created a power for the purpose of sifting calculations such as those which had been put before him. That was the Works Committee. It would be the duty of that committee to ascertain whether the railway would pay or not, and if it was found that the line would not pay it would be the duty of the committee to reject the railway. So that it did not depend upon the proposal of the Government now, but upon the proposal of the Government being sound, and based upon such a sure calculation that it would run the gauntlet of the investigation. The committee which had been created was not for the purpose of being, as it were, an authority to which speculative proposals might be referred, but it had the one province of action to take the proposals made on the responsibility of the Government. He had heard members of the House say, why not submit two or three lines to the committee and let them select what was right. That would be really to divest the Government of its responsibility, and commit its heaviest work to another authority. The committee was not created for that purpose, but for a different one, and that was to check what the Government submitted to Parliament on its responsibility, and to reject any proposal which was not likely to turn out as the Minister represented. With regard to the proposal they had made, he would promise to represent the matter at the next Cabinet meeting, and would see that it was considered. The Government believed the district represented by the deputation was an important one, and its future prosperity pretty well assured. He imagined the railway would have to come very soon. The Government would not be ready to submit to Parliament all the proposals which they were in favour of themselves. They would have to make two submissions, one this session and one in the next session, which was not far distant. He would see that the line which the deputation recommended was considered before they brought their railway proposals before Parliament, and that would be on Wednesday next.

AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY OF NEW SOUTH WALES.

Yesterday morning a deputation, consisting of Messrs. John See, W. J. Lyne, A. Wilson, Ms.L.A., the Hon. R. H. Roberts, and Messrs. G. S. Yeo, G. Maiden, and F. Webster, waited upon the Premier (Sir Henry Parkes), and brought under his notice the necessity of the Government taking steps to give the Agricultural Society some security over or a better tenure of the show-grounds at Moore Park. It was pointed out that the society had received a letter from the City Council intimating that by the conditions of the agreement in existence the show-ground was to be open to the public on all days other than days upon which shows were held, and the council insisted that these conditions should be faithfully adhered to. The deputation now desired the Government to give the society a lease of the ground and invest it properly in trustees.

Sir HENRY PARKES, in reply, said he knew sufficient of all the circumstances to enable him to reply to the deputation without waiting for further remarks. He admitted at once that for the proper conduct of the shows it was necessary that the society should have absolute control over the ground, and it never could be allowed to continue that any one should have the right of entrance against the society's power of control, and so far he was with the association and prepared to take whatever step was necessary to assist in putting the society in the position to control the grounds. He was prepared to do what he could, and would not lose sight of the matter. He would promise to take immediate action as far as putting the Government in communication with the City Council was concerned, and would ascertain what the council intended to do in the matter.

CEMETERY AT BOWRAL.

A deputation consisting of Mr. W. R. Campbell, Dr. Newmarsch, Alderman J. J. Campbell, and Mr. Brown, which was to have waited upon the Minister for Lands, was received at the Lands Office by the Under-Secretary (Mr. C. Oliver) yesterday, with reference to a cemetery at Bowral. The deputation was introduced by Mr. M'Court, M.L.A. It was pointed out that the site of the new cemetery at Bowral was unsuitable; that the drainage from the ground there was carried to the creek which was the source of the water supply for the district; that the ground was liable to be submerged in water, and that its situation was in other respects undesirable. It was also stated that Mr. Deering, the metropolitan district surveyor, had been requested to look into the matter, and that he approved of a site in the vicinity of the Wesleyan burial ground, which would have been universally approved. The site of the new cemetery might, it was urged, be sold, and the proceeds applied to the purchase of ground for the cemetery recommended by Mr. Deering.

Mr. OLIVER remarked that Mr. Deering had made no actual recommendation, but he simply stated that opinion was so much divided regarding a site; that he thought the site should be allowed to remain where it was. He (Mr. Oliver) was not in a position to give any definite promise on the subject. In the first place, it would involve the expenditure of a large sum of money to carry the request of the deputation. He would represent what had been said to the Minister, who would no doubt communicate his decision to the member for the district.

STATUE TO GOVERNOR PHILLIP.

A deputation consisting of Sir Alfred Stephen, Sir William Manning, the Hon. Dr. Garran, Messrs. D. O'Connor, T. M. Slattery, S. Burdekin, Ms.L.A., and E. Greville, waited upon the Premier (Sir Henry Parkes) yesterday for the purpose of asking the Government to erect a statue to the memory of Governor Phillip. Sir Henry Parkes, on receiving the deputation, said he understood that the deputation were in favour of the erection of a statue to the memory of Governor Phillip. Without waiting for any remarks upon the subject he might say at once that the Government intended to invite Parliament to erect a statue. That had been decided upon for the last 12 months. It was their intention to erect a colossal statue in the Centennial Park.

REQUIREMENTS OF SMITHFIELD.

A deputation, introduced by Mr. Frank Farnell, M.L.A., and consisting of Messrs. Nobbs, Day, Colls, and Vaughn, Ms.L.A., waited upon the Premier (Sir Henry Parkes) yesterday, in support of a petition presented a short time ago in favour of the incorporation of Smithfield as a municipal district. The deputation pointed out that the signatures to the petition were the signatures of bona fide residents of the district, and they urged upon the Premier the desirability of taking immediate steps to carry out the wishes of the petitioners. Sir Henry Parkes, in reply to the deputation, stated that he had the papers before him with regard to the matter, and would deal with the question in a few days.

GALONG TO BURROWA RAILWAY.

A deputation from the Galong-Burrowa district waited on the Minister of Works yesterday to advocate the construction of a line of railway from Galong to Burrowa. Mr. Slattery, M.L.A., introduced the deputation, which consisted of Messrs. Colls and Vaughn, Ms.L.A., F. W. Hume, C. L. Hume, Thomas Stevenson, Js.P., R. G. Sweeney, W. Clifton, A. E. Middleton, and T. Morgan.

Mr. SLATTERY, in introducing the deputation, apologised for the unavoidable absence of Mr. M'Elhone and other gentlemen who were to have joined the deputation. He enumerated the claims of the district, amongst which he stated that the amount of money received at the Burrowa Lands Office from January, 1862, to the 30th June last was £404,286, in addition to which a large amount had been paid direct into the Treasury from sales of land by auction.

Mr. F W. HUME explained that there were no engineering difficulties to be encountered, the country through which the line would pass being very flat. The line would be about 16 miles long, and he believed that the departmental estimate, viz., £141,662, was excessive, as the line would cost only about half that amount.

Mr. MIDDLETON furnished statistics to show the extent and importance of the district. In 1877, he said, there were 7200 acres under wheat, and the total area under cultivation now was 10,000 acres. The stock of the district was represented by 2496 horses, 3000 pigs, 4500 cattle, 341,255 sheep. The Burrowa Land Office yielded an annual revenue of about £20,000. He estimated that a light line of railway to meet their requirements would cost £60,000, and he made this estimate taking as a basis what light lines in Victoria cost.

After remarks from other speakers,

Mr. SWEENEY, manager of the Australian Mutual Building Society, stated what their society was doing in the way of improving and subdividing land in the district. They proposed to make 100 farms of 100 acres each, and to irrigate them on the plan of Chaffey Brothers, who were irrigating in Victoria. He was informed that the land at Burrowa was much superior to the land the Chaffey Brothers were irrigating. The society were willing to give any land in their estate required for the construction of the railway.

Mr. C. L. Hume offered to give the land free that would be required on his estate. Mr. Middleton made a similar promise on behalf of Mr. A. D. Middleton.

Mr. SUTHERLAND, in reply, said he had been over the line, and he did not think a line to suit their requirements would cost more than £5000 a mile, though the estimate was £9000. They did not want great speed; they wanted regularity. (Hear, hear.) His opinion was that the Government ought to make cheap lines at first, and afterwards renew them as required. There were to be some cheap lines constructed, and this ought to be made one of them. (Hear, hear.) He would fairly represent the matter to the Cabinet on Monday or Tuesday, if possible, and he would then express the same opinions that he had now expressed. (Hear, hear.)

EXTENSION OF THE BONDI TRAMWAY.

A deputation from the eastern suburbs waited on the Minister for Public Works yesterday in reference to the extension of the Bondi tramway from its present terminus to the beach. The deputation was accompanied by Messrs. Neild, A. Allen, and W. J. Allen, Ms.L.A.

Mr. NEILD, having introduced the deputation, stated that they came to ask for the completion of the original scheme of the Bondi tramway. The line now terminated close to the Bondi Aquarium, and they desired to have it extended to the beach, which was not much more than a distance of 600 yards. This was really not a local requirement so much as a requirement for the people generally in and around Sydney.

Some other gentlemen having spoken,

Mr. SUTHERLAND, in reply, said there was no money available at present for the construction of tramways, but when there was he would bring this matter before the Government. There was no doubt that the line should be completed to the beach.

COURT OF PETTY SESSIONS AT BOWRAL.

Messrs. Farrow, Campbell, Shorter, and Brown constituted a deputation which yesterday waited upon the Minister for Justice, to urge the necessity of establishing a court of petty sessions at Bowral. Mr. M'Court, M.L.A., who introduced the deputation, said that the people of Bowral felt that their request should be granted, as the importance of the place, its growth, and the numerical extent of the population (numbering within the municipality 2000 persons) warranted the demand being made. Bowral was the only municipality in the district. Now if a man was taken in custody for drunkenness, he was handcuffed and marched or taken by train to Mittagong, a thing which ought not to be allowed to continue. The establishment of the court of petty sessions would only cost the Government £10 per year, as the people of the district are willing to provide a place in which the court could be held. The Minister, in reply, stated that the Inspector-General had reported that he did not think a court of petty sessions at Bowral necessary. Mittagong, where there was a court of petty sessions, was only three miles distant from Bowral, and if he consented to the request of the deputation he would have to close that court. He would not, however, come to a decision at once, but would give the matter his best consideration.

PUBLICATIONS RECEIVED.

We have received from the publisher of Chatto and Winders, Piccadilly, their illustrated catalogue of the pictures in the Summer Exhibition of the Grosvenor Gallery, 1888, and also Academy Notes, with illustrations of the principal pictures at Burlington House. Both these publications give the titles and numbers of the pictures shown, with some explanatory remarks about the most noticeable and fac-simile sketches, in most cases by the artists themselves, of the leading works of art exhibited. These reproductions are effected by various new processes, and are intended to give an idea of the composition of the pictures to those who may not visit the galleries, as well as to serve as mementoes for those who have. As nothing is more fatiguing to the eye than to go through a whole exhibition of interesting works of art in a limited time, it can easily be understood that such illustrated guides as these must be of great assistance to visitors, while for those at a distance, like ourselves, they are invaluable as conveying something like the germ of the ideas which the leaders in art are throwing on to the canvas at the other side of the world.

The Henry Irving Dream of Eugene Aram (The Leadenhall press) is a gruesome reprint of Hood's poem in red lettering on black pages, carrying some fantastic illustrations by F. Drummond Niblett of Irving in the character of Eugene Aram. The grotesque imagination of the draftsman has run riot in this mad publication, which contains a letter from Henry Irving expressing his amusement at the drawings, and regretting that the poem has not made a more serious impression upon the artist's mind. The brochure is dedicated to J. L. Toole, the comedian.

The first number of The Surveyor has been sent us. This publication is the journal of the Survey Club, to be published monthly, in which it is proposed that the views of professional men shall have expression. This number contains a paper on the "Declination of the Magnetic Needle," by D. M. Maitland; "Translation of Briot on Stereographic Projection"; a method of ascertaining meridian and latitude; and some editorial and club notices.

LAW REPORT.

SUPREME COURT.—FRIDAY, JULY 13.

In Equity.—(Before his Honor Mr. Justice OWEN, Chief Judge in Equity.)

BLUNT AND OTHERS V. TERRY AND OTHERS.

His HONOR delivered the following extended judgment in the above suit:—

On Wednesday last, at the close of counsel's arguments, I stated that I was prepared to deliver my judgment, but that as the case was very complicated and of great importance to the parties, I would prefer to deliver a written judgment. I was then requested by counsel to adopt a practise not unusual in this Court, and to state at once the conclusions at which I had arrived, and at a subsequent date to state my reasons in writing. I therefore briefly stated that in my opinion the signatures to the several documents impugned were genuine, and dismissed the plaintiff's claim with costs as between solicitor and client. I will now state my reasons for arriving at that conclusion. The main facts of the case are briefly these—Richard Rouse Terry, being the owner of Hoxton Park, near Liverpool, containing 4300 acres, in the month of June, 1886, placed it in the hands of the defendant Wild to find a purchaser, and the price fixed was £3 an acre. Wild thereupon offered the land to Blunt, as he says for £12,500, as Blunt says for £16,000. The terms finally settled, at any rate as between Wild acting for Blunt and Terry, were that £500 should be paid in cash, and £2400 secured by Blunt's promissory note, endorsed by Wild, and £10,000 secured by mortgage. It was arranged that Wild should in the first instance finance the purchase, and he did give his cheque for £100 and £400 and endorsed the promissory note for £2400. Blunt says that the plaintiffs Pickering, Jennings, and Co. were also to assist him in finding the money, and to have 40 per cent. of this interest in the contract. Blunt also says that Wild was to be entitled to one half of the profits of the speculation, the other half to be divided between him and Pickering, Jennings, and Co., in the proportions of 60 per cent. and 40 per cent. Blunt alleges that nothing more was done in reference to the contract till June, 1887, about 12 months after the verbal contract was made; that he never obtained any written contract from Terry, and that when he spoke to Wild about the promissory note when it was about to fall due Wild told him it was all right, and not to trouble himself about it. Wild alleges, on the other hand, that there was a written contract between Blunt and Terry for £12,900, which was undoubtedly signed by Terry, and purports to be signed by Blunt, but Blunt's signature is alleged by him to be a forgery. Wild further says that he was requested by Blunt, after he had entered into the contract, to find him a purchaser for the land, and that he accordingly offered it to the defendant Phillips for £16,000, who at first was disposed to purchase, but finally declined. He then offered it to several other persons, who all declined. When he informed Blunt of these failures, Blunt begged him to take the contract off his hands, as he was unable to carry out the contract or meet his promissory note when due. After some demur Wild agreed to take the contract off Blunt's hands, and to share with him all profits in any resale over £16,000. Thereupon Blunt, on the 18th August, 1886, transferred his contract to Wild, and Wild subsequently, in the month of November, sold to the defendant Phillips for £16,000, who was to give Terry a first mortgage for £10,000, and a second mortgage for £2400, and to pay the balance in cash. Wild says that when Blunt asked him to take over his contract he begged him to let it appear as long as possible that he was interested in the contract, as he would be injured in his credit if it were known that he was unable to carry it out, and that he was particularly anxious that Terry should not know it, as he had borrowed money on mortgage from members of Terry's family. Wild most improperly lent himself to this conspiracy, and throughout the subsequent transactions led Terry to believe that Blunt was still the person entitled under the contract. Some time in the month of March, 1887, Wild obtained from Blunt a written authority to Terry to transfer direct to Phillips, and an undertaking to remain responsible for the balance of the purchase money. Thereupon Terry executed a transfer of the land to Phillips, and Wild obtained a second mortgage from Phillips to Blunt for £2400, and a transfer from Blunt to Terry of this mortgage. Wild says this mortgage was taken in Blunt's name instead of his own in pursuance of his agreement to make it appear as long as possible that Blunt was still interested in the contract. On the 3rd June, 1887, Wild wrote to Blunt to ask him to call at his office, and when he called on the 6th he asked him to sign a paper acknowledging that he had no interest in the mortgage. At that interview Pickering was present. Blunt refused to sign any such document, and on Wild urging that he had sold to him, Blunt denied the sale and declared the documents to be forgeries. This brief outline of the case is necessary to explain the reasons of my judgment. There are, it appears to me, three tests in the case of forgery—the credulity of the witnesses, the similarity or otherwise of the signatures to admitted signatures, and the probabilities of the case. In this case the evidence of Blunt, Wild, and Pickering need only be considered, and none of them are, in my opinion, reliable witnesses. The plaintiff Blunt is a witness to whose oath I can give no credence, for these reasons: His story is that he and Wild were equally interested in the contract, and that Wild was to finance the purchase for him in the first instance, and he alleges in his statement of claim that Wild had money of his in hand, out of which he was to make the necessary payments. In fact Wild did pay for him £500 in cash, and endorsed his promissory note for £2400. When that promissory note fell due in February, 1887, Blunt's share to be paid would be £1200. Accordingly an alleged statement of account between Blunt and Wild was put in evidence, showing a balance in favour of Blunt of about £1200. This was made up of moneys in Wild's hands of about £450, and a sum of £750, alleged to be due by Wild to Blunt for repairs, &c., done to his house. Blunt swore that that amount was due to him for the work done, and he specified generally what the work was, and put in a book, purporting to contain the accounts as made out from time to time. It was conclusively proved to my mind that the outside cost of the work actually done by Blunt could not have exceeded from £60 to £70, leaving about £680 wholly unaccounted for. Indeed, it was proved that the house and the whole of the buildings on Wild's land could be put up for about the sum, Blunt charges for these repairs, &c. The entries in the book put in to prove these items are, in my opinion, wholly fictitious, and concocted for the purposes of this suit. They are apparently all made at the same time, although entered on different pages, written with the same pen and ink, which is quite different from the other entries in the book, and without any details or dates (except the month), quantities of materials, or amount of labour. One of these items is for putting in the foundations of a house Wild intended to have built, and Blunt swore that he had put in the foundations of this house of stone, whereas it was conclusively proved by several witnesses, among others the man who afterwards did build the house, that no foundations had ever been put in, and that the soil was unbroken. Mr. Pilcher contended that this was merely an overcharge—a very gross one he admitted, but still not such as to impeach Blunt's testimony on other points. I cannot accept this view. It appears to me to have been deliberately concocted with a view of proving that Wild had moneys of Blunt sufficient to meet his liability on the promissory note; and certainly on the question of the stone foundations Blunt has sworn falsely. Again, Blunt swore that no one was helping him to fight the suit, and that he was finding the money for that purpose himself, and he denied that he had assigned his interest in Hoxton Park to Pickering and Jennings. He was afterwards compelled to admit that he had assigned his interest in Hoxton Park to the plaintiffs Pickering and Jennings, on the 17th June, 1887, and the document itself was put in evidence, and Pickering admitted that on the security of that assignment he and his firm were finding the money to contest this suit. And on that evidence the defendants applied that the plaintiffs Pickering, Jennings, and Company should be made co-plaintiffs, and by their consent they were added as co-plaintiffs. There was also another matter in reference to Blunt's signature which impressed me very unfavourably. Among a number of documents containing Blunt's genuine signature he was shown a receipt for £350, dated 6th October, 1885, for moneys advanced by Mr. Wingate on mortgage. When he looked at the document he said he was extremely doubtful if it was his signature, and stated that he had no record or recollection of the transaction, and he could not be brought to admit that the signature was his. It was proved that Blunt had received this money and paid it into his bank, and the signature to the receipt is indisputably a genuine one. Under these circumstances I can give no weight to Blunt's denial of his signature to the documents which he now impugns. Then as to the evidence of the plaintiff Pickering:—He swears that Wild admitted on the 10th June, 1887, that he had forged these documents. Blunt was present at this conversation, and was examined and cross-examined at length as to what was said and done, and he makes no allusion to any such admission. This was not any incidental or unimportant remark which might have escaped Blunt's memory, but was an admission in so many words of the plaintiffs' case. If Wild did make such admission, I cannot believe that Blunt could have forgotten it, and I suspect that these questions would then have been tried not in a court of equity, but in a criminal court. As to Wild's evidence, I do not think that in this suit he has sworn what he knew to be false; but by his own admission he entered into a conspiracy with Blunt to make it appear that Blunt was still interested in the property, and he admitted that, to keep up the deception, he more than once deliberately told Mr. Terry what he knew to be false. Such a transaction as that must necessarily deprive a man of credibility in a court of justice, and it has, indeed, brought on Wild the most terrible retribution, for it has given a colour to the plaintiffs' charges of forgery, and exposed him to just and merited condemnation. There was also another transaction; one relating to the purchase of some land with Mr. Salwey, which certainly did not show Wild's character in a favourable light. I need not stop to go into the long details of that case, but the facts that were there proved would make me pause before accepting the uncorroborated evidence of Wild. As, therefore, I cannot rely on any of these witnesses, I must consider the probabilities of the case. The first improbability is as to there being a forgery at all in such a case. It was not a forgery to conceal some fraud or wrongful dealing, and to prevent such fraud being detected, as a forged receipt to hide embezzlement, or the forgery of the will of a man that is dead, or of a deed which might not come to the knowledge of the owner of the property till money had been realised and the culprit had absconded: but it was the forgery of a contract not yet completed, and where detection must come in a few months and might come any hour, because as soon as the promissory note was given, which was before the date of the alleged forgery, Blunt was in a position at any moment to call on Terry to complete the contract by transferring the property to him; but not only Blunt, if his and Pickering's evidence is to be believed, but Pickering, Jennings, and Co. were also interested in the contract, and they could have required that the contract should be completed. The other probabilities of the case will be best considered in connection with the documents. There are five documents alleged by Blunt to be forgeries:—1st, The signature of Blunt to the contract with Terry for £12,900; 2nd, the transfer of that contract from Blunt to Wild; 3rd, the authority to Terry to transfer direct to the defendant Phillips; 4th, the transfer of a second mortgage over Hoxton Park from Blunt to Terry; 5th, an undertaking to pay interest due in respect of that mortgage. First, as to the contract with Terry: Blunt swears that he did not sign the document, but he admits that the signature is very like his, and that, if it his signature, he must have put it on a blank sheet of paper; and the reason he gives is that the contract he entered into with Terry was to purchase for £16,000, whereas the written contract is for £12,900. There is only Blunt's oath that such was the amount of the purchase money, which I do not believe. Terry and Wild both swear that the purchase money was £12,900, and Terry signed the contract for that amount. Moreover, Blunt in his evidence agrees with Wild and Terry as to the arrangements for paying the £12,900, by paying £500 in cash, and giving a promissory note for £2400, and a mortgage for £10,000, but does not explain how the balance of the £16,000 was to be met. There is no writing to shew that the purchase-money was to be £16,000, except an ambiguous document given by Blunt to Terry on the 16th June, 1887, after the caveat had been filed, and Blunt had repudiated the sale to Wild. The signature of Blunt is wholly undistinguishable from his ordinary signatures, of which a great number, including some hundreds of cheques from Banks, were put in evidence. It is impossible that the contract could have been written in after the signature was affixed, as the signature comes in its proper place at the end of the contract, and the contract extends over two sheets, partly writing and partly consisting of printed conditions of sale pasted on. I am, therefore, clearly of opinion that Blunt did sign the contract. All the probabilities are in favour of it, for it is the root of Blunt's title, and it is most improbable that Blunt should have lain by from July, 1886, to June, 1887, without having any written contract with Terry. As, therefore, Blunt denies what I hold is undoubtedly a genuine signature, very grave doubts, to say the least, must rest on his denial of his other signatures. The next signature denied is to the transfer from Blunt to Wild. The signature to this document varies somewhat from the ordinary signature of Blunt; the end of the down stroke in the letter "F" is turned up, whereas it is ordinarily quite straight, and perpendicular. The letter "R" is somewhat differently formed, and the whole signature is somewhat running hand, whereas the ordinary signature is crabbed and backhand; but there are several admitted signatures of Blunt's in evidence which present all these peculiarities, among others I may particularise exhibits one and two, and cheques dated 22nd April, 1886, for £2 14s. 6d., 28th August, 1887; deposit slip, 31st March, 1886. These slight differences, to my mind, are against the theory of forgery, for a forger would be careful to avoid such slight differences as I have pointed out. The document also contains a number of initials of Blunt, in all of which this peculiarity in the formation of the letter "F" is omitted. The document itself bears out Wild's account of the transaction. He says that after Blunt signed the contract with Terry, he asked Wild to try to find a purchaser, and that accordingly he offered the property to Phillips, who seemed inclined to buy, and that he had prepared a transfer of the contract from Blunt to Phillips, and that when Blunt came to his office to execute the transfer to him he drew out of his drawer the form he had prepared for Phillips, and altered it to suit the transfer from Blunt to himself. Accordingly, the document was altered by inserting the name of Wild for Phillips, and some, but not all, the other alterations as to price were made and the alterations initialed by Blunt. Why should this have been done if Wild was forging Blunt's name. One would have expected a forger to be as chary as possible of his forgeries, that he would have prepared a simple transfer in as few words as possible, and containing the one signature necessary. Mr. Pilcher contended that all that contrivance might have been done to conceal the forgery. If so, it was a stroke of daring genius, and from what I saw of Mr. Wild in the witness-box, I should not apply either epithet to him. Now, as to the probabilities of this case. Blunt was, in my opinion, not in a position to carry out the contract. He had mortgaged on the 3rd July, 1886, his premises and plant and machinery to Pickering and Jennings, and he admits that he had arranged with Wild to finance the purchase, and Wild had paid all the cash to Terry, and had endorsed his promissory note for £2400. Wild says he had told him of his failure to find a purchaser. Under these circumstances, it appears to me by no means improbable that Blunt should have been anxious to get rid of a contract which he was unable to carry out, and that Wild, who had made cash advances, and rendered himself liable under the promissory note, should have agreed to take the contract off Blunt's hands. But it is said that Blunt was associated with Pickering, Jennings, and Co. in the purchase, and that they were bound to find all the purchase money for Blunt if required. I must, therefore, deal with that part of the case. Pickering does not appear upon the scene until the 6th June, 1887, when he went with Blunt to Wild's office, and there is no writing in any way connecting Pickering, Jennings, and Co., with the purchase of Hoxton Park till the 17th June, 1887, nearly 12 months from the time when Pickering and Blunt say the verbal arrangement was made that they should furnish the funds to carry out the purchase. The 16th June was the day on which Pickering says Wild admitted that he had forged these documents. On the 3rd July, 1886, nearly 12 months before, Pickering, Jennings, and Co. took a security from Blunt over his premises at Marrickville, and over his plant and machinery to secure advances; but no mention is made of Hoxton Park. That firm also took other securities from Blunt before this, including an assignment of his book debts for an advance of £30, and Blunt's bills as they fell due were met by the cheques of Pickering, Jennings, and Co. It is clear that Blunt had given them security over all he had, and was financially bound to them hand and foot. How does it happen, then, that no document of any kind was obtained from Blunt either acknowledging Pickering and Jennings, interest in the contract, or assigning such a valuable asset to them, when he was giving them security over everything he had, and apparently could not get an advance of £30 without assigning his book debts? According to Blunt's evidence, there was not even a contract in writing from Terry, and yet Pickering and Jennings never made any inquiries or took any steps whatever for certainly 10 months. The document they did obtain on the 17th June, 1887, was an assignment of Blunt's interest in Hoxton Park to secure advances and 40 per cent. of Blunt's interest. The recital is only "whereas some time ago it was agreed between us as follows, but it has never been evidenced in writing." For these reasons I wholly discredit the evidence of Blunt and Pickering that there was any arrangement that Pickering, Jennings, and Co. should find any money for the purchase of Hoxton Park until the 17th June, 1887, at which time, by a remarkable coincidence, Phillips had cut up the property, and sold about £20,000 worth, and had proved that the property was of very great value. If that is so, the alleged improbability of Blunt transferring his contract to Wild because Pickering, Jennings, and Co. were to advance him the necessary money, disappears. Again, there is a letter of the 22nd March, 1887, from Blunt to Wild, in which he refers to his being summoned to the Court to be examined as to what property he owned, for the purpose of satisfying a judgment obtained against him by a Mr. Lawrence. In it he says, "I really have nothing of any value. Will this cause you any trouble re the Liverpool property? I feel sure has (sic) has heard something of it been (sic) in my name. If so, can anything be done? I am willing to act as you may direct——." At the end of the letter he adds, "I have no money, and nothing to take to make money of except the houses; I suppose they must take them." This letter was written by Cox, Blunt's clerk, and although Blunt swears he did not dictate the letter, but only told Cox to write "in that wise or in that style," I am satisfied from the style and contents of the letter, that if Blunt did not dictate the words of the letter, he must have stated fully the substance of it. This letter appears to me to be wholly inconsistent with Blunt's having at that time any interest in this contract. I now pass on to the third document impugned. There is nothing in the signature to distinguish it from the ordinary signature of Blunt. The document purports to be a transfer of a mortgage over Hoxton Park from Blunt to Wild for £2400, and is stated by Wild to have been made under the circumstances I have previously mentioned. It appears further from Wild's account that when Wild asked Blunt to sign a document acknowledging that he had no interest in the mortgage Blunt refused to sign it, alleging that Wild had sold to Phillips for more than £16,000, and that he was entitled to share in the excess beyond that amount. That thereupon Wild said he would get the money in another way, and took a mortgage from Phillips direct to himself, and then transferred that mortgage to Terry. This was clearly the obvious way to carry out the transaction, for as Phillips bought from Wild and owed him the £2400, the natural course would have been to take a mortgage in his own name. If Wild had forged the transfer of the contract between himself and Blunt, why should he have carried out the transaction in a way which was wholly unnecessary, and which obliged him again to forge Blunt's name? When the arrangement as to taking the mortgage in Blunt's name fell through, Wild destroyed the genuine mortgage from Phillips to Blunt, but retained the transfer containing the alleged forgery and handed it over to Terry among the other papers without demur. This document, together with all the other alleged forgeries, were for some considerable time in Wild's hands, and were handed over by him to Terry after Blunt had filed his caveat and charged Wild with forging them. If these documents had been forgeries, can there be a doubt that Wild would have destroyed them, and not handed the evidence of his guilt over to Terry? The probabilities of the case are therefore wholly against this document being a forgery. As to the other two documents, I need not consider them at any length, for Mr. Pilcher admitted that if I held the first three documents to be genuine, the conclusion would be inevitable that Blunt either signed or authorised the signing of them. No doubt the signatures of these two documents are very unlike Blunt's usual signatures, but Wild does not say that he saw Blunt sign them, as he does with reference to the other three documents. It is proved in this case that Cox, Blunt's clerk, used to sign for Blunt, not "per Cox," but as if it were signed by Blunt himself. Cox so signed the letter of the 22nd March, and also certain pleadings in the District Court and several receipts, so that there would be nothing extraordinary in Blunt getting Cox to sign these documents for him. Cox's signature of Blunt's name is a close imitation of Blunt's handwriting, and, in my opinion, the signature to these documents is very like the signature by Cox of Blunt's name. Be that as it may, I am satisfied that Wild did not forge them. So far I have dealt with the main points relied upon as to the question of forgery, but there were a number of minor points which I need not deal with, except to say that some of them tend to confirm my opinion as to the genuineness of these documents, and none in any way weaken the force of the evidence I have already considered. I therefore hold that none of the documents impugned were forged by Wild, and that the signatures to the contract with Terry, the transfer of that contract to Wild, and the transfer of the mortgage of £2400 are genuine signatures of the plaintiff Blunt. For these reasons I dismiss the claim, and as the plaintiff has brought such gross charges of forgery and fraud which he has failed to substantiate I dismiss the claim with costs as between solicitor and client. As this judgment is delivered in vacation, I will extend the time for appealing to seven days after vacation. The decree will date from to-day.

METROPOLITAN DISTRICT COURT.—FRIDAY.

(Before his Honor Judge WILKINSON.)

MAHER V. SYDNEY TRAMWAY COMPANY—PEISLEY BROTHERS, CLAIMANTS.

This was an interpleader case. It seemed that Maher brought an action against the Sydney Tramway and Omnibus Company for the recovery of £200 damages. On the trial a verdict was given for the defendant company for costs, which had been taxed at £17 11s. 8d. Execution was issued on this judgment against the goods of Maher. Peisley Brothers, however, claimed the goods levied upon as their property, under a bill of sale which had been duly registered. On the case coming on for hearing on June 1st, objection was taken on behalf of the 'bus company, that the particulars required by the rule and practice of the Court were not filed in time. His Honor held that the particulars were properly filed. The judgment creditors (the 'bus company) not satisfied with this ruling, applied to the Supreme Court for a writ of prohibition to restrain the Judge from acting in the matter. The application came on for argument in due course, and was dismissed with costs against the judgment creditors. The matter came before Judge Wilkinson to-day for him to adjudicate upon it. It was mentioned that the judgment creditors had withdrawn. The claimants (Peisley Brothers), were represented by Mr. Gibson (instructed by Mr. Dillon). It was now proved that the claimants had been deprived of the use of some eight horses which formed part of the property levied upon, from May 10th to June 22nd. His Honor gave judgment for the claimants with £10 10s. costs, £20 19s. cost of bailiffs, and the livery of eight horses, the costs of which he assessed at £30 8s.

THE MYSTERIOUS DEATH AT BOTANY.

The extraordinary and mysterious circumstances surrounding the death of a man named Michael Peter Collins, which occurred at No. 5, Popple's-terrace, Botany-road, Botany, on Sunday afternoon last, have now assumed alarming aspects. It will be remembered that Dr. Marshall was attending the deceased for about two months previous to his death, and the curious symptoms displayed baffled all the efforts of the doctor to trace the nature of the disease, and when the man died, Dr. Marshall, from information received from Dr. Martin, which partly confirmed his own suspicions, refused to give a certificate as to the cause of death, and sent a report of the occurrence, likewise his suspicions in full, to the City Coroner. The result was that an inquest was commenced on Tuesday last, and adjourned for a week to allow the Government Analyst, Mr. Hamlet, to make a careful chemical examination of the deceased's stomach and contents. On Thursday afternoon Mr. Hamlet informed the Coroner that he had finished the analysis, and had found amongst other things a large quantity of arsenic, sufficient to cause death. Mr. Shiell, as soon as possible, gave the necessary authority to the police to place the woman Louisa Collins, the wife of the deceased, under arrest. As usual, the matter was carried out with the greatest secrecy, as it had been all through the case, the police being extremely reticent, and as a matter of fact, last night they gave the representatives of the press to understand that they knew nothing whatever about the affair. About 8 o'clock on Thursday night Louisa Collins was arrested by warrant by Senior-constable Sherwin, No. 3 station, who charged her, on suspicion, with having caused the death of Michael Peter Collins, her husband. Yesterday morning Inspector Hyam waited upon the City Coroner, where he was supplied with the requisite warrants for the exhumation of the body of the first husband, and also a child (of which the deceased was the father), whose deaths occurred on the 5th February, 1887, and the 19th April, 1888, respectively. No definite time has yet been fixed for the inquiry into the death of these two. The case of the child is a new phase in the mystery, and to which up to the present no publicity has been given. However, from inquiries instituted, we find that the Coroner received the following report on 20th April, 1888:—"About 11.40 p.m., on the 19th April, 1888, a child named John Collins, aged 4½ months, died suddenly at his parents' residence, Botany-road, Botany. It appears the deceased suffered slightly from a sick stomach for two days previous to its death, but the parents did not consider it bad enough to call in medical aid. About 10 p.m. the same night the child began crying; the father lit the lamp, and took the deceased up, when it got quiet and began laughing at the light; deceased then took the breast and fell asleep. About 11.20 p.m. it awoke screaming and suffering great pain, and was dead in less than 20 minutes. The only medicine given to the child was a teaspoonful of castor oil about 1 p.m. the day it died. Dr. Martin, of 32, College-street, saw the deceased some hours after death and directed the parents to report the matter to the police and said he would send a memo. to City Coroner." On the face of this report the Coroner has written, "As there are no grounds for supposing this child died from any but natural causes, an inquest may be dispensed with." Dr. Martin attended the first husband during the illness previous to his death, and when he passed away the doctor gave a certificate for the cause of death. Be it mentioned, however, that the symptoms preceding the death of all three were similar in all respects.

Louisa Collins, 32, widow, was brought up before Mr. Addison, S.M., at the Water Police Court yesterday, and charged, on suspicion, of having caused the death of her husband, Michael Patrick Collins, at Botany, on or about the 8th July, 1888. On the application of the police the case was remanded until Tuesday next.

SHIPWRECK AT PORT WILLUNGA, S. A.

TOTAL LOSS OF THE STAR OF GREECE.

THE CAPTAIN AND SEVENTEEN MEN DROWNED.

[BY TELEGRAPH.]
(FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.)

ADELAIDE, FRIDAY.

News received in town this morning that the vessel Star of Greece had struck on a reef during the night, about 200 yards off the jetty of Port Willunga. It was stated that the ship had parted amidships, and the after part had become awash. The vessel was chartered by J. Darling and Son, with a cargo of 16,002 bags wheat for the United Kingdom. The secretary of the Marine Board received the following telegrams from the harbour master at Port Willunga:—"The ship Star of Greece has gone ashore here; we want rocket apparatus to save crew; the sea is making a clean breach over her. Some of the crew are in the mizen rigging. Sea very rough, and the mast is likely to go at any moment. Main royal mast carried away, and is swinging aloft, and the courses and topsails are flying loose." A later telegram says:—"Mizen rigging gone. Only one man saved yet. Some more are forward, and the ship has parted abaft the mainmast, and the after part has sunk." The vessel left Port Adelaide with a crew of about 25 men and five apprentices.

Another message is as follows:—"Ship Star of Greece, 1227 tons, from Port Adelaide, for United Kingdom, went ashore at Port Willunga last night, 200 yards from the beach, and parted abaft the mainmast. Four men were drowned and one saved. Twenty men are on board, the sea is very rough, and no rocket aparatus is here. Assistance must be sent, or the worst is anticipated." The insurances are:—British and Foreign Company, £2000; Reliance Company, £2000; Adelaide Fire and Marine Company, £2000; Union Canton, £1500; Canton Insurance Company, £2225; Mercantile Company, £500; South British, £2000. Port Willunga is situated in Small Bay on the east shore of the Gulf of St. Vincent. It measures 1½ miles from point to point, and is 30 miles south half west of the lightship, off Port Adelaide, and 27 miles N. E. half E. of Cape Jervis. This part of the coast may be recognised by a remarkable range of white cliffs lying within the limits of the bay. The reef is composed of hard rocks, and extends in a W.N.W. direction to South Point Bay, running parallel with the coast to South Point, for nearly two miles. At the head of the bay is a jetty. The holding ground is good anywhere outside the four-fathom line, the jetty anchorage being exposed to all winds from north-west round by west to south-west. At times heavy sea rolls in, causing vessels at anchor to be uneasy unless well found in ground tackle. The secretary of the Marine Board and Mr. Cave saw the Treasurer at noon, and received instructions to despatch the Defiance at once to the scene of the wreck. The vessel was to have started about 12.30, and was expected to reach the wreck between 2 and 3 o'clock. Captain Alora, however, being strongly impressed that it would be useless to attempt to render help by sea, the Treasurer was advised by telegram from the Marine Board that the Defiance would not be able to get within half a mile of the wreck, and could do no good by going on. The Treasurer then withdrew the order for the vessel to go. The Defiance left, however, for the scene of the wreck about 2 o'clock. The pilots at the Semaphore are unanimously of the opinion that the Defiance will not be able to give any assistance whatever to the wrecked vessel, as the wind has been shifting round to southwest and the sea will be altogether too rough to allow her to get anywhere near the vessel. As it seems improbable that any help can be rendered to the crew on the wreck by means of other vessels, all attention will be concentrated on efforts to save life from the land, but unfortunately no rocket apparatus was on the spot, but help has been sent from the nearest townships. It is hoped that the lifeboats are on the spot this afternoon. The representatives of the Underwriters' Association, and Captain Inglis, representing the Marine Board, left for the scene of the wreck immediately after the news of the disaster was received. The Star of Greece is a splendid iron ship of 1193 registered tons, with three water-tight compartments. She was built at Belfast by Harland and Wolff in 1868. She is classed 100 A1 at Lloyds, and has a large carrying capacity, carrying two-thirds of her cargo in the main hatchway. She cleared out from Port Adelaide Custom-house on Wednesday afternoon, with a cargo of 16,002 bags, about 1840 tons of wheat, shipped by Messrs. J. Darling and Son for the United Kingdom, Captain H. R. Harrower in command. She was taken to the Semaphore in charge of Pilot Boord, and sailed on Thursday. Her owners are J. P. Corry and Co., of Belfast. It may be mentioned that her captain has had charge of several vessels of the same line, including the Star of Prussia and the Jane Porter, but we are given to understand that this is his first voyage here, and also his first in the Star of Greece. He is a native of Dundee, Scotland, and is 29 years of age and unmarried. His only relative in Adelaide is Mrs. J. Bishop, a sister. All the following seamen, with the exception of the officers were shipped at Port Adelaide:—Henry R. Harrower, master; John N. D. Hazeland, mate; Wm. R. Waugh, second mate; John Gatis, Edward Binhm, Peter Besmet, Carl Clarkson, Alfred Dugan, George Twine, W. Olmied, David Bruce, Y. J. Miles, J. Revell, James Marshall, N. J. R. Cooke, seamen. The weather during Thursday evening was exceedingly boisterous, with heavy squalls of wind and rain, hail being frequent. The wind was blowing from the south-west, and a vessel sailing down the Gulf would easily come to grief under such circumstances on getting too close to the shore.

A telegram from Aldinga, dated 2.30 p.m., states that the wreck is broadside on, about 200 yards from the beach, and has parted abaft the mainmast. Thirty-two souls were on board, of whom four swam ashore, and three or four are still aboard. The remainder are believed to be drowned. One body has been washed on the beach. The first man who came ashore thinks that the wreck will break up during the night.

Another telegram received at Port Adelaide states that the wreck is broadside on, about a quarter mile north jetty, and has parted abaft the mainmast. The captain and 17 men have been drowned. The first mate and three seamen saved, and the rest are on the wreck making signals. It is thought the wreck will break up before the morning.

Indignation has been expressed at Port Adelaide at the delay on the part of the Government in sending assistance. A tug could have been sent at 11, but she was not despatched till 4.30. The smaller vessel, Defiance, went at 2.30, and was unable to get near the wreck. The Defiance returned about 10 o'clock, as her services could not be availed of, for the sea was running mountains high, and she could not get near.

ADELAIDE, 12 p.m.

The latest particulars give 27 aboard at the time of the casualty. The first and third officers, four seamen, and four apprentices have been saved, and the rest drowned. The rocket apparatus did not come to hand until 5 o'clock, and nothing could be done with it, as everyone had left the ship. Those who were saved swam ashore or got washed on land, and pieces of timber and heavy seas prevented boats from assisting. The first mate says that had the men stuck to the vessel, probably all would have been saved, as the wreck had not yet broken up. A strong feeling has been expressed at the delay in the conveyance of the rocket apparatus to the wreck. The men saved were Hazeland, first mate; F. Kearney, M'Barnett, A. Prior, J. Johnson, apprentices; Cowerford, third mate; Carl Claussen, James Revel, and Crowe, seamen.

A telegram from Adelaide yesterday, and posted at the Merchants' Exchange, stated that the ship Star of Greece, 1227 tons, bound for the United Kingdom, went ashore at Aldinga the night previous, about 200 yards from the beach; the vessel parted abaft the mainmast. Four men were drowned, and one man saved; 20 souls being left on board; at the time the sea was rough. The Star of Greece left Adelaide on Wednesday, and had only proceeded 27 miles on her voyage when the catastrophe occurred. The vessel was one of Messrs. J. P. Corry and Company's (of Belfast) famous Star line. She was an iron ship, and built in Belfast in 1868 by the well-known firm of Harland and Wolff. Her dimensions were—length, 227ft.; beam, 35ft.; depth, 22ft., giving a net register of 1227 tons. The Star of Greece has seen active service since she was launched principally in the Anglo-Indian and Anglo-Australian trade.

A later telegram stated:—"Willunga, South Australia. The Star of Greece wreck is broadside on the rocks, about a quarter of a mile north of the jetty. She has parted abaft the mainmast. Thirty-two souls were on board. The captain and 17 of the crew have been drowned. The first mate and three seamen are saved. The remainder of the crew are on the wreck, making signals. It is thought that the vessel will break up to-night."

AFTER a hard day's work, being confined to office over a lot of figures, one gets tired, and inclined to be dull, especially after dinner at 6 p.m. All that unpleasant feeling might be avoided by just taking one wineglassful of Row's Dandelion Bitters in a little water. A good refresher and comforting tonic. You can never obtain a better if you live to be a hundred.—[ADVT.]

THE STUD SHEEP SALES.

The stud sheep sales were brought to a conclusion yesterday afternoon, mainly through an early start made in the morning, and the vigorous efforts of Mr. Abbott, the auctioneer, who as on the previous day stuck solidly to his task without the smallest break or adjournment of any kind, in order that the list might be cleared off in the two days. It was, indeed, a heavy catalogue, but nothing unusual to Mr. Abbott, who cleared a more extensive list at the last year's sales. The most interesting of yesterday's transactions took place before noon, after which the flock rams and the ewes monopolised the day. Mr. Faithful's Grand Duke II., 3 years and 10 months, by Royal Duke III., carried off the stud ram honours with 170 guineas, the price paid for him by Mr. Bignell. This celebrated ram has distinguished himself by winning special prizes at various agricultural shows. Level Top, one of Mr. G. Clark's favourite stud rams, a pure Talgai sheep, was bought by Mr. Martin for a Tasmanian breeder at the price of 140 guineas. Level Top has secured various champion prizes in Brisbane, and is now 5 years of age. A ram, bred by Marshall and Slade, went for 71 guineas to Mr. Busby, and one of Mr. Armstrong's by Wanganella, for 80 guineas. Two ewe lambs by Wrinkley created a deal of excitement, though only nine months of age. When they were under the hammer they gave rise to some spirited bidding, and eventually became the property of Mackay Bros. at 48 guineas each. It will be seen in the averages that Mr. A. L. Faithful, Goulburn, was the highest of the day's sales with £46 13s. 6d., and Mr. G. Clark, of Hendon, Queensland, the next best with £32 9s. 8d. The sheep submitted yesterday were on account of the following well-known breeders:—Tasmania: Thomas Parramore, Beaufront; George Parramore, Wetmore; Robert Jones, Riccarton; J. B. Gibson, Pleasant Banks; G. W. Keach, Chiswick; Charles Field, Woodfield; William Gatenby, Woodburne; A. and G. Finlay, Douglas Park; W. H. Bennett, Bloomfield; Percy W. Archer, Panshanger; D. Ralston, Doolmers; R. C. Gatenby, Stewarton; Robert Kermode, Mona Vale; Thomas Riggall, Somercotes; James F. Rigney, Bona Vista, Avoca; W. H. Gibson, Fairfield; George A. Jones, Morville. SUBURBAN RAILWAY TRAFFIC.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—This morning (July 12) I had, in company with about a dozen others, the misfortune to miss the 8.27 a.m. train from Summer Hill to Sydney, there being no other timed to stop until 8.46 a.m. However, at 8.35 a.m. a tram came to within a few paces of the above station, and remained standing for three or four minutes, and then went through without stopping, and with comparatively few passengers. Now I think, with many others, if the aforesaid train pulled up at the station instead of where it did, it would have been a boon to those who had 20 minutes to wait, and moreover the precise place (within a few yards) of stoppage cannot in any way interfere with the traffic, notwithstanding that the signal may have been against the driver.

I may here also state, for I know that I echo the sentiments of a large per centage of the Summer Hill residents, that a train timed to leave at 8.35 a.m. would be an inestimable boon. I trust you will be able to find a corner in your valuable journal for the foregoing in favour of the abovenamed suburb.

I am, &c.,
A SUBURBAN RESIDENT.

RHEUMATISM AND DROPSY have been considered as incurable, but Dr. Sell's (kidney and liver) Bitters were never known to fail in giving immediate relief and permanent cure of both these maladies.—[ADVT.]

SPORTING INTELLIGENCE.

THE TURF.

The nicely arranged programme provided by the management of the Rosehill Racing Club for discussion this afternoon is sufficiently varied to attract a large attendance, as admirers of trotting will have an opportunity of witnessing an event that cannot fail to prove interesting, while lovers of the more exciting sport of racing will have enough to engage their attention. The traffic arrangements for the conveyance of visitors by rail and river are fully set forth in our advertising columns; and as the business of the day does not start till 1.30 p.m., those who cannot leave the city before 12.20 p.m. will be in ample time to witness the opening event, while persons who do not quit business until 1 o'clock will be accommodated with a mixed train starting at 1.35, picking up passengers at Ashfield, Burwood, and Homebush, and arriving at the racecourse before the first heat of the trotting contest between Cyclone and Little Dick. The sport opens with the Flying Handicap, in which a numerous field may be expected to compete, and the prospects of Lady Lovel, The Miner, and Savant look about the brightest for that event. The match between Cyclone and Little Dick has unfortunately fallen through, owing to the former having injured himself, and his owner Mr. Lloyd has forfeited the £50 deposit. The Miner, Winnie, or Golddust should furnish the winner in the Selling Race; Violetta, jun., Chanticleer, and Zoe appear about the best in the Distance Handicap Trot, though the chances of Yendon and Minnie should not be overlooked. Keith heads the list in the Homebush Handicap, with 9st. 3lb, but as the son of Goldsbrough is in good fettle, that impost should not prevent him from making a big bid for the prize, while Sloth, Peeress, and Glenvale should run well forward. The programme from which the scratched horses have been removed is published elsewhere in this paper.

Nominators for the events to be decided at the July meeting of the Sydney Driving Park Club, Limited, on Saturday next, are reminded that acceptances, accompanied with the fees appertaining thereto, must be in the hands of the secretary (Mr. F. R. Morley) not later than 4 p.m., on Wednesday next, otherwise the horses will be struck out.

Lovers of trotting stock will have an opportunity of securing a couple of good performers at Rose Hill this afternoon, when Mr. Garling will offer Yendon and Sir Patrick for public competition.

The attractive bill of fare framed by the management of the Rosehill Racing Club for their July meeting, to take place on the 28th instant, will engage the attention of owners and trainers of racing stock on Monday next, when at 4 p.m. entries close for the following events:—Republican Handicap of 100 sovs., second horse 10 sovs. from the prize, six furlongs; Hurdle Race of 100 sovs., second horse to receive 10 sovs. from the prize, 2½ miles; July Handicap of 200 sovs., second horse to receive 25 sovs. from the prize, one mile and a furlong; Auction Stakes of 100 sovs., for three-years-old and upwards, weight for age, winner to be sold for 100 sovs., selling allowance 7 furlongs; and Welter Mile, a handicap of 100 sovs., second horse to receive 10 sovs. from the prize. A glance at the conditions shows that the programme has been drafted on very liberal lines, as both sweeps and acceptance fees have been discarded, even in the £200 handicap, and the entrance fee of 1 sov. covers all expenses.

On Tuesday next, the midwinter reunion of the Deniliquin Jockey Club commences, and the meeting will be brought to a conclusion on the following day. The club has been fortunate in receiving numerous entries for the different races, and as the nominations include a number of good performers from both sides of the Murray, it is safe to predict a most successful meeting. The usual railway facilities for reaching the scene of action will be available.

The sporting folk of Lake Macquarie district intend holding a race meeting at Swansea during the coming month.

Nominators for the principal handicaps in connection with the annual race meeting of the Jerilderie Jockey Club should not forget that acceptances are due on Monday next at 8.30 p.m.; also at the same time nominations for the Open and Flying Handicaps, three-quarters of a mile each, must be in the hands of the secretary.

The following scratchings were posted at the office of the Rosehill Racing Club yesterday, in connection with the mixed meeting to be held this afternoon:—All engagements: Here's Luck, Ganymede. Distance Handicap Trot: Garry Owen, Jack, Deceiver. Homebush Handicap: Albion.

Our Melbourne correspondent telegraphs that Stanley has been struck out of the V. R. C. Flat Race at the Grand National Meeting.

GRAFTON RACES.

GRAFTON, FRIDAY.

A race was run to-day for a prize subscribed by the bookmakers. The result was as follows:—Mr. S. R. Kennedy's b h Bonnie Doon, 5 years, 8st., Manuka—Medea (M. Riley), 1; Mr. W. Hawkes' b h Panic, aged, 7st. (J. Murphy), 2; b r Jessie, aged, 7st 8lb., 3. The other starters were New Guinea (7st. 12lb.), Falsetto (7st. 8lb.), Sir Alfred (7st. 8lb). The betting was even Bonnie Doon, 4 to 1 v. Sir Alfred and Falsetto, 5 to 1 v. Panic. Panic got two lengths' start from Bonnie Doon, who was a length ahead of the others. Panic led into the straight, the others forming a compact cluster, headed by Bonnie Doon, along the back of the course. In the last quarter of a mile Bonnie Doon was gradually catching Panic, but did not pass him until the straight, where she had to be shaken up, and eventually won by a length, Jessie a good third. Time, 2 minutes 8¼ seconds. The settling took place to-night, when prizes amounting to £628 were paid over, the largest winners being—T. H. Smith, £223; P. Donoghue, £127 10s.; R. Carr, £77. The usual toasts were proposed and responded to, and the vice-president of the club stated subscriptions were being given for a £500 handicap to be run next year. A list was produced having £100 promised, which was speedily supplemented, making £150. A good offer has been made by a Sydney sportsman for Gordon Brook colts Artisan and Aulux, but the owner's reserve on the former is said to be £500, which is above the buyer's limit.

WATERLOO CUP MEETING.

MELBOURNE, FRIDAY.

At the Waterloo Cup meeting the weather this morning was as cheerless as could be imagined, and the falling-off in the attendance was consequently easily accounted for. A cold wind and drizzling rain prevailed all day. There were only 16 courses to dispose of, and these, with the exception of the three deciding courses, were run off by luncheon. In the final issues of the Waterloo Cup Lincoln and Hornpipe were the first pair to try conclusions. Last night the New South Wales puppy had the call, and this was the rule on the opening of the betting to-day. Backers of Hornpipe, however, could not be stalled off, and the result was that the Melbourne bitch actually started favourite. At the outset of the spin Lincoln showed pace, but the gameness of Hornpipe soon came into play, the superior pace, however, telling the tale in the long run. Hornpipe finished without a scratch upon her, and was well beaten.

POLO MATCH.

CAMDEN, FRIDAY.

The Polo Club organised by Dr. Warren held its first practice match this afternoon. The gathering passed off very successfully. The game promises to become very popular here.

FOOTBALL.

The first of the two intercolonial matches between the representative teams of New South Wales and Queensland takes place on the Association Cricket Ground this afternoon. We have already published the names of the players. Mr. Durham, captain of the visitors, had his men out for a practice yesterday morning. They appear to be a rather light lot, and, unfortunately, some very good players who were chosen were prevented by business engagements from taking part in the trip. The rain of Friday will probably make the ground somewhat heavy, and this should be in favour of the Queenslanders, who have some very fast players in their ranks, notably Exton. The New South Wales team has been altered materially since it last encountered the British footballers, and is looked upon as a good one. The match will commence at a quarter past 3 o'clock.

PEDESTRIANISM.

Pedestrians are reminded that this is the last day for nominations for the Sir Joseph Banks Consultation Handicap.

It is announced elsewhere that Slowgrove's Handicap has been postponed until the 28th instant. Entries close on the 21st instant.

CARRINGTON HANDICAP.

The following are the starts for the Carrington Midwinter Handicap, to be run on the 21st, 23rd, 25th, and 28th instant:—

C. Samuels (a), 25½ yards; W. Clarke, 26½; A. Trinder, 27; H. J. Harris, 28; C. E. Warn, J. Atkinson, J. Moody, D. D. Bussell, L. Cassimer, P. J. Maloney, C. Donohue, J. H. King, W. H. CYCLING.

Arrangements are being pushed on by the committee of the New South Wales Cyclists' Union for the Centennial race meeting, on September 15, when the 10-mile Championship of Australia, the Mile Championship of New South Wales, and a 440-yards foot race for the championship of the colony will be run. Steps have been taken to invite cyclists from other colonies, and full details of the events will be circulated in a few days. The president of the Union (Mr. James Martin) has promised a "president's cup" as prize for the Mile Open Handicap, which will be run in accordance with the old country style, with a view to promote fast racing.

The particulars of the Agility Race at the Sydney B. C. meeting on the 18th August have now been arranged. This race will be the first thing of the kind seen in the colony. It involves no risk to riders or machines, there being no obstacles to negotiate, and it only calls for such smartness in handling a bicycle as ordinary riders possess. Competitors are asked to ride with one pedal, also on stop, and to dismount and remount several times during the race, and those who are fairly active will find nothing difficult in the conditions.

AQUATICS.

SCULLING RACE ON THE PARRAMATTA—SEARLE VICTORIOUS.

The sculling race between James Stansbury, of the Shoalhaven, and Henry E. Searle, the Clarence oarsman, was rowed over the Parramatta championship course yesterday afternoon, and resulted not altogether unexpectedly in a victory for the latter. The race, which was for £100 a-side, was witnessed by a considerable number of people, who filled the steamers and assembled at the various points on the river. The meeting between these two rising scullers had been looked forward to with great interest, as the undeniably good form showed by each of them in their races with Julius Wulf in June last, augured a great contest when they should measure blades with each other. The steamers Gosford and Charlotte Fenwick, which had been authorised to follow the scullers, were well filled with sporting men when they left the Circular Quay to proceed to the starting point. The Gosford carried the umpire (Mr. P. J. Clark), the timekeeper (Mr. John Blackman), and the press representatives. The run up the river was the reverse of pleasant, as it was accomplished right in the teeth of a strong westerly, accompanied by driving showers of sleet and rain. The steamers arrived at Ryde shortly after 4 o'clock. At this time the wind died away, as if by magic, and the water was, comparatively speaking, very smooth, the tide being a slight ebb. Searle got afloat at 4.10 and paddled up to the steamers, where he was received with cheers. He was seated in a Clasper-built shell and looked in good condition, his weight being about 11st. 5½lb. Stansbury, looking a perfect picture of muscular strength, made his appearance, also in a Clasper wager-boat, shortly afterwards. He was loudly cheered as he shot up to the mark. The Shoalhaven representative scaled about 12st. 1lb. The betting at this time was 6 to 4 on Searle, and in some instances 7 to 4 was laid, and 2 to 1 was offered on Searle at the start. The choice of positions was won by the Clarence sculler, who decided to row in the middle of the stream. At 4.29, the men took up their respective stations well up under the bridge, and precisely at 4.30, the start was effected by mutual consent. Stansbury's sculls struck the water first, but this gave him no appreciable advantage. Both men started off at a terrific pace, rowing 40 to the minute, and making their boats travel at great speed. This pace was kept up for a quarter of a minute, both rowing on level terms, but at the end of that space of time Searle began to gradually forge ahead. The competitors now slackened their speed, Searle rowing 41 and Stansbury striking 40. At Uhr's Point Searle had a lead of three quarters of a length. Both men now eased down, and made across for the opposite shore, Searle still leading, and rowing in fine style. Some broken water here caused Stansbury a little trouble; but getting out of his difficulty he spurted gamely, and drew on the leader, who, however, was off again before his opponent could get on even terms. At this time Searle was rowing 34 and Stansbury 32 to the minute. A good struggle now ensued for first place at the Mile Point, but the Clarence man, who was rowing with considerable dash and freedom of action, spurted when near the beacon, and led Stansbury by a clear length on passing the mark, the time being 5 minutes 35 seconds. A little lower down the river Stansbury, who, after the first sharp burst at the start, had been rowing in a somewhat lifeless manner, spurted a little, and showed to considerable advantage while negotiating a stretch of broken water. At Bottle Point he pulled himself together, and made a great effort to pass Searle, but the latter answering to the call, spurted brilliantly, and left his opponent in the rear. Off Putney Point Stansbury was seen at his best during the race. Here he opened his shoulders, and putting on a great spurt, rowed very well for a short while, but it was to no purpose, for Searle was able to keep his advantage, and at Putney the Clarence man had a lead of a length and a quarter, the time being 8 minutes 43 seconds. The men now crossed over to the southern side of the stream, taking a splendid course. Cabarita wharf was passed by Searle, rowing 30, in 14 minutes 2 seconds; Stansbury, rowing 28, being a length and a-half behind. At Gladesville, Searle had a lead of two lengths, his time for the distance being 15 minutes 13 seconds. Stansbury was still pulling a determined and plucky losing race, but his style of rowing was decidedly against him. The time at One Man Wharf was 17 minutes 32 seconds, and here Searle led by three lengths. Stansbury now made a final and grand effort to defeat his oponent, but Searle spurted again, and ultimately passed the finishing post two clear lengths ahead of the Shoalhaven man, in the remarkably good time of 19 minutes 53 seconds. This time is the fastest yet recorded in a match on the Parramatta River, the next best being Trickett's 20 minutes 11 seconds, which was the record until it was broken by the Clarence River representative. Both men were pumped out at the finish, although Stansbury seemed to be the most exhausted. The scullers were loudly cheered as they rowed across and shook hands with each other. And thus ended one of the prettiest races ever witnessed on the Parramatta. It was generally admitted that both men rowed a good solid race all the way, and, when the time is taken into account, it will be seen that the performance was a splendid one. Of the two, Searle is by far the better sculler, his style being more finished than Stansbury's. In addition to this he is very lively in a boat, and he rowed with much dash and vigour during the contest. After the first sharp burst at the start, Stansbury seemed to settle down into a monotonous and laboured style of rowing, and it was only when he spurted that he seemed to move with anything like freedom. His recovery was altogether too slow, and, although he got all his weight on, the great strength he possesses was thrown away, owing to his unfinished style of sculling. It was the opinion of many competent critics who witnessed yesterday's race, that Stansbury may defeat Searle when he learns to use a pair of sculls in a more scientific manner.

A special committee meeting of the Rowing Association was held at the Exchange Hotel last evening. Mr. W. Cubitt presided, and 15 members were present. A long discussion took place as to whether one gentleman or three should be chosen to select the eight-oar crew for the Intercolonial Race, to be held in November next. It was decided that one should select the crew, and Mr. A. Goodyear was proposed as selector. Mr. P. J. Clark was also nominated, but it was decided that the former gentleman should act. Mr. Goodyear said he would do his best to select a winning crew, provided the matter was under his sole control. A suggestion was made that a senior four race be rowed, so as to assist the selection for the eight, but no motion was made, and the matter lapsed. The matter of the Champion Four Race was discussed, but nothing definite was done in regard to this contest.

Mr. T. Hughes, one of the leading rowing men in Queensland, is now in Sydney with the footballers, and from him we learn that an eight-oar crew will compete in the next intercolonial race. Regarding the champion four-oar race, it is understood that Queensland will be represented if the race is rowed with coxswains. It is probable that two scullers will compete for the amateur championship.

The concert in aid of the Glebe Rowing Club's funds will be held at the Glebe Town-hall on Monday evening, when an excellent programme will be presented.

The Australasian Mining Exchange Company of Sydney reports a sale of Australasian Mining Exchange shares, cum div., at 2s., with buyer at 1s. 11d., seller 2s.; Tooth's Brewery, buyer 3s. 6d. premium; Anglo-Australian Finance, buyer (5 paid) 7¼, seller 7½; and, 30s. paid, buyer 31s., seller 33s; Sydney Freehold, seller 20s.; Sydney and Provincial Land, seller 4½.

By our cablegram it will be seen that the Union Bank of Australia advertised for a quarter of a million of 4 per cent. inscribed stock deposits, at a minimum of £102. The previous issues of inscribed stock deposits, amounting to half a million, were fully subscribed at up to £101.

The first ordinary meeting of the Australasian Mining Exchange Company of Sydney was held this afternoon, Mr. G. C. Loughnan in the chair. The report, of which we have already published the details, was adopted. The chairman said he hoped to see the Mining Exchange and the other institution in Pitt-street working in harmony. The following were elected directors, viz.:—Messrs. G. C. Loughnan, S. L. Bensusan, J. W. Cliff, J. B. Christian, J. D. Witham, and S. Samper; and as auditors, Messrs. F. S. Macdermott and A. H. Prince. A vote of thanks was accorded to the directors.

The balance-sheet of the Union Fire and Marine Insurance Company of New Zealand for the year ended May 31 shows that the fire and marine premiums had amounted to £125,168, and the interest £8094. Re-insurances amounted to £28,759. The losses paid and provided for reached £56,790. Agents' commission, expenses of management, and sundry charges, £26,036. A dividend at the rate of 10 per cent., absorbing £10,000, was paid. £5000 placed to re-insurance account, and a balance of £7883 carried forward, against £6695, the balance last year.

Elsewhere appears an advertisement to the effect that the Hons. J. White and S. A. Stephen, M.L.C., and Mr. Alexander Wilson, M.L.A., have been appointed a board of directors of the Sydney branch of the Australasian Mortgage and Agency Company, Limited, with which is incorporated Hastings Cuningham and Co., Limited.

As will be seen elsewhere, Messrs. Gibbs, Bright, and Co. have been appointed agents in Sydney of the Guardian Assurance Company of London, for the transaction of fire business.

The forty-third report of the Commercial Bank of Australia shows that the net profits for the half-year ended 30th June amounted to £103,417; the previous balance was £26,108, giving an available total of £129,526, which the directors propose to apportion as follows.—To dividend at 15 per cent. per annum, £75,000; to reserve fund, £25,000; to balance carried forward, £29,526.

We are informed by Messrs. Fraser and Co. that the shares in the Kauri Timber Company, Limited, offered in the Melbourne market, have been applied for largely for permanent investment.

In the Import markets to-day there was very little doing. The trade of the half-year has not opened with the activity which some had looked for. It has been better than last month, but still there is room for improvement. Although the customary balancing of accounts was not attended by many failures, and the amount of assistance required is not so great as some time back, there have been further failures of country storekeepers, in a small way of business. The flour market is steady. A fair business noticed in stone flour. Quotations being from £7 15s. to £9; roller flour from £8 10s. to £9 5s.; From Messrs. Kaye and Carter's (Christchurch) circular, of 3rd July, we learn that the New Zealand wheat market was rather easier; Tuscan was quoted at 2s. 9d. to 2s. 9½d. Stone flour quoted at £7 10s.; roller, £8. The season in the Canterbury district was unusually favourable for seeding. In addition to the auction business in tea on Tuesday and Wednesday a good deal has since been done privately; we note sales of about 2000 packages of all grades at up to 2s. per lb. The uncertainty as to the English market for coffee, in consequence of the break of the cable, has tended to strengthen local quotations a halfpenny per lb., and 9½d. to 10d. is now quoted for No. 1 Ceylon plantation; Barry's chicory, 2½d. Epps's cocoa, 1s. 6d.; heavy stocks still tending to depress the market. Sales of Fry's malted cocoa reported at 8s. A steady demand for sugar. Prices realised here for new Queensland are, if anything, rather in excess of those paid in the Melbourne market. A quantity equal to 50 tons of good white placed at £24. Yellows, £20 to £22; rations from £17; best China sugar held for £24 10s. In dried fruits the market is substantially without change on the week. Good currants are worth 5d., other qualities going from 4½d.; elemes quoted to 5½d. for best; sultanas, 5½d. to 5¾d. Good dates are worth 2d. Stocks of Nestle's milk have been sold out. 6s. 4½d. to 6s. 10½d. is value of the various brands of condensed milk. The demand for fish is very slack; tinned salmon, 8s. to 8s. 6d., according to brand; bulk, 4d. for barrels, and 4½d. for half-barrels; sardines overstocked, 3s. 3d. to 3s. 6d. for quarters, and 6s. to 6s. 3d. for halves is about the market rate; fresh herrings are 4s. 6d. to 5s., according to brand; kippered, 7s. 6d. to 8s. 6d.; lobsters, 8s. 6d. Coarse salt, 75s. to 77s. 6d.; rock, 80s. to 85s. Rice in steady request from £11 10s. to £12 10s. for the lower grades, and from £14 10s. to £15 for fine table sorts; sago and tapioca, 2½d.; pepper, 1s. 1½d. for white, and 8½d. for black. Candles very dull of sale; stearine worth from 5¼d. to 5½d., paraffin 6d. More inquiry noticed for cigars, Manila No. 1 moving off at 42s. In metals there is no new feature to notice. Galvanised iron is worth from £18 to £18 15s. per ton. A parcel placed for export south at £18 10s. The English market for pig-iron was rather stronger on July 1. Sheet-lead, £17 5s. to £17 10s., though some lots have been quitted at lower prices. Fencing wire is quoted at £10 10s. and £11 15s. for Nos. 8 and 10 respectively, of good brands. I. C. Coke tin plates in limited request at 17s. Kerosene of low-test is selling at 1s. 6½d. from store, and high-test at 1s. 8½d., with a steady market; far off shipments at a 1d. to 1½d. less. Castor oil is rather weaker, and cannot be quoted at more than 2s. 6½d. to 2s. 7d., according to quantity; China, 2s. 10½d., raw and boiled, Blundell and Spence's, 3s. 1d., in drum; other brands, from 2s. 8d. There is very little movement in drugs, and prices are without change on the week. Jute goods are nominally quoted at late rates; but the market is, if anything, scarcely so firm, especially for woolpacks and cornsacks. All liquids are rather dull of sale, and the business done discloses no alteration on late market rates.

Our London commercial cables show that on the 5th instant the bank reserve declined from £14,109,000 on the 29th ultimo to £12,670,000 on the 5th instant, and the proportion of reserve to liabilities fell from 43¼ per cent. to 40⅝ per cent. The open market rate had strengthened. Colonial securities are generally rather weaker. After receding to £76 on the 1st July, Australian tin began to rise, and on the 5th instant went to £78 10s. The copper market appears to be rather weaker. On 23rd June, prior to the break of the cable, the price of Chilian was £82 5s. On 1st July it was £81 10s., and on the 5th instant £81 5s. Silver has advanced a farthing to 3s. 6¼d. The wheat market seems to fluctuate. A slight improvement on the 1st instant was followed by a decline on the 5th instant. The American market, however, remained strong, an advance of 1 cent. per bushel having taken place in the price of winter wheat in New York.

Among the most important of the recent sales of city property is that reported elsewhere by Messrs. Hardie and Gorman, of the site occupied by Messrs. W. H. Paling and Co., Limited, having 50ft. frontage to George-street, by a considerable depth, along a 20ft. street, for £87,500, or equal to £1750 per foot.

The following was the Customs revenue received today:—

Spirits, £1677 12s. 3d.; samples, £1 15s. 5d.; wine (still), £49 17s. 6d.; wine (sparkling), £90 10s.; ale, porter, and beer (in wood), £25; ale, porter, and beer (in bottles), £33 7s. 3d.; tobacco and snuff, £667 6s. 3d.; cigars, £157 16s. 10d.; cigarettes, £45 10s. 6d.; tea, £217 6s. 9d.; coffee, £8 4s. 6d.; coffee (raw), £49 16s. 6d.; sugar (refined), £13 6s. 8d.; sugar (unrefined), £176 7s. 3d.; sugar (molasses), £2 17s. 2d.; opium, £95 10s.; rice, £35 3s. 6d.; dried fruits, £31 8s. Specific Duty: Bacon and hams, 12s.; butter, £4 14s. 1d.; candles, £105 7s. 4d.; cement, £59 16s.; cocoa and chocolate, £42 1s. 4d.; confectionery, £7 7s. 10d.; essences (over 25 per cent. of proof spirit), £2 8s. 2d.; fish, £15 12s. 6d.; galvanised iron, £779 15s. 10d.; galvanised manufactures, £9 18s.; iron and steel wire, £28 6s. 7d.; jams and jellies, £66; oil, kerosene, £130; oils (in bottles), £20 4s.; oils, other, £26 15s.; paints, £31 1s.; powder, blasting, £291 13s. 4d.; powder, sporting, £10 13s. 9d.; salt, £5 4s. 4d.; shot, £43 15s.; timber (dressed), £75 6s. 5d.; timber (undressed), 7s. 6d.; bonded warehouses, 42 Vic., No. 19, £221; harbour and light rates, £25 4s. 4d.; pilotage, Sydney, £20 12s.; excise on tobacco, £1500; total, £6902 12s. 5d.

SEASON 1888-89.
We have very great pleasure in stating that our buyers advise us that they have been very successful in securing a large number of the most desirable "chops" from the best districts for tea culture, and that these Teas are coming forward this season bearing the impress of our own Registered Trade Marks. Of the merits of these Teas it is unnecessary for us to dilate. Their reputation is world-wide. Every lover of good Tea admires and appreciates their wonderful qualities, as soothers, restorers, and invigorators of the human system when enervated by heat or worn by toil.
It is to our judgment in the selecting of these varieties that we owe the success of our house, and if for no other reason we deserve well of the public for the introduction of these simply incomparable Teas.
Musters are on view at our offices, and samples will be forwarded on application.

WILLIAM NOALL, 4, Collins-street East, Melbourne.
R. R. KING, Newcastle.

This Company is formed to purchase and work the estate of 2560 acres freehold in the Parish of Teralba, adjoining the West Wallsend Coal Company. This is one of the few remaining great freehold estates with the Newcastle coal seams underlying the whole area.

The famous Wallsend seam is believed to exist below the whole surface, as proved by the West Wallsend shafts and the bores of the Monk-Wearmouth and other collieries adjacent, as well as by the bore on the property itself, as shown by the section herewith, as supplied from the Mines Department, Sydney.

A consumption of 30 acres per annum, based on a yearly output of 240,000 tons (the Newcastle Wallsend Company uses 50 acres per annum), will give the Company a life of 85 years from the Wallsend seam alone.

This mine possesses an important advantage over many of the mines now working in this district very profitably, viz., that it is freehold, and without any charge for royalty on the coal produced.

ESTIMATED PROFITS.

An output of 150,000 tons per annum, at 11s per ton, will give gross income	£82,500
Less cost free on board shipping, at 7s 9d	58,125
Gross profit	£24,375
Directors, Office, and other charges	2,000
Net profit	£22,375
Interest on debentures, £25,000, at 6 per cent.	1,500
	£20,875
Dividend at 15 per cent. on £110,000	16,500
Annual margin for depreciation	4,375
	£20,875

It is further to be borne in mind that the profit from sale of small coal will be a considerable item, in addition to the above.

As the coal trade is rapidly growing, the annual output in a few years may be expected to rise to 200,000 tons, and then to 250,000 tons, in which case the dividends would be proportionately increased.

The following tables give the trade of Newcastle since 1881, and the output of the leading collieries last year (1887):—

GOVERNMENT RETURNS OF EXPORT OF NEWCASTLE COAL.
TONS:

1881	1882	1883	1884	1885	1886	1887
1,851,505	1,419,122	1,731,956	2,051,843	2,133,372	2,178,116	2,260,438

OUTPUT OF LEADING COLLIERIES, 1887:

	Tons.
Newcastle Wallsend Coal Company	491,794
Australian Agricultural Company	374,254
Co-operative Coal Company	224,225
Lambton Coal Company	172,614
Duckenfield Colliery	203,407

The above tables will show how it is that the new mines as they are opened find profitable employment without injury to the older collieries. The trade is a growing one, and there is plenty of room for the new mines year by year.

The value of this freehold estate for surface only is very great, as it is a beautiful open champaign country, suitable in great part for farms, orchards, &c. The recent sales of the West Wallsend Coal Co. allotments have been at the rate of £120 per acre, and a large profit is anticipated outside sales of coal, from lease and sale of surface rights.

The vendors ask for this unique property the sum of about £31 per acre only, payable as under:—

In paid-up shares	£35,000
In cash payable within 18 months from date of registration, say in 3, 6, 9, 12, 15, and 18 months, by equal instalments	20,000
In debentures, having currency of five years, bearing 6 per cent. interest, and secured on the property	25,000
	£80,000

The Subscribed Capital, amounting to 75,000 Shares at £1, say £75,000, would be appropriated thus:—

To the Vendors, as above	£20,000
For cost of opening the Mine, Machinery, and Running Plant	55,000
	£75,000

The West Wallsend Coal Co. has just started on an expenditure of about £45,000; so the sum provided above (£55,000) is ample for all purposes.

The Railway of the Company will be about a mile in length to the West Wallsend Railway, which can be used on payment of traction rate, or on payment of part cost and maintenance.

There is an ample supply of timber on the estate, not only for the wants of the colliery, but for sale for building purposes. This feature in the property is of great importance, as many of the collieries are now at great expense for props.

The following table shows the value of the Wallsend Seam, which is worked by all the Mining Companies cited:—

Company.	Original value of share.	Present value.	Dividend.
Newcastle Wallsend Coal Co.	£10	£51 0 0	£5
Waratah Coal Company	6	14 10 0	None
Stockton Coal Company	1	2 12 0	20 per cent.
Newcastle Coal Company	10	18 10 0	15 per cent.
Burwood Coal Company	1	1 15 0	12½ per cent.
West Wallsend Coal Co. (New Co.)	1	1 6 0	None yet declared
Wickham, &c., Coal Company	1	1 5 0	Ditto
Hetton Coal Company	5	9 10 0	Ditto

There are other companies, English and private, working this same seam, and though their profits are not known, it is notorious that they could show results equal to the above.

The costs of floating, brokerage, and legal expenses would be a first charge on the company's assets.

Applications for shares must be sent to the Brokers in the annexed form, with a cheque for 2s 6d per share. The shares will be allotted, as far as possible, in the order of application, and the list closed as soon as the subscription is complete. All moneys will be returned in full if the Company is not formed.

The world has its careful souls who have such regard for the welfare of others that they devote themselves to the sometimes thankless task of being the critics of good form and the final authority on the canons of decorum. It is possible that the destiny of mankind might be worked out without them, but there has never been the opportunity to decide absolutely upon the matter, and it is likely there never will be. Our Parliament possesses these candid, unselfish people. The other evening a Minister of the Crown was jokingly impeached for singing a comic song among boon companions in "a low public-house." This zealous regard for the dignity of public office drew from the Minister a denial which was pathetic in its force and sincerity. He proved, to the satisfaction of his fellow members, that the song was sung in a town hall at a banquet, and not in a low public-house, and he gave them much pleasant satisfaction to know that he sang it well. Thus arises the question, may a Minister of the Crown who sings a comic song well do so while being entertained by his admirers? It is necessary to add the "well," because, in all probability, there would be no frequency of the usage if it were known that Ministers of the Crown could sing no better than ordinary folk. It seems the Minister in this case sang to willing ears, and that he remembers the achievement with pride. So that the particular case does not claim our attention, but we are led to apply the query generally. It might be fairly agreed at the beginning that a Minister should be permitted to use the graceful talent that Nature gave him, the same as any other man, and a good song is a graceful thing, therefore he should be permitted to sing. The line has, however, to be drawn somewhere, solemnly and decorously. Given to a Minister ever so sweet a voice, the sense of propriety which animates the breasts of the public censors would ask him to pause just this side, perhaps, of "Razors in the Air," or "We're all very fine and large." The matter of degree is the important thing. The old Scotch minister was terribly aggrieved at his brother minister, younger in the evangelical field, for playing the fiddle, till he heard him bring from the strings "The Old Hundredth" and a few selections from Tate and Brady. Then he embraced him, and was thankful that the fiddle was a religious fiddle. So likewise it is not a Minister's singing that should be challenged, but what he sings.

This tendency to preserve an espionage over the conduct of public men, and to measure private actions with the Damascian rule of preconceived ideas of public form, is one which has something more than a humorous side. It is declared by some unwritten law that when a man puts on the robe of office he must put off those garments of every day use which belong to the citizen, who serves himself and not his fellow-men. The eternal fitness of things is the rule that the world says must be followed, but who shall declare upon this "Eternal fitness of things?" Behold a Bishop, whom one has been in the habit of seeing in his apron and lawn, at a seaside resort in a suit of checked tweed, digging sand with his grand-children! This would be enough to shock the austere souls of many good folk, and that lawn would never be quite so white again, nor that sleek apron cover entirely spotless piety any more. A clergyman keeps a good horse, and passes on the road a parishioner who had prided himself on keeping a good horse also, and ever after there are doubts as to whether that clergyman did not miss his vocation. A curate keeps a couple of dogs and a gun, and does not look consumptive, and will not intone his conversation, but talks like a healthy human being, over afternoon tea or a missionary turkey, and there are minds perplexed as to whether he is impressed enough with the responsibility of his office. A Chief Justice does not appear in a silk hat, and is heard to whistle "Willow-tit-willow," or something of the kind, in the precincts of the Court perhaps, and legal souls who love in a sad fashion the wig and gown shake their heads sagely over the lack of dignity. A leader in the Church goes to the Theatre, and may perhaps have been seen at Randwick or Flemington; and the aspirate of a profound regret goes through a circle of retiring coadherents. In society, that weary realm of conventionality, there goes a proclamation from an acknowledged head, and straightway, as in the comic opera, there comes the general responsive assent, and a chorus of kindred attitudes. Who breaks away then after his or her own wilfulness does it at peril and comes under the ban of not having observed "good form."

And yet why rail against this "good form"? It is after all the saving clause in the bill of human action. The danger lies not in doing things in good form but in defying it. The basis of good form is good taste, and those who cry "To the winds with conventionality and form," are those who do things that may prove their own freedom, but which interfere with the freedom of others. To throw aside what are called the trammels of custom, and say "I care for nobody, no, not I," is to proclaim oneself a social freebooter and a "Philistine." Poets, artists, and the like are supposed to have that license in custom which is called by the unbelieving and the scoffers affectation, but ordinary mortals are not supposed to share in the emancipation. Those who come before the public, and who perform large public functions, are expected to bear the burden of their honours and responsibilities with dignity. It is more than likely, however, that Puritanism, which is a British heritage, has made the estimation of the conduct of public officers to a large extent an unnatural thing. A good healthy man with the spring of life in him, though he would not care to play the buffoon, or to descend to the foolery of a pantaloon or a foolish-pated school-boy, must have a natural expression to his feelings, or smother them up behind a decorous austerity. The appalling array of buttons on the coat of a Doctor of the Laws, the cocked-hat of the Admiral, the silk gown of the Speaker, the leggings of the Archdeacon, and the red hat of the Cardinal—these impressive insignia are too often understood to be used to command respect, where the simplicity of a dignified and upright manhood ought to be sufficient. "It is not the office," said a writer, "that dignifies the man, but the man that dignifies the office." When a man of right mind and fair judgment holds an office, there need be no fear of his doing things that are not in good taste. Some men are born with the instinct in them for doing the right thing in the right place. A Royal Duke does not detract from the dignity of his position if, playing the violin, he assists at a charity concert; but the sine qua non is that he must play it well, and if he is a man of moderate sensibility he will know how far he ought to go in such things. No man can set the limit for another. There are general matters of taste and custom, of course, in regard to which there can be no question. The discipline of the army would prevent a general, as it would prevent a private, from coming on parade with his coat unbuttoned and his belt hanging; but if either, when off duty, chose to work in his shirt-sleeves—as it is chronicled by Froude a right honourable gentleman was found in his Ministerial office one day "a Cæsar in shirt sleeves" when on duty—who shall gainsay him? It is the individual appreciation of the eternal fitness of things, guided by a natural instinct and governed by common sense, which will decide for every man what he should do publicly or privately. The Minister may sing his song, the Parson ride to the hounds, the Bishop smoke his Manilla—if he cannot afford Murios—the lawyer wear a Panama hat, and the Chief Justice play cricket, if they do so in proper season. And as for those who lift hands of reproach—to them Ophelia's words come not amiss: "But good my brother, do not as some ungracious pastors do, show me the steep, and thorny road to heaven; whilst like a puffed and reckless libertine, himself the primrose path of dalliance treads, and recks not his own rede."

A correspondent who complained in last Saturday's issue of the Herald respecting the practice of smoking in railway carriages and elsewhere has not been allowed a monopoly of the question, and other correspondents, both of the smoking and non-smoking faction, have since bounded into the arena with him. That there is a certain amount of ground for the first writer's complaint is, of course, true. There are people who have the unenviable faculty of making their company disagreeable in railway carriages as well as elsewhere. People who do not indulge in what its admirers somewhat optimistically call the fragrant weed can imagine a good many more pleasant experiences, we may suppose, than being cooped up in a car in a cloud of tobacco mist which is not always exactly fragrant. Ladies who are compelled to submit to an affliction of this kind, under circumstances which do not admit of their taking refuge elsewhere, are clearly victims to the practice of smoking in others. So far no one will care to join issue with our correspondents whose complaints cover ground of this kind. But the zeal of some has carried them beyond this, and would seem to seek to make the question as between smokers and non-smokers an absolute one—without benefit of clergy, as it were.

From the time of Sir Walter Raleigh and the "Counterblast against Tobacco", of that wise king whose sagacity so much resembled quite another quality, literature is full of references to the tobacco question. Modern fictional literature would be past identification without it. From Sir Isaac Newton who daintily stopped his pipe with a lady's white finger, to Charles Darwin with his one cigarette of a morning, all our great scientific men seem from this distance to have divided their time between smoking tobacco and making their most important discoveries. We have known in these colonies grave church dignitaries who did not find the iniquity of a pipe dire enough to obliterate their moral sense, and from the experience of most of us at home and abroad there is surely no reason to infer, because a man can enjoy an inoffensive and non-assertive cigar, that his commercial or social principles are unsound. For the great majority of people, who are neither church dignitaries nor scientific alumni, the balance of opinion seems to incline in favour of a conviction that there is nothing inherently baneful in the practice which has set so many worthy persons by the ears, and that, moderately exercised, the use of tobacco in any one of its various forms may be not only as pleasant as smokers seem to find it, but even actually good in its effects, and positively judicious. Everybody is in a hurry now-a-days, and everyone works at high pressure. Nothing so much exacerbates the nerves as this feverish and more or less spasmodic activity. To persons of an acutely nervous temperament the results of this kind of thing are wearing and injurious to a painful degree. But for this necessity of the stage of civilisation to which we have attained there has been provided a remedy in the judicious use of that soothing narcotic which one finds so conveniently placed at his disposal in tobacco. It is under these circumstances that the weed becomes, in those words of Lord Lytton that one of our correspondents quoted, a great soother and a pleasant comforter.

Of course the abuse of tobacco, like the abuse of anything else, may be made as injurious to the smoker himself as he has it in his power to make it obnoxious to his neighbours. The tobacco habit grows upon some men as the drinking custom grows upon others, until they reach the stage of the planter in the story, whose valet had orders to place a lighted cigar between his master's teeth while asleep every morning, so that the epicure might awake with the proper flavour in his mouth. In this stage medical authorities tell us that tobacco is a fertile cause of disease of the heart, dyspepsia, debility, loss of vision, and various other serious mischiefs, any one of which is sufficient to place the practice of tobacco-smoking in the same category as a toxicological experiment. As a cardiac depressant its action after a certain stage is said to be very active, and those authorities who are charged with a mission to mingle gall and wormwood with even our most cherished luxuries, and who never cease to impress upon us the fact that even the most apparently innocent Pleasure "digs herself her own voluptuous tomb," have given the most disquieting particulars of its action in this respect. Through the nervous system, we are told, tobacco contracts the capillaries, and causes a pale face and cold body surface, while the heart labours to force on the supply of blood until its own vascular system goes under the influence of the narcotic. The smoking of cigarettes, which is as general amongst the youth of the colonies as elsewhere, is particularly injurious to the growing lads who use them, in the way here indicated. The best authorities in the States, where the cigarette has passed into a recognised institution, are unanimous in their unsparing condemnation of the practice of cigarette-smoking in the case of young men and growing boys; while the humour of the American continent has already perceived a use for the cigarette itself as a weapon for the extermination of the "dude."

But all that may be said as to the relative advantages or disadvantages attendant on the use of tobacco need not conceal the facts of which our correspondents complain. It will have been observed that there are complaints on both sides. On the one hand we are told that smokers selfishly persist in annoying non-smokers, while the former urge that the almost general use of tobacco is not sufficiently allowed for in the railway regulations. It is true enough that there are smokers who sometimes forget the consideration which is due to others who are forced to share their company for a time, but we think most people will admit that these are exceptional individuals. When the smoker is forced through lack of accommodation into a carriage not set apart for smoking, travellers on our railways will agree that it is the usual thing to ask if one's neighbours object to tobacco before a move is made in that direction, while few smokers would tolerate another's persistence in smoking against the will of any lady travellers who might chance to be present. Under such circumstances as these it would seem that the difficulty might be best met by a step which would at the same time satisfy the complaints of the smokers themselves. Better accommodation might be provided, and, as some of our correspondents suggest, the prohibition respecting smoking on the railway premises might be withdrawn. It is difficult to see why that permission to smoke a cigar on a railway platform which is so freely given in England should be withheld here. The objections that lie in the one case surely exist in the other, and it is clearly the duty of the Department to calculate on the prevalence of the smoking habit when they make their arrangements for passenger accommodation. Beyond this, the question becomes one of selfishness or otherwise on both sides. It is as miserable an act to deny to another the opportunity of indulging his harmless luxury, so long as it remains harmless and inoffensive to others, as it is for the smoker to inflict himself and his pipe on company where his presence is not desired. As in most other things in this world, the matter becomes a simple one of individual good taste, and of the ordinary courtesies of men and women of all ranks and classes amongst themselves. If every person insisted rigidly on his undoubted rights, without regard to the claims of others, the world would soon come to a standstill. Weakminded persons with strong views make mischief in all the circumstances of life, forgetting that personal force of character is as marked in self-denial as in self-assertion, and that the law of give and take is the one that smooths all intercourse. This is a rule that applies to the question our correspondents have opened, as well as to most other matters; and the discussion has afforded another illustration of that impracticability in the commonest things which lies at the base of most of the complications of ordinary life.

For nearly two weeks we have been without cable news, and have been cut off from contact with European events. Yesterday, however, a batch of cables which had been brought by the Menmuir and Waroonga to Port Darwin from Banjoewangie came to hand. We are thus brought into touch with the world's events up to July the sixth. The cable lines have not, it is supposed, yet been repaired; it is believed however that they will soon be again in working order. The breakage has been set down to volcanic action, and so our neighbours in Victoria have been arraying themselves against the forces of nature, and not against the Chinaman or the Russian. We are, however, not sorry that nature has been at work, and not enemies. The news received by the many cables that have come is not of a startling character. Imagination, which is so apt to conjure up tremendous events, could not have been bounded by the unexciting array of incidents which appears before us this morning. There are no European complications recorded, no disastrous war, no great national crisis. There will be, however, a good intellectual repast for those who have not been hungering for the abnormal. Those who like sporting will find satisfaction in the recorded victories of the Australian Eleven, which has done such excellent work during this season. The clergy and religious folk will be specially interested in the news regarding the opening of the Pan-Anglican Synod at Lambeth, and the references to the Pope and Cardinal Moran; and all will regard carefully the news concerning the Chinese Question and the parleyings which are going on between Pekin and London. One of the most important cables is that referring to Lord Wolseley's attack upon the defences of England, and his statement that London was, comparatively speaking, at the mercy of the French. Interested as we are in the question of defences, the agitation in England cannot fail to keep us alive to a serious regard of our condition. The most important cable, however, to us is that which announces that the Eastern Extension Telegraph Company intend to construct an alternative cable from Banjoewangie to Western Australia, and that the work will be begun immediately. This, of course, will be a great advantage. It will not give us all we need, however. Nothing can quite meet our wants except an alternative cable which does not go through Asia, and which would not be of necessity interrupted in a great Asiatic war. The proposed extension will, though, tend to render our position more secure. Those natural disturbances, however, which were the cause, it is supposed, of the present breakage would it is possible affect the third line to Java, though of course there would be chances against their doing so. No multiplication of lines that touch Asia will secure us. We must look to the Pacific for our alternate hemispheric line. The risk of isolation that we run at present is very great, and considering our fast developing trade, frequent or even occasional interruptions, such as we are experiencing now, would be disastrous to our commercial interests, laying every other consideration aside.

The proceedings in the Legislative Council in the matter of the Torpedo Defence Report were interrupted on Thursday by a count-out, and as a result we may possibly hear nothing more of the matter. Meanwhile, it is to be remarked that we have here an illustration of the mischievous influence of personal feeling when it becomes prominent in the conduct of public business. Here we have a question of vital interest—the efficiency and trustworthiness of one of the most important branches of our defence system. Certainly if there were doubts about the matter, the appointment of a committee of inquiry was justified. Equally certain is it that the results of the inquiry ought to be placed on record in some appropriate way if it appeared that the management of this part of our defences had been characterised by a laxity destructive of confidence, and that in the interest of the public safety a radical change was required. But an inquiry has been held, the report has been submitted, and when the motion for its adoption is discussed we find one member moving the previous question, another arguing for the rejection of the motion, after the manner of a lawyer in a criminal court holding a brief for the defence, and finally the debate collapses in a count-out. The explanation is that the inquiry and the report are regarded as distinguished by personal animus, and that personal feeling on the other side has been called into play, so that between the two the public interest is overlooked. Of one speech, Sir William Manning remarked that from the beginning to the end there was not one word that concerned the general welfare of the public. This is not the first time that the personal element has been found in the transaction of Parliamentary business thrusting the public interest aside. This is not the only department of the Public Service in which the raising of any question as to the conduct or efficiency of public officers would probably find members of Parliament ranging themselves at once on opposite sides. We have seen inquiries pushed with a zeal that might be envied by any newly-appointed Crown Prosecutor eager to win verdicts and fame. We have seen condemnatory reports backed up by the strongest evidence contemptuously pigeon-holed with an open avowal of unbelief. Nothing can be more clear than that the conduct of Parliamentary inquiries, and the treatment in Parliament of the results of inquiries, whether they be conducted by committees or by commissions, ought to be regulated by a simple regard for the public interest, and that in such cases personal feeling should be controlled and suppressed. But the fact that personal feeling is frequently manifesting itself amongst public men in connection with public affairs cannot be denied, and its appearance on one side is almost invariably followed by a reaction on the other.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

After an interruption of some 18 days, we have again news from Europe. Yesterday morning, at about 10 o'clock, it was ascertained that the steamer Governor-General Meyer had arrived at Port Darwin with cables up to the 6th July; also that another steamer, the Waroonga, had reached Thursday Island with duplicate despatches up to the same date. Those from Port Darwin only were sent on, and they will be found in full in our columns. It appears that the Eastern Extension Telegraph Company specially chartered the Governor-General Meyer as soon as possible after the interruption of the cables occurred, and she brought 389 messages that had been delayed. The cable had not been repaired up to the latest date, and it is feared that it had parted again. The delay in splicing the cable is attributed to the bad weather.

Preparations were made yesterday for the publication of the whole of the overdue cable messages in a special edition of the Herald, but the delay in transmission from Port Darwin prevented this being done.

Telegraphic communication on the New Zealand cable, which was cut by the repairing steamer Sherard Osborn on Thursday, was restored at 12.30 p.m. yesterday.

The Minister for Lands was not in his place at the Lands Office yesterday, nor was he in his place on the Ministerial Benches in the Legislative Assembly. Sir Henry Parkes was at the Lands Department from an early hour in the morning until the time arrived for receiving deputations at the Colonial Secretary's office. Up to last night the Premier had received no communication from Mr. Garrett.

Yesterday's sitting of the Legislative Assembly was devoted to the business of private members. The House was small, and members showed little inclination to proceed with business. The Bankruptcy Act Amendment Bill and the Criminal Law Amendment Bill were read the third time. The Parramatta Municipal Quarries Bill, the Parramatta Church-street Amended Alignment Bill, and the Municipal Loans Bill were read the second time, passed through committee, and the third readings were made an order of the day for Monday. The House was counted out shortly after 8 o'clock, on the motion for the second reading of the Church of England Property Bill.

Four deputations waited upon the Colonial Secretary yesterday, the most important being one from Cobar and Nyngan, in support of the construction of the railway line from Nyngan to Cobar. In reply to the deputation, Sir Henry Parkes promised to lay the representations made to him in support of the construction of this line before the Cabinet.

The attention of tenderers for public works is directed to the necessity of complying in every case with the conditions prescribed in the recently issued regulations. The Minister for Works has lately had, in some cases, to order that fresh tenders be called for works in consequence of the lowest tenderer having omitted to make the necessary preliminary deposit. In other cases, where the lowest tenderer has declined to take up the work, he has directed that fresh tenders are to be called at short notice. In the case of tenders being sent in for the construction of a bridge over Homany Creek at Mangrove, the lowest tenderer failed to enclose a preliminary deposit, and in the case of the erection of a courthouse at Broken Hill, the lowest tenderer having withdrawn, the Secretary for Works has ordered that fresh tenders be invited. In the case also of the tenders for the erection of a bridge over the "Three-mile" at Warrnambool, the lowest tenderer omitted to forward the requisite deposit. Fresh tenders in this case have also been invited.

A good deal of anxiety has been felt of late amongst those interested in military affairs as to what would be the ultimate fate of the Paddington rifle range after it had ceased to be used for shooting purposes. As soon as a new rifle range has been provided the Paddington range will, of course, be abandoned, as its proximity to the Centennial Park renders its use, even on only one day of the week, rather dangerous. The matter has now, however, been set at rest by the decision of the Colonial Secretary, notified in a military order issued yesterday, that he has approved of the rifle range at Paddington being retained as a drill ground for the military forces of the colony. This will prevent the land being resumed for any other purpose, and as a permanent drill ground for the Sydney forces is very much needed, the decision of the Colonial Secretary has given great satisfaction. It is a remarkable fact that out of numerous parks and public lands surrounding Sydney, there is really no space permanently available for drill purposes except this rifle range, and therefore it would have been undesirable to allow it to pass out of the possession of the military authorities. The ground will also be very useful as a camping ground, either during the Easter manoeuvres, or at any time when it might become necessary to call out our forces in readiness to repel an attack.

A report was received by the Chief Inspector of Stock yesterday to the effect that mange had broken out amongst stock in the Kempsey district. The application of M'Dougall's sheep dip to the infected animals had been, the local inspector stated, attended with the most beneficial results.

His Honor Mr. Justice Owen sat in Equity yesterday, and delivered a written judgment in the suit Blunt v. Terry, setting out at length his reasons for dismissing the suit. Mr. Justice Foster sat for some time in Chambers in the morning, and disposed of several unimportant matters.

In his "English Gossip," which we publish this morning, our Special Correspondent refers to current opinions in connection with the "War Scare," to the State Ball at Buckingham Palace, to the Meet of the Four-in-Hand Club at Hyde Park, to recent literature, and to the various attractions in the theatrical world.

A public meeting, under the auspices of the Commercial, Pastoral, and Agricultural Association, was held last night, at the Chamber of Commerce, to consider the land question. Mr. W. M'Millan M.L.A., occupied the chair, and various speakers addressed the meeting, condemning the present state of the land law. A resolution was passed expressing regret that the session should be allowed to close without some amendment of the land law; a second resolution was also agreed to deprecating any repudiation on the part of the Government of the refund to which pastoral lessees were entitled in regard to the excess of rent paid during the last three years.

A sculling race for £100 a-side was rowed over the Parramatta championship course yesterday afternoon. The competitors were Henry E. Searle, a promising young oarsman, who hails from the Clarence River, and James Stansbury, a youth of 20, who belongs to the Shoalhaven district. Both men had previously defeated Julius Wulf, a sculler of no mean repute, and considerable interest was taken in this match, which terminated in the defeat of Stansbury. Searle started a firm favourite at 2 to 1 on. The men got away to a capital start, both striking 40 to the minute. After the first burst the pace was moderated to the "thirties." At Uhr's Point Searle led his opponent by three-quarters of a length, and at the mile beacon, which was passed in 5 minutes 35 seconds, the Clarence River man had a lead of a clear length. Searle rowed in good form, but Stansbury was wanting in style, and laboured too much. Nevertheless, he pulled a magnificent race, and made several repeated and most determined attempts to outrow his more speedy and graceful opponent. Searle, however, was enabled to maintain the advantage he had gained, and he eventually beat Stansbury by two lengths, the time being the fastest yet recorded in a match race on the Parramatta, viz., 19 minutes 53 seconds, Trickett's time for the same distance—20 minutes 11 seconds—being the next best. The contest was decided on the last of an ebb tide, and under conditions favourable to making fast time.

The annual stud sheep sales were brought to a close yesterday at Mort and Co.'s stores. The attendance of buyers was not nearly so large as on the previous day, and consequently the bidding was not so spirited. The two best figures of yesterday's proceedings were the sales of Grand Duke II., and Level Top, two celebrated New South Wales and Queensland rams, who brought respectively 170 and 140 guineas, the last named being secured for a Tasmanian breeder. The total number of sheep sold during the two days were 1397, and the amount realised £18,426 2s. 8d.

On Friday afternoon a number of gentlemen, among whom was the Hon. C. J. Roberts, Postmaster-General, assembled at the Theatre Royal to view a mammoth map of Australia, painted for the Melbourne Exhibition. The map was painted for Mr. Edward Greville by Mr. W. J. Wilson, scenic artist, under the supervision of Mr. C. J. Saunders, chief draughtsman of the Survey Department, and was taken from the Victorian continental map. The dimensions of the map are 18ft. square, and the peculiarity of the production consists in indicating on the surface the minerals which underlie it. The main geographical features are also shown.

Referring to the want of promptitude in the Telegraph Department, a correspondent writes—"Yesterday a telegram was dispatched to me from the Oxford-street branch at 5.6 p.m., and delivered at my office, Wentworth-court, Elizabeth-street, at 5.50 p.m., having just taken 44 minutes to reach its destination, and causing me both trouble and expense because of the lateness of its delivery." Our correspondent says, although he is by no means a pedestrian, he would engage to walk four times the distance within that time.

Messrs. Biddell Brothers, the well-known confectioners of George-street, have now on view at their factory, in Lackey-street, Darling Harbour, a very attractive collection of choice confectionery, which they intend displaying in the New South Wales Court at the Melbourne Centennial Exhibition. The exhibit consists of three cases, two of which are about 5ft. long by 4ft. broad, with a glass front, and they are intended to hang pendant from the wall of the building. Each case is divided into a number of miniature compartments, all of which contain assortments of the different varieties of sweetmeats manufactured by the firm. The work of arranging the different kinds of sample confections has been most artistically carried out, as the variously-coloured lozenges have been so placed as to afford a pleasing contrast, whilst the trade mark of the firm is tastefully displayed in the centre of each case. The exhibit comprises about 180 specimens of the confectioner's art, among which are bon-bons, liqueurs, gelatines, caramels, cachous, musk, rose, preserved cocoanut, gum and chocolate goods, all of a very high order of manufacture, and equal in taste and appearance to the best imported article. Colonial sugar alone has been used in producing these goods, which have been made entirely on the premises. The exhibit will doubtless prove a very interesting one in showing to what extent the sugar-boiling and lozenge-making industry has developed in this colony.

The following is the order of service at St. Andrew's Cathedral on Sunday next:—Morning, 11 o'clock: Te Deum, Thorne in C; anthem, "O Saviour of the World," Goss. Afternoon, 3.15 o'clock: Magnificat, Walmisley in D minor; anthem, "Hallelujah," Engedi (Beethoven); Litany, Tallis.

In our report of the meeting in connection with St. James' Church, the resolution moved by Dr. Woodward with reference to the conditions upon which the incumbent had offered to give up the present parsonage ran as follows:—"That this meeting requests the parishioners to accede to the proposals of the Rev. H. L. Jackson." We are asked to state that the request was addressed to the trustees of St. James', not to the parishioners. The sentence should therefore run thus: "That this meeting requests the trustees to accede to the proposals of the Rev. H. L. Jackson."

Mr. W. Robson writes to disclaim the credit given to him in our report of the Orange Demonstration. He says to Mr. P. D. M'Cormick alone is due the credit of presenting so acceptable a programme as was given at the concert.

The following is the report of the Benevolent Asylum for the week ending July 11, 1888:—Admitted, 7 women, 10 children; births, 7; death, 1; discharged, 7 women, 7 children. Remaining in the house, 106 women, 156 children; total, 262. Provisions distributed—1944 loaves bread, 1358lb. flour, 611lb. meat, 563lb. sugar, 140lb. tea, 95½lb. sago, 177lb. rice, 2lb. arrowroot, 163lb. oatmeal. Fresh applications for relief, 28; cases reported by the inspector, 80; in 22 cases the relief was discontinued, and in 1 case the rent money was disallowed. Total number of cases relieved, 489.

THE DEFENCES OF ENGLAND.

DISCUSSION IN THE HOUSE OF LORDS.

LORD WOLSELEY ON A POSSIBLE FRENCH INVASION.

REPLY BY LORD SALISBURY.

[By Cable.]
(From our Correspondent.)

LONDON, June 30.

In the course of a speech in the House of Lords last night, Viscount Wolseley declared that it would be the easiest possible operation for France to collect 100,000 men and 300 guns in one night. There was ample shipping any day in the ports of France to convey these forces to England with the object of capturing London. He condemned Lord George Hamilton's denials as being wildly misleading.

Lord Salisbury, replying to Lord Wolseley's remarks, expressed the greatest surprise at his statements, and declared that invasion was next to impossible. He said that the Transport Department was responsible for Lord George Hamilton's statements. He suggested that Lord Wolseley would be acting a better part if he were to guide rather than chastise the Government. Experts at the Admiralty ridiculed his fears.

The Duke of Cambridge also assured the House that there was no immediate danger of foreign invasion.

THE INTERRUPTION OF THE CABLES.

THE CABLES NOT YET RESTORED.

RECEIPT OF CABLE NEWS BY STEAMERS.

It was expected that telegraphic communication on the cables between Port Darwin and Banjoewangie would have been restored yesterday, but up to a late hour last night the cables were still silent. By the arrival of steamers at Port Darwin and Thursday Island yesterday morning, however, we have been placed in possession of European intelligence up to July 6.

The following memorandum was received last night from Mr. J. Euston Squier, at La Perouse, local superintendent of the Eastern Extension Telegraph Company:—"Our superintendent at Port Darwin telegraphs the following:—The steamer Governor-General Meyer was specially chartered by the company as soon as possible after the interruption in the cables. She brought 389 messages, some of which were sent by the Waroonga and the Menmuir. Three days' notice of departure was given to all telegraph administrations. The steamer Governor-General Meyer can be detained at Port Darwin 48 hours. After that a demurrage at £4 per hour will be charged. Please advise as to what detention will be most suitable to the Governments and public." Nothing has been heard from the Recorder since daylight. It looks as if the cable had again parted. The test makes the break close to the ship; hope she will recover the end to-day. The cable having probably parted again, it is suggested that the Governor-General Meyer be despatched for Banjoewangie at noon on Saturday, and a reply to that effect has been telegraphed to Port Darwin. The delay in repairing the cables is doubtless on account of the bad weather."

The following has also been received from Mr. Squier:—"Our superintendent at Port Darwin wires:—On the simultaneous interruption of both cables all messages on hand up to Monday, 2nd instant, were sent from Hongkong by the Menmuir, and all on hand up to Friday by the Waroonga, from Banjoewangie. All messages from date of interruption up to 7 on Friday evening, the 6th, were sent by special steamer Governor-General Meyer. The repairing steamer Recorder left Singapore on Sunday, July 1st, for repairs. The London board attribute the breaks to volcanic action. The company's steamer Sherard Osborne, now in New Zealand, proceeds to Port Darwin."

A THIRD LINE OF COMMUNICATION WITH JAVA.

ALTERNATIVE LAND LINE THROUGH AUSTRALIA.

THE WORK TO BE COMMENCED IMMEDIATELY.

LONDON, July 6.

Sir John Pender, chairman of the Eastern Extension Telegraph Company, has announced that the company have decided to construct a cable from Banjoewangie to Western Australia.

Operations will be commenced forthwith.

[Last night we received the following memorandum from Mr. J. Euston Squier, at La Perouse, the local superintendent of the Eastern Extension Telegraph Company:—"By telegram, from London, to-day. I am directed by our chairman and board to communicate the following:—In consequence of the unfortunate interruption through the sudden and simultaneous breakdown of both the Java and Australian cables, which is attributable to volcanic actions, and with a view to prevent a recurrence as far as possible, the company have decided to immediately lay a cable between Banjoewangie and Western Australia. This will give the colonies a third line of communication with Java, and an alternative land line through Australia."]

PARLEYING BY THE BRITISH MINISTER AT PEKIN.

REPRESENTATIONS TO THE CHINESE GOVERNMENT.

[By Cable.]
(From our Correspondent.)

LONDON, July 1.

It is the general impression at Shanghai that the Chinese Government cares little for the exclusion of the Chinese from Australia, but will seek to make this an excuse for extorting other concessions from England.

July 3.

The representatives of the Chinese residents in Australia are urging the Government at Pekin to reject the British proposals for a settlement of the Chinese question, in Australia if the proposals are based upon the lines of the treaty between the United States and China, under which Chinese are excluded from America for a period of 20 years.

THE LIBEL ACTION AGAINST THE "TIMES."

THE CASE CONCLUDED.

VERDICT FOR THE DEFENDANT.

THE CRITICISMS JUSTIFIED.

[By Cable.]
(From our Correspondent.)

LONDON, July 4.

The action for libel brought against the Times by Mr. F. H. O'Donnell, formerly M.P. for Dungarvan, who claimed £10,000 damages for statements made respecting him in the series of articles on "Parnellism and Crime" which appeared in that journal, was resumed to-day.

The case for the plaintiff was closed. O'Donnell was not placed under examination. The counsel for the defendant contended that the strictures which formed the ground of the action did not apply to O'Donnell.

July 5.

The libel action against the Times was continued to-day. Sir Richard Webster, Q.C., Attorney-General, counsel for the defence, produced a number of letters purporting to have been written at various times by Messrs. Parnell, Egan, and Byrne. Mr. Parnell, writing from Kilmainham, reproached Egan for his hesitation after the latter had promised to "make it hot for old Forster." Egan, it was alleged, wrote to James Carey in the month of October preceding the Phœnix Park murders, stating that he had sent M—— (referring, it is believed, to a member of the Invincible organisation named Mullett) a sum of £200, urging him to give value for the money. In the letter purporting to have been written by Byrne, he admitted that Mr. Parnell gave him £100 when leaving London in 1882.

Before the witnesses for the defence were called, Lord Chief Justice Coleridge ruled that there was no case against the Times.

Council for the plaintiff withdrew that portion of the case which was based upon the remarks having general reference to the Liberals, and proceeded with the alleged libels referring to O'Donnell personally.

Lord Chief Justice Coleridge denounced the gross injustice of the tactics pursued by O'Donnell against the Times, as well as those of the Parnellites.

A verdict was returned for defendant, with costs.

The jury added a rider to their verdict to the effect that the criticisms of the Times were justified.

For the present, the writer adds, he is only dealing with the mere project, but should the affair end in the expedition being organised, the conducting of it should be entrusted to the originator of the scheme (Mr. Neumayer), who, as a man of science and a practical seaman, is so eminently fitted for the task."]

FATAL ACCIDENT.

[By Telegraph.]
(From our Correspondent.)

BATHURST, Friday.

At the hospital to-day an inquest was held before Mr. B. Lee, P.M., the coroner, and a jury of 12, on the body of a girl 9 years old, Agnes Stewart Buchanan Brownlee, who died there on the evening of Wednesday. It appeared from the evidence that her parents resided at Balmain, where, on the 20th June last, the deceased was sent on a message, and while passing across the street a horse galloped past and knocked her down. She was picked up and carried home, arriving there in a dazed condition, a slight bruise on the ear being all the injury that was visible. She grew somewhat better, but was never the same afterwards. She was attended to at Balmain for a week by Dr. Burgoyne; but having removed with his family to Bathurst, the father of the child called in Dr. Edmunds, upon whose advice she was removed to the hospital on Tuesday last, being then in a semi-conscious state, but afterwards she became wholly unconscious, and died on the following night. Dr. Edmunds gave as his opinion that death resulted from compression of the brain, caused by a clot of blood or abscess, such as might be produced by the injury described, and a verdict was returned to that effect. During the inquiry the police desired to obtain from the father of the girl the name of the person that caused the accident, but this information he declined to give.

THE SOUTH WARATAH COLLIERY DISPUTE.

DIFFICULTIES ABOUT AN ARBITRATOR.

[BY TELEGRAPH.]
(FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.)

NEWCASTLE, FRIDAY.

Although on Monday last the South Waratah miners resumed work pending arbitration, a difficulty has since arisen. Yesterday the directors intimated that the arbitrators appointed to act on their behalf in the settlement of the dispute were Mr. Henry Stokes, managing director of the Newcastle Permanent Investment and Building Society, and Mr. Hugh Walker, contractor, of Waratah. The miners nominated as arbitrators on their behalf Mr. Jacob Garrard, M.L.A., and Mr. William Young, assurance agent, of West Maitland. Mr. James Curley, miners' general secretary, without reference to the miners' delegate board, considered it his duty to object to Mr. Henry Stokes sitting as arbitrator on behalf of the company, and declined to go any further in negotiations unless the Waratah Company appointed another arbitrator in the place of Mr. Stokes, who is brother to Mr. Charles Stokes, one of the directors of the Waratah Company, and is largely interested in the coal trade. The matter will come before the miners' delegate board as soon as a meeting can be called, which will probably be when Ralph Goundry, president of the Hunter River Miners' Association, returns from the Southern district.

ELGIN WATCHES
ARE THE BEST IN THE WORLD.
THE LEADING AMERICAN TIMEKEEPERS.
THE MOST EXCELLENT WATCHES FOR RAILWAYS.

These celebrated watches are unsurpassed for excellence of material and workmanship, and are universally acknowledged to be the most accurate timekeepers.

Astronomers and explorers have unhesitatingly pronounced them more trustworthy than the best known chronometers.

Nearly all the Observatories throughout America are provided with ELGIN WATCHES to correct any error in the rate of their Chronometers.

In taking observations astronomers frequently use ELGIN WATCHES in preference to their chronometers.

Explorers tell us that on expeditions made into some parts of the uninhabited globe they have been provided with no less than "four chronometers," but that the only "horological instrument" upon which they were able to rely was an ELGIN WATCH, all the others having become useless.—Vide Astronomer Powell's report.

WILCANNIA, FRIDAY.

A heavy dust storm, accompanied with bleak southerly winds and a few drops of rain, has been raging all day.

The weather at Morden is very dry, and there is no appearance of rain. The nights are frosty.

Tibooburra reports that the weather is still very dry, but several places in the Mount Margaret district, Queensland, have been visited by 3in. of rain, and now have plenty of feed and water. If the weather does not change shearing will be unsatisfactory. Water is becoming scarce at Tibooburra, even for domestic purposes. A few men camped some miles out have all they can do to supply themselves with water from the dam in the township.

CUT THE PAINTER?

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—A significant comment on the patriotic (?) proposal to separate Australia from the United Kingdom is found in the feverish anxiety of all classes for the resumption of cable communication with the mother country! Why desire to know what is going on in a land from which some pray earnestly to be eternally severed?

LECTURES.

"NEW ZEALAND, THE WONDERLAND OF OCEANA."

Last night Major Dane gave a lecture at the Y. M. C. A. Hall upon "New Zealand, the Wonderland of Oceana." There was a large attendance. The lecturer first presented a picture of the country as seen by him in a year's journeying from North Cape to Southland, and from coast to coast. He saw at once that he was entering a scene of great beauty. In all his journeyings he had never been more amazed. Some of the people delighted to call Auckland the Naples of New Zealand. It had no resemblance to Naples, but there was a striking resemblance to Corinth. He extended his journey carefully and slowly, and examined everything for himself. New Zealand was unique in everything—in soil and in climate. The great evil was that the people did not know what they had; they hardly knew what richness there were to develop. To sail up some of the rivers in the north portion, one could almost think one was sailing on Italian lakes. One missed the ruins, but there were ruins even here. It was in the Bay of Islands that the pioneers commenced their work, and the missionaries their labours. There were great mountains of trees—to call it Australian bush was an insult to trees. (Laughter). After a pleasing description of a Wesleyan mission station, the great forests were touched upon. The settlers were trying to take care of 50 acres. If they could take care of five acres, that was enough for them, and with that five acres they could grow all that they could take care of. Then there were the mountains and little hamlets amongst them. Here the farmers had to sharpen the noses of their sheep so that they could feed amongst the rocks. (Laughter.) One thing was that a man wanted but little land, but he had to give all his attention to it, or else he would be outgrown. A flying visit was made to Russell, which was alluded to as a most wonderful place. Life was so quiet there that the people might be said to be the most lazy he had ever met. The Bays of Islands generally were magnificent and would one day become the haunt of people from every part of the world. Leaving it, he was struck by the fact that the settlers were burning down the trees, destroying that great mine of wealth, equal in some respects to their great gold mines. Certainly one day they would regret it. But to get a great contrast they must sail down a thousand miles to the Southern Sounds. George's Sound was the most beautiful of all. There were no lakes in Switzerland or Italy compared to these. There were at least 100 "foreign ports" in New Zealand, but they would ultimately have only one, and that would be Auckland. Australia would have one, and that would be Sydney. Commerce only knew one thing—its own advantage—and you could not turn it away. (Applause.) They had tried to do this in his own country, and had spent millions in doing it, but had always failed. To Sydney and to Auckland, as the natural ports, the shipping of 50 years would come. (Applause.) Of course he found miners; but there had never been any gold-mining in New Zealand, only a slovenly style of raking it in by the bushel. Everywhere there were big holes, as though there had been an endeavour to bury all the Maories. In the rivers he saw them dredging it up like they dredged up mud in America. No one said anything to you, and you passed on leaving them dredging. Away to Mount Cook you were amongst the glaciers. You could ride up to them in your carriage without difficulty or danger. Nowhere else could this be done in the whole world. What a place of resort it would be some day. In a few minutes you were amongst the woods, and saw the wonderful kauris and majestic ferns. There were also marvellous birds. On the plains you saw a house here and a house there, and a few people "scratching the ground with a rake you called a plough." Yet folks said they could not live in New Zealand. Up they went to the rich plains of Canterbury. Money had been spent there lavishly because it came lavishly. Come round to Nelson. The first picture of it was not striking; but when you got to know it, it was like a paradise. The trouble here was that people could live too easily. Wellington was one of the cleanest places in the world. The wind blew there, and it was all that one could do to keep one's clothes on. But it was a beautiful spot. He was afraid, however, that Nelson would never make a good harbour. Backwards there was magnificent land; but the great drawback was that in New Zealand the lads were not trained for the land. Schools of agriculture were wanted, not in the cities only, but away hundreds of miles inland. The place was all shops. People were waiting to sell, but there were few to buy. Too many young men were looking out for Government billets or berths in banks, and they would not set their faces inland. The place was crying out for habitation. Families were wanted to go out upon it, settle upon it, dwell upon it, and bring up families upon it. (Applause.) And then were there not some remarkable roads in New Zealand. The back-wheels of the carriage turned round the wrong way, coming down some of them. (Laughter.) Then you came to Tarawera, the hot lake region, a wonderful place, with steaming mountains, lakes of boiling water and boiling mud, spouting geysers, sulphurous clouds and quaking earth. You began to realise soon that you were in an extremely active place. One little steam hole where people had cooked their food for 20 years suddenly went off, sending columns of water into the air. Everything was hot. One pool of mud looked like chocolate, very thick; it was always boiling. The explosion of Mount Tarawera in June, 1886, was most eloquently described, and a reference was made to the mighty forces raging beneath the earth. New Zealand's developments, improvements, and promises were then touched upon. They heard that New Zealand was ruined; but he had seen his own country ruined three times—absolutely wiped out. Yet they were in a fairly healthy condition to-day. New Zealand ruined! they might as well tell him that the sun was ruined because a cloud was across its face. (Applause.) All she had to do was to develop a country that could carry 15 millions of people. With her climate, and soil, and mines, how could she be ruined? Why, one could can as much fruit as California, and the world's market was waiting for it. But it was said that she had not got the manufactories that America had. Neither had America in his boyhood; but it was not the manufactories that made the country what it was, but the agriculture behind it. Everything was in New Zealand to please the eye, and charm the soul, and all that the land was crying for was for men and women to come and possess it.

IRRIGATION AS A MEANS OF IMPROVING OUR AGRICULTURAL PROSPECTS.

The second lecture of a course on irrigation, by the Instructor in Agriculture of the Board of Technical Education, was given on Wednesday evening. The large hall was filled by a most attentive audience. Mr. Mackay commenced by quoting a remark just made to him by a gentleman then present, that irrigation should be a frequent subject for discussion, for he had noticed that rain usually followed, as soon as we got in earnest that irrigation should be adopted as a regular part of our agricultural system. After giving the various definitions of the terms irrigate, irrigation, &c., some of them curious enough, the lecturer described the enormous proportion of water present in matured crops, and the still larger quantity that had passed through them ere they could possibly be full crops, water taken up by the roots and evaporated through the leaves. To build up a crop of say 30 bushels of well-grown wheat per acre, a rainfall or application of water equal to 12in. over the whole acre of land was absolutely necessary. Maize required still more water as did gardens and orchards, sugarcane and root crops. In order to show the extraordinary processes of nature in building up crops, a lengthy series of diagrams was thrown upon the screen, and descriptions of the process of growth were given. The meaning of "an inch of rain, and inches of rain or water," were dealt with very fully, and the necessity of keeping the soil in such condition that rain or water would pass into it freely, and so in turn into the plants. Mr. Mackay concluded by describing some of the differences between the Chinese methods of applying water and irrigation as worked out by modern scientific agriculture, and purposes following into the merits, cost, &c., of various kinds of irrigation in the lectures to follow.

CASUALTIES.

SAD ACCIDENT AT SEA.

During the passage of the P. and O. Company's new steamship Arcadia from Melbourne to Sydney a fatal accident occurred, which cast quite a gloom over the whole of the ship. At about 2.55 p.m on Thursday last, when the vessel was a little to the northward of Cape Green, the chief engineer, Mr. Alexander Milne, had occasion to go below, and whilst standing immediately underneath an ash shoot, conversing with the third engineer, who was on duty, a huge piece of coal fell through the opening above, and struck Mr. Milne on the crown of his head with such force as to render him insensible. The injured gentleman was at once taken to his cabin, and the ship's surgeon (Dr. B. Marsh) was immediately in attendance, but despite the attention and medical skill bestowed upon him he never regained consciousness, but sank and died at 5 minutes to 6 o'clock, three hours after receiving the fatal blow. The deceased was a native of Dundee, in Scotland, and was 48 years of age. He was a married man, and leaves a wife and family in London. He had been over 25 years in the service of the P. and O. Company, and was very much respected by all with whom he came in contact, particularly among the officers and crew of the vessel, with whom he was an especial favourite. Previously to joining the Arcadia he held the position of chief engineer on board the R.M.S. Ballaarat. The funeral of the late officer will take place at Rookwood this afternoon.

Shortly after 10 o'clock last night a small outbreak of fire occurred in a house occupied by F. Wood at No. 214, Underwood-street, Paddington. The damage done was very trifling, being confined to a chest of drawers in a bedroom on the first floor, which were partly burned. The flames, which were caused through the upsetting of a kerosene lamp, were extinguished by the inmates of the house, assisted by some of the neighbours.

A schoolboy named John M'Ewan, 10 years of age, residing at No. 4, Grafton-street, Woollahra, was playing with some companions near his home yesterday afternoon, when he was thrown down, and in falling struck the small of his back against the kerbstone. When he got on his feet again he experienced great difficulty in walking, and was suffering great pain. His condition gradually became worse, and he was taken to the Sydney Hospital, where he was admitted by Dr. Henry.

A domestic servant named Ruth Dillon, 28 years of age, residing in Woolloomooloo-street, was taken to the Sydney Hospital last night by Police-constable Muller, of No. 1 station. She had been arrested for drunkenness, and, after being in custody, went off into a series of fits, which continued after her admission to the institution.

THE P. AND O. COMPANY'S R.M.S. ARCADIA.

Early yesterday morning the Peninsular and Oriental Company's fourth Jubilee ship, the Royal mail steamer Arcadia, arrived in port, having thus completed her maiden voyage from London in most excellent time. During certain portions of the run out she has beaten the record both of the Orient steamers and the company's boats by some hours. The Arcadia may be considered the counterpart of the R.M.S. Oceana in very nearly every detail; both vessels were built at the same yard in Belfast and by the celebrated shipbuilders, Messrs. Harland and Wolfe. The Oceana has already been most fully described in these columns, and in order to describe the Arcadia would certainly be superfluous if a repetition in every detail were necessary. As the Arcadia now lies in Neutral Bay, viewed from the immediate land in the vicinity, she strikes the spectator as being a boat possessing exceptionally pleasing lines, and for her immense size they are certainly very graceful. Internally the Arcadia far surpasses that of the three Jubilee steamers preceding her. The little faults and alterations that have been found necessary to make in the Britannia, Victoria, and Oceana have been guarded against in the Arcadia, and naturally she should be found better. In speaking of the Arcadia, and not drawing a comparison between the vessels, it may be stated that the Arcadia is constructed of steel, she has been engined by her builders, mild steel has been used in her construction which is of special quality and stoutness, and every plate has been tested. Her hull is symmetrical as is draughted on graceful lines. It is partitioned off into 10 water-tight compartments, with steel bulkheads extending upwards to the upper decks. Accidents by collision, fire, or otherwise, have been provided against so far as man's skill and might can do. The hurricane deck affords a most spacious promenade of 300ft. in length. The Arcadia measures 466ft. in length between perpendiculars, or close up to 500ft. over all. The beam is 52ft. 2in., and the depth of hold is 38ft. from the upper deck. The gross measurement of the steamer is 6362 tons, and the net register is 32.0 tons. It will thus be seen that with so much space at command the Arcadia, if on transport service, could accommodate some 3000 soldiers. The passenger accommodation is at present limited to first and second saloons, the third class arrangement has not yet come into operation, but the fittings have been made and can be erected when the occasion arises. The main saloon and the second saloon are counterparts of those of the Oceana. The engines of the Arcadia are of the same colossal proportions as those of the other Jubilee steamers, and they are equally well finished. They are on the triple expansion principle, the cylinders are 40½in., 63½in., and 102in. in diameter respectively. They have a piston stroke of 6ft. The steam enters the first or high-pressed cylinder at a pressure of 150lb., and into the second at a pressure of 60lb., while into the third, or low pressed, it enters at a pressure of 25lb., and afterwards it undergoes the condensing process. The cylinders are accommodating, and any two of them can be used without the third. The engines are surface-condensing, and work direct action on the screw, and the cylinders are inverted. The boilers are of steel, and double-ended. There are six main boilers, and each has six furnaces on Fox's patent corrugated plan. For general work there is an auxiliary boiler with one furnace. Before being placed in position the boilers were tested by hydraulic pressure up to twice the ordinary working pressure. The screw is a four-bladed one of manganese bronze, the pitch is 29ft. 3in., and the diameter is 21ft. She has a large refrigerating machinery on Haslem's patent, which is available for ship's or cargo purposes. The electric light is everywhere to be found, the two dynamos are driven by Tangye's compound engines, each dynamo is equal to supplying 500 incandescent lights of 30-candle power. Besides, she has larger and more powerful lamps for working cargo at night, masthead lights when passing through the Canal. Armstrong's hydraulic cranes are only used for the discharge and taking in of cargo. In the matter of boats and life-belts the Arcadia is most amply found. The sanitary arrangements on board are of the most complete character. It is needless to describe the nature and fittings of the saloons, ladies' rooms, smoking rooms, for they are decorated with great taste, very luxurious, and, if anything, they surpass those of the Oceana. All arrangements on board are so complete, and no expense has been spared to make everything as comfortable as possible, for passengers that they may well consider that they are staying at a first-class continental hotel. Captain W. B. Andrews, R.N.R., who was last here in the Bengal, is in command, and he has with him as deck officers: Mr. F. M. Gardner, chief, from the Parramatta; Mr. F. C. A. Lyon, R.N.R., from the Shannon, second; Mr. E. G. P. Martin, R.N.R., from the Pekin, third; Mr. B. S. Bryson, R.N.R., from the Mirzapore, supernumerary third; Mr. H. W. Kenrick, R.N.R., from the Britannia, fourth; and Mr. H. W. A. Clarke, from the Parramatta, fifth. Mr. Alexander Milne, late chief engineer, had with him Messrs. Thorburn, Ramsay, and Menzies, who all hold chiefs' certificates. There are also three assistant engineers to those just mentioned. Besides these there are five refrigerating and electric engineers, hydraulic engineers, a boilermaker, and two mechanics, who act as winchmen. Mr. Thorburn, the second engineer, was here on the first trip of the Britannia. Mr. A. Roberts is head steward. This, the maiden trip of the Arcadia, has not by any means been devoid of incident. During the voyage Mr. Hagarty, a second saloon passenger, died at Colombo on the 24th ultimo from peritonitis. Mr. Hagarty was on his way to Melbourne in charge of pictures for the Centennial Exhibition. Another death occurred on the 5th instant, when Mr. J. M'Donald, a second saloon passenger from Calcutta, died from phthisis. The body was buried at sea with the usual ceremony. To add yet another to the list of melancholy items, the death of Mr. Milne, the chief engineer, has to be recorded, details of which will be found elsewhere. Apart from these fatalities the voyage was of a cheerful character throughout. The passengers were agreeably disposed, and the usual amusements and entertainments were carried on with spirit. Of the voyage it is gleaned that the Arcadia took her departure from the Albert Docks at 4 p.m., on the 1st ultimo, with 187 passengers and a full cargo. The run out has been one of the fastest, as the following dates of departure will show:—London was left on June 1, Gibraltar on June 5, Malta on June 9, Brindisi on June 11, Port Said on June 13, Suez the next day; Aden was reached on June 18, and Colombo on June 24, Albany was made on the 4th instant, Adelaide on the 7th, and Melbourne on the 11th instant, and this port as stated. On several occasions the engines have had to be slowed down, but when they have been allowed to go most excellent work has been recorded. The run down the Red Sea was accomplished in 80½ hours, equal to 16·25 knots per hour, and eclipsing the run of the Ormuz by three hours. From Aden to Colombo was also done in the quickest time on record, the distance, 2109 having been traversed in 126 hours 53 minutes, which, allowing difference of longitude—2 hours and 19 minutes—the speed attained averaged 16·62 knots. The Arcadia averaged 15 knots from Colombo; the steamer has consequently proved herself to be a fast boat. Four hundred miles a day has been reached, and between 380 and 400 miles was always considered the usual thing. Space will not permit to give a fuller detailed account of her voyage, but it can be safely said that the Arcadia is superior to her sister ship, the Oceana, and also to the Britannia and Victoria.

SHEARING SHEEP IN WINTER.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—A feeble protest has been lately made by writers in your columns against the indescribable torture inflicted upon unfortunate sheep in many parts of the colony by their inhuman owners shearing them in the coldest months of the winter season. I beg a little space to add my testimony as a worker amongst sheep for a quarter of a century; and having witnessed the suffering of these poor, patient, dumb, "but very valuable animals," I am sincerely pleased to find that some effort is being made to bring the matter under public notice. Imagine, sir, some thousands of these shivering wretches, the wool shaved off during the day, turned out into the shed yard, many—indeed, nearly all—having cuts, and bits or pieces of skin snipped out on various portions of the body and limbs, on one of these freezing winter nights, as I have frequently seen done in the central division of the colony, nights when the water in buckets, &c., about the shearers', aye, "even inside the huts," has frozen hard, and tea left by the fireplace over night has been turned to a mixture of ice and leaves.

It is a pitiful sight to see these poor victims' agony in the early morning; the roofs, rails, &c., covered with the white hoar-frost. They stand in unnatural attitudes, drawn up and distorted by pain and intense agony, with drooping ears and running eyes, a shaking, shivering mass of tortured animal suffering; many of them having wounds (accidentally inflicted) that would lay up a human being for weeks. Should wet weather set in, their case is even worse, as they have not the friendly sunshine by day to thaw their frozen limbs and wounds. Owners who inflict this barbarity say that they must do it to avoid grass seed (that excuse is a convenient, but not a true one), it is done when there is no grass seed, viz., in times of drought, also on runs where the seed does not injure the wool at any time. Actually it is a breeches-pocket innovation, and these same innovators are now arranging matters so that the ewes drop their lambs also in the middle of winter. Content they say to lose (i.e. have frozen to death) a good percentage, because it will pay in other ways.

I am, &c.,
AN OLD STATION MANAGER.

AMUSEMENTS.

THEATRE ROYAL.

The sensational drama "New Babylon," having run its course at the Theatre Royal, was played for the last time yesterday evening, and to-night Mr. Bland Holt's powerful company will produce Henry Pettitt's celebrated drama "Taken from Life." The cast announced is a very strong one, and includes all the leading members of Mr. Bland Holt's company. Special scenery has been painted for the revival, which is to be for six nights only.

CRITERION THEATRE.

The amusing comedy, "Turned Up," which has been so successful at the Criterion Theatre, is to be preceded to-night by Mr. E. Rose's adaptation of the well-known story "Vice Versa," which will be produced on this occasion by Messrs. Brough and Boucicault's company for the first time in Sydney. The matinee performance announced for this afternoon has been postponed until Saturday next, when "Turned Up" and "Vice Versa" will be presented.

HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.

The "Lights o' London" still continue to shine forth to crowded houses at Her Majesty's Theatre, and nightly Mr. Rignold dives into a tank and gets wet through to the immense satisfaction of the audience. The production has been so successful that it seems likely to run for a long time yet, and no change in the programme has been announced.

NEW OPERA HOUSE.

During the past week Miss Ada Ward and her talented dramatic company have been playing the "New Magdalen" very successfully at the Opera House, and last night the piece was played for the last time. To-night the drama of the "Woman in Red" will be produced, when Miss Ada Ward will appear in her great impersonation of the part of Rudiga.

GAIETY THEATRE.

M. Tessero's French Comedy Company, now playing at this theatre, performed "Le Voyage de M. Perrichon" yesterday evening, and to-night the comedy "Le Depute de Bombignac" (of which "The Candidate," well known to English playgoers, is an adaptation) will be produced. As the 14th of July is a French national fête day, being the anniversary of the Bastille, the occasion will be availed of for a national demonstration, and "La Marseillaise" will be sung by the company. A matinee performance of "Le Voyage de M. Perrichon" will be given at half-past two this afternoon.

ROYAL STANDARD THEATRE.

The drama of "East Lynne" was played for the last time at the Royal Standard Theatre by Mr. Frank Smith's Dramatic Company yesterday evening, and to-night there will be produced, for the first time in Sydney, an adaptation by Mr. H. R. Duff of the celebrated novel, "Mr. Barnes, of New York." The adaptation, which is entitled "Life for Life," is to be produced on a scale of great completeness; and as the novel, which relates a fearfully fascinating story of Corsican vengeance, had already been largely read, it is probable that the drama founded on it will excite an equal amount of interest. The cast includes Miss Agnes Thomas, Mr. Ed. Lester, Mr. D'Arcy Stanfield, Mr. J. P. West, and the other members of the company.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC.

The Star Combination finished a most successful season at the Academy last evening. To-night will furnish the first appearance of a new company of English speciality performers, together with the reappearance of some old favourites. In the announcement which appears in our business columns, it will be seen that Mr. A. Sullivan, a vocalist and comedian, will, in conjunction with Ethel Silvena, a vocalist and burlesque actress, appear in a novel entertainment, entitled "Presto," in which they will introduce, in full view of the audience, a series of lightning changes, giving characteristic impersonations of England, Ireland, Scotland, Wales, America, France, Germany, Italy, and other countries. Miss L. Laurel, a special song and dance artiste and male impersonator, and the Barani Brothers, the pantomimists and contortionists, will make their first appearance; also Hugh Dempsey, an Irish comedian and acrobat. The old favourites are Messrs. W. Horace Bent, Keenan, and Moynham, Beaumont Read, L. Braham, and J. S. Porter.

THE ALHAMBRA.

The Alhambra has been well filled throughout the week, and the programme initiated last Monday evening was thoroughly enjoyed by the audiences which have nightly given their patronage. The same performance will be repeated to-night for the last time. On Monday the usual change will be made.

AQUARIUMS.

The enterprising managers of the several Aquariums have prepared good programmes for to-day. At the popular Bondi Aquarium, conveniently attached to the trams, a number of attractions are offered, amongst which the switchback railway is a great feature. The collection of fishes and marine monsters is now an admirable one. The latest addition to the marine birds is comprised in two fine albatrosses. The Coogee Aquarium is also accessible by tram, and will be found well worth seeing. But, in addition to the permanent attraction of the Aquarium, there are to be some special performances to-day, which will no doubt be found very interesting. The management announce the first appearance of the English equestrienne, Miss Minnie Stanton, who will ride her horse Gipsy King over hurdles, hedges, &c. The Manly Aquarium, which will no doubt be a prominent attraction to-day, is famous for its fine collection of fishes.

THE SKATING RINKS.

With the pleasant cool weather of the season, it is no matter for surprise that the skating rinks of the city and suburbs are so numerous and so well attended night after night. The Elite Skating Rink, opposite the Exhibition building, is now a well known and popular resort for ladies and gentlemen, both during the day and in the evening. Miss Mabel Sylvester, "the champion lady skater of the world," will appear for the last time this evening. At the Grand Crystal Palace Skating Rink, next to the Opera House, the beautiful fountain is ever a subject for admiration, and there the floor is one of the best in Sydney for skating. The City Skating Rink, at the old Masonic Hall, York-street, under the management of Mr. F. S. Rollinson, is also very popular just now. The gymnasts Ohmy and Cook continue to perform their great cannon act.

A musical and dramatic entertainment will be given this evening, in the New Masonic Hall, for the benefit of the eight orphans of the late Mr. and Mrs. Logan. Mr. Logan was formerly a compositor on the Sydney Morning Herald, and he died about four and a half years ago, leaving a widow in delicate health, and this large family. For over four years Mrs. Logan has struggled bravely to maintain her children and bring them up respectably, but after suffering from cancer for years, she died about three weeks ago. The Typographical Society, of which Mr. Logan was a member, has taken the matter up, and a committee has been selected from the leading printing offices in the city. An excellent programme has been arranged, including instrumental music by the Caxton Band (composed entirely of printers), songs and recitations by lady and gentleman amateurs, and a comedy by the members of the Centennial Dramatic club. An appeal is made for subscriptions, independent of the concert, which may be sent to Mr. W. Dunshea, the hon. treasurer, No. 13, Victoria Arcade (third floor), Castlereagh-street.

The "Western" Club, of Summer Hill, gave their annual ball last night at the Petersham Town Hall, and notwithstanding the inclemency of the weather, about eighty couples were present. The platform was gaily decorated with flowers, and the floor of the hall was in a splendid condition. The dancing being interspersed with several glees and solos, rendered by some members of the Liedertafel, made the evening exceptionally bright and merry. Refreshments were provided by Mr. J. Callaghan, and Messrs. Carroll and Hodgson acted as Ms.C., and under their united management everything passed off successfully.

The Birchgrove Literary and Debating Society gave a dramatic and musical entertainment in St. John's schoolroom, Balmain North, on Tuesday last, July 10. The hall was well filled. Mr. W. C. Ward (president) presided. The first piece on the programme was a pianoforte duet, "Canary Birds," by Mrs. Turnbull and Miss Ella Robinson, and was well appreciated. The next was a comic drama, in one act, entitled "Look before you leap." Characters were taken by Messrs. E. E. Broderick, G. Shaw, H. E. Robinson, A. E. Packer, and E. E. Bennett, were well received, each playing up to the society's usual average. After an interval of five minutes, the musical portion of the programme was gone through. Mr. W. A. French, Mr. H. E. Dickinson, Miss Tess, Mr. S. Phillips, Mr. W. S. Knight contributing. Mr. A. E. Kelshaw fairly brought down the house in his recitation (in character), "Artemus Ward on Women's Rights." The entertainment concluded with "Chrononotonthologos," a burlesque in one act.

An entertainment will be given to-night, at the Protestant Hall, by Messrs. Perry Ryan, Charley Faning, Martyn Hogan, Mdlles. Lulu Ryan, Violet Kingsley, Myra Holmes, Lucy Fraser, and other favourite performers.

BUSHRANGING NEAR BATHURST.

[By Telegraph.]

(From our Correspondent.)

BATHURST, Friday.

Mr. Vaughan Jenkins, of Yetholme, reported to the police that he was riding homewards on Wednesday evening, and was met by a man who attempted to stick him up. The assailant suddenly appeared on the road, grasped his bridle rein, and ordered him to dismount. This Jenkins did, but on reaching the ground he struck out and knocked the man down. As his horse escaped, he went after him, and then he saw another man go up to the spot, but saw no more of either men again. It appears that a hut near Raglan was robbed by two men on that or the previous day, and it is supposed that they are identical with those who tried to rob Jenkins.

Several leases are now being taken up in the vicinity."

The hon. sec., Sydney Stock Exchange, reports the crushing of the Band and Albion Gold-mining Company, Ballarat, for the past week to be 507 tons of stone for a yield of 371oz. gold.

We are requested to intimate that the share list of the Maryville Colliery Company closes at noon on Monday, 16th instant. Messrs. Clarke and Co., Exchange, and Mr. J. G. Griffin, Post Office-chambers, are the joint brokers for the company.

This company, which is to be registered under the Companies Act, announces a capital of £110,000, in 110,000 shares of £1 each. The company is formed to purchase and work the estate of 2560 acres freehold, in the parish of Teralba, adjoining the West Wallsend Coal Company. Messrs. J. Mullens and Son, 92, Pitt-street, are the Sydney brokers.

The prospectus of the Bulga South Silver and Gold-mining Company, Limited, will be found in another column. Samples of stone from the mine, taken by Mr. Barclay, assayed over 19oz. of gold to the ton and 2oz. of silver.

(From our Correspondents.)

MELBOURNE, Friday.

Share report:—Rather lower prices ruled in gold and silver mining companies, and with few exceptions, a very heavy drop took place, Mount Eurowrie Tin, Central Broken Hill silver being the exception to the general dulness, and closed higher. Cordillera Hill silver had a fair support.

Share Report.—Sales: Broken Hill, £280, £277; Block 14, 85s., 82s. 6d.; Junction, 42s.; South, paid, £5 16s., £5 14s. 6d.; British Brokens, 71s., 70s.; Centrals, paid, 26s. 6d., 27s. 9d.; Cordillera, 28s. 6d., 28s.; Lewis Ponds, 23s.; New North Brokens, 39s. 6d., 41s. 9d., 41s.; Pinnacle Tribute, 10s. 9d., 11s.; Round Hill, 71s.; Victoria Cross, 13s. 3d., 13s. 9d.; White Lead, 13s., 13s. 3d.; Madame Berry, £13 7s.; Mount Morgan, £14 8s., £14 9s.

ADELAIDE, Friday.

A meeting of the Adelaide shareholders of the Broken Hill Proprietary Company was held to-day, to protest against the proposed increase of directors' fees. It was resolved to approve of fixing the fees at £100, allowing travelling expenses. A motion that it was undesirable to split up the scrip as had been suggested was also carried.

Share Report.—Sales: Brokens, £280, £271 10s., £275; South, paid, £5 16s., £5 12s., £5 14s.; Block 14, at £4 5s., £4 2s.; British, £3 10s., £3 11s.; Round, £3 10s. 6d., £3 11s.; Block 10, at 50s., £2 9s.; Junction, 42s. 6d., 40s., 43s., 42s.; Central, paid, 28s.; Tribute, old, 10s. 9d.; Sun, 9s. 6d.; Bonanza, 6s. 3d., 6s. Sales: Silver Kings, 6s. 6d.; Eaglehawk, 8s. 3d.; South Extended, 12s.; Rising Sun Extended, 3s. 6d.

CARCOAR, Friday.

A party prospecting at Coombing lately discovered a gold-bearing reef, and owing to the assay proving favourable, have forwarded a ton by train yesterday, to the Bruce Company, Balmain, as a trial crushing. Mr. Tanner, of Orange, took through by train last night a cake of gold weighing about 200oz., the result of a crushing of the Homeward Bound Gold-mining Company, situated at Galley Swamp. Most of the sluicing claims in various parts of the district are now in full swing, owing to splendid rains falling during the last few days.

COBAR, Friday.

During the week applications for two mineral leases, embracing an area of 80 acres, have been lodged at the local warden's office. Both on Tindarey.

CROOKWELL, Friday.

Mining in the Tuena district is again making progress.

SOFALA, Friday.

George Williams, one of the prospectors assisted by the Government prospecting vote, has struck a reef 2ft. 8in. thick at the 80ft. level at Spring Creek, the quartz showing gold freely.

INVERELL, Friday.

The Tingha Deep Lead Company drive is being continued, and is now in 350ft., showing rich wash all through. The new shaft is down 78ft., and the whim and shoot are erected, and dam completed. A large stack of wash is at grass ready for sluicing. The Tingha Freehold Company are sinking and driving three shafts, raising rich stone, and have a quantity at grass ready crushing. The tributors have also a considerable quantity of wash dirt ready for sluicing on the first rainfall. At Wheal, Victoria, the wash is still being raised, and about 700 lodes are waiting water to sluice with, while run off wash in drives continues good. The Wheal Australia Company have a quantity of rich lode ore on the surface and the lode is improving as the depth is reached. About 300 loads of the surface wash are waiting rain to sluice. Munro and party, adjoining the last-mentioned mine, are raising rich stone. Great Australia are also upon rich ore, and have 50 tons ready for crushing. The Wheal Edith Company have a large quantity of stone at grass at their several shafts, and are upon rich ore in the deepest levels. Penberthy and party have several tons of rich ore at surface, and continue raising stone. Wheal Herbert Works are employed crushing and treating ore from their own property, and have a return of two tons of tin for the week. The plant and appliances are working well and giving every satisfaction. Rain is much wanted to start the surface alluvial works. Mr. E. W. Bathurst has purchased from Messrs. Wright and Partridge their three leases of 62 acres adjoining Butchart mine for a good figure. Very rich ore is being raised from this property, and it is the intention of proprietors to erect machinery for treatment of ores from this and the Tingha freehold company and other mines in the vicinity as early as possible. Mr. Bathurst has also purchased Wells and party's 40-acre lease, upon which a rich lode has been open out. A large quantity of wash is stacked at several mines in and around Stannifer. Tingha, Elsinore, and other mining centres are waiting for water to wash. The run of wash lately discovered at the Gillgal is being found to open out well, and several parties are engaged sinking and driving upon the new run, and meeting with good results. Should this discovery prove to be of a permanent character—and there is every appearance at present of this being so—a large return of tin will be made from this locality. The work at Round Mount Diamond mines is being pushed forward as rapidly as circumstances will admit under the management of Bassett. His operations are at present restricted by the difficulty experienced in procuring timber. The delay is no way attributable to the manager, being mainly due to the pressure on the mills caused by the activity in the building trade.

ORANGE, Friday.

The crushing of the Homeward Bound Galley Swamp Mine was completed yesterday, and 50 tons from No. 2 Prospecting Shaft gave 1oz. per ton; 20 tons from main shaft at 100ft. level gave 2oz. 3dwt.: total, 198oz. 3dwt. Thirty hundredweights of rich pyrites remain for treatment.

PARKES, Friday.

New machinery for the Metropolitan Gold-mining Company, Huntingdon Mill, has arrived. It will be erected immediately. Very rich stone has been got in Possum Gully by Fitzgerald and Co. Mining operations generally are active. The advent of the Huntingdon Mills to the district will open many good reefing properties.

WILCANNIA, Friday.

The reefs are still exciting a large amount of attention about the district, and shares are freely changing hands for good amounts. Kiesley's claim is favourite, a shaft being sunk upon it, and shares in this claim only sell at high figures. The Elizabeth Reef is still said to be very good, but no further work can be carried out till rain comes.

PERTH (W. A.), Friday.

The gold news from Golden Valley continues to be very satisfactory. With one or two exceptions all the claims which are being worked turn out stone showing gold more or less freely. There is every probability that ere long there will be an abundant supply of water, but capital is greatly needed to purchase the necessary crushing machinery. The reefs are almost without limit, and the quartz now at grass is all gold-bearing to a greater or less payable extent.

SILVERTON, Friday.

At the Mount Euriowie Tin Mine the alterations recommended by the expert who came to inspect the jiggers have been carried out by the manager, and the appliances are now working much better, but they still seem to require a good deal of adjustment. The new Duncan concentrators are now being put up, and will shortly be ready for work. The miners are still sinking the two winzes. The reef in No. 2 winze is about 10ft. thick; at the bottom some good stone is being taken out of the surface cutting. At the Wee Jim Tin Mine the north drive in the south shaft is now in 50ft., and so far there is no sign of the lode. They have commenced to drive west from the bottom of the shaft to try and find lode. The Exhibition shaft is down about 32ft., and several small veins carrying tin have been passed through, all dipping to east. The Euriowie South Tin Mine are now down about 34ft. with main shaft. This is an 11ft by 4ft. shaft in clear, and is sufficiently large for two hauling and one pumping compartment. As yet the water is not increasing. They have now stopped work at No. 3 prospecting shaft, owing to the influx of water. Some very good tin stone was taken from a lode here, and as the main shaft is at convenient distance from this shaft, it is the intention of the manager to drive at 100ft. level and cut this lode. Bunchikana Tin Mine is still looking as promising as ever, and it is to be hoped that soon some machinery will be erected there, as large quantities of rich ore are now at grass. On block 40 No. 1 shaft is now down 70ft., and the lode is now not looking quite so well, but it still carries fine tin, and was much better, however, for the first 60ft.; the formation is getting more mineralised and carrying mundic. On block 42 the shaft is down 62ft. on the main lode, and are still sinking on footwall; part of the lode is very big. No accurate idea can be given of the width, but it is not, however, carrying much tin. There is an open cutting on the south end of Block 42, and nice pile ore carrying splendid tin throughout has been broken out. The cutting is about 22ft. wide.

MANAGERS' REPORTS.

Town and Country Silver-mining Company, No Liability.—Received a parcel of ore from the mine, from the bottom of shaft and from Nos. 1 and 2 drives. The samples have a very promising appearance.

Bellinger River Antimony and Gold Mine.—Main shaft 40ft.; lode looking well. Assay of the antimony, 52 to 64 per cent., which samples can be seen. Shaft No. 2 down 12ft., shaft No. 3 down 10ft.; both on the lode. A new lode, running parallel to the old one, has been discovered; two shafts have been sunk 10 to 15ft. Assays, surface antimony, 18 per cent.; gold, 7dwt. At 5ft. deep antimony 11 per cent., and at 10ft. deep antimony oxide 35 per cent. It is thought that a third lode is on the property, and we are now trenching to discover it.

Mount Costigan Lead and Silver Mining Company, Limited, July 13.—The furnace has been uninterruptedly in blast from 8th May till the 4th July, and during that period 1864 tons of ore have been furnaced, producing 112 tons of silver-lead bullion, containing 27,025oz. of fine silver, 170oz. of pure gold, of which 76 tons have been shipped to London, the balance, 36 tons, being now in transit from the mine. The furnace has now been temporarily stopped, in order to effect some repairs. Cross-cuts have been started on the 98ft. level, and are being pushed on with all possible speed. I have about 400 tons of splendid carbonates at grass.

The Broken Hill Junction North Silver-mining Co., Limited, 7th July.—The shaft has been sunk 10ft., making a total depth of 129ft. 6in., the ground being fair for sinking.

Broken Hill South Silver-mining Company, Limited, July 6.—Main engine shaft: The crosscut east towards the main lode has been extended 5ft. The ground is harder. The shaftmen have completed the dropping of the drawing lift, and placed the main pump rods into position, and stayed the same in a very substantial manner. The balance bob is fixed, and bob-pit will be completed on Monday next. The pumping plant throughout is very complete. No. 1 shaft: At the "rise" about 20ft. up we have been opening out westward to find the thickness of the ore. We are in 6ft., and have no signs of the hanging-wall as yet. The ore is composed of kaolin and decomposed iron and quartz carrying chloride of silver in small quantities; the whole of the fine stuff has to go through the jiggers, and after the slime is washed out it will assay from 40oz. to 60oz. per ton. The drive north has been temporarily suspended, having removed the men to quarry stone for the building of the bobpit, &c. The drive south has been extended 9ft. 6in. The ground is becoming more mineralised, and is not so hard as when last reported on. No. 1 Trial Shaft: At the 60ft. level we have been opening out a plat or chamber for the storage ore. From this we are extracting high grade lead ore, and to-day pockets of very fine-sized chlorides have been met. The lead ore is so free from debris that if it carried silver in payable quantity it might be bagged and forwarded to the smelting works without any classification. No. 2 trial shaft is down from the brace 55ft. The shaft is at present all in mullock, the ore-bearing portion of the lode being to the west. N. 7 Shaft: We have to-day finished the clearing of the scrub, and making the road for the engine to be placed at this shaft.

The Back Creek Silver and Gold Mining Company, July 9.—Have sunk No. 2 shaft 4ft., making a total depth of 64ft. There has been no change in the sinking during the past week, the lode being about the same thickness, and appears of same quality, the vein showing good carbonates of lead and chlorides of silver, which still adhere to the hanging wall. Have raised about 10 tons, which gave bulk assay of 30oz. silver and 11dwt. of gold per ton.

Cadbury's Cocoa is absolutely pure (guaranteed), but cocoa-drinkers should know that the so-called pure Dutch Cocoas and their English imitations contain about 4 per cent. of added alkali, &c., which deepens the colour of the liquor, but detracts from its purity.—[Advt.]

Remarkable Disappearance.—Very remarkable disappearance of all dirt from everything by using Hudson's Extract of Soap. Reward—Purity, health, perfect satisfaction by its regular daily use. For clothes, linen, knives, forks, dishes, saucepans, and all domestic washing.—[Advt.]

COMMERCIAL.

THE WOOL TRADE.

Mail advices to 8th ultimo have come to hand during the week, and they report that in the manufacturing districts mills were more fully employed than for some time past. Messrs. Windeler and Co., in their circular of 6th June, thus comment on the purchases made privately in the London market:—"During the past month some 3500 bales have changed hands at a slight advance on last sales' rates, and small as this total actually is, it has served to create a distinctly better feeling all round, showing the extreme sensitiveness of the market at the present moment, for on the continent colonial wools have been comparatively neglected. Chief interest has centred itself all along in River Plate produce, which has been in strong demand for a month past, the available supply of both semi-manufactured and raw material being very limited. Values have been considerably raised, partly by speculation, and partly by the requirements of the trade, so that at the present moment they rule more closely on a level with Australasian wools than they have done for some time past. Our home markets have again shown disinclination or inability to follow an upward tendency, and have assisted but little in the actual business done here; at the same time the tone has distinctly improved during the past month. Manufacturers are reported as being, on the whole, well employed, and colonial wools meet with more ready sale at firmer rates than at the close of the sales; but the advance in tops, while assisting some branches of the trade, is against spinners, who are so far unable to obtain a corresponding advance in yarns. English wools, with only a moderate inquiry, remain steady. Pending the arrival of the new clip, stocks are generally light, and some descriptions, being scarce and in better demand, have tended of late against buyers."

Messrs. Jacomb, Son, and Co., on same date write:—"By reason of the close approach of public sales here, and the greatly enhanced prices asked by holders, business by private contract in colonial wool has fallen off considerably latterly; the latest transactions have been more for the home trade than the continent; the total quantity sold here since the close of last auctions is about 2000 bales Australian and 2000 bales South African. Owing to easterly winds, arrivals have been much retarded: there are enough sailing ships now overdue to fulfil the prescribed 350,000 bales at any moment; so large a proportion of the 336,000 bales thus far arrived has already gone forward direct that the ensuing series will be comparatively light; the sales will probably not last longer than 28 days, and as that will leave the requirements of nearly nine weeks to be provided for before the fourth series (necessarily a very light one) will commence here on the 18th September, there should be little difficulty in making a satisfactory clearance of all offered in June-July. Stocks of the raw material have run pretty light both at home and on the continent, and trade in woollens and worsteds has shown general improvement of late. 1862 bales of woolled sheepskins were sold in this market on the 1st June, at an average of ½d. to ¾d. per pound advance on our April auctions. The River Plate market at Antwerp is quiet but firm; total stocks of wool there are 23,321 bales against 56,584 bales at this time last year."

Locally no wool sales have taken place, the interest of all concerned in the staple being centred on the stud sheep sales, which are now in progress.

Exports have been on a rather more liberal scale during the present week than for some time previously, and include three vessels as under:—

Date.	Vessel.	Bales.
July 7	Yarra (s.s.)	737

as against 1459 bales to same date last year.

From the Melbourne Argus we take the following table, showing the exports from the Australian colonies for the year ended 30th June last:—

Receipts for the week are only 124 bales by rail and sea.

Freight.—Rates show no change, being quoted at ⅝d. and ½d. by steamer, and 5-16d. and 7-16d. by sailer for greasy and clean respectively.

Sheepskins.—The market for these has been unusually brisk, resulting in the clearance of heavy catalogues at each sale. Our local fellmongers seem anxious to secure every good parcel coming to hand, shippers retiring under their keen competition. Prices, as a matter of course, have advanced a shade, especially for the best butchers'. Quotations are—Butchers' greenskins, full-woolled, 40d. to 48d.; three-quarter-woolled, 30d. to 36d.; half-woolled, 22d. to 26d.; short, 15d. to 21d. per skin; station skins, best, 4⅞d. to 5½d.; medium, 3½d. to 4½d.; short, 2d. to 3½d. per lb.

STATION STOCK AND PRODUCE REPORTS.

Tallow.—Messrs. J. Bridge, J. H. Geddes and Co., Harrison, Jones, and Devlin, Limited, Mort and Co., Limited, F. L. Barker, and Hill, Clark, and Co. report holding sales yesterday; 426 packages were offered, and 374 sold publicly. Best bright beef, especially for shipping requirements, maintained late rates. Medium kinds were rather easier. Quotations: Best beef, £17 10s to £18 per ton; exceptional lots, 2s 6d to 5s higher; medium, £16 15s to £17 5s; best mixed, to £18 5s; inferior and broken parcels, £12 to £16 10s. There was no mutton offered.

Hides.—6712 were offered, and 5301 sold at yesterday's auctions. The market continues weak, although prices were about equal to those lately ruling. Extra heavies, 3¼d to 3⅜d per lb.; heavy, 2¾d to 3¼; medium, 2½d to 3¼d; light, 3d to 3½d; dry station, to 4d; damaged, 1d to 2d; yearlings, 4s to 8s; Calfskins, 1s to 3s 6d.

Marsupial Skins.—Messrs. Harrison, Jones, and Devlin, Limited, report that at their auction sale yesterday they offered an exceptional large catalogue of all descriptions, numbering 10,000 skins. Large and superior lots of kangaroo skins met with strong competition, and realised extreme prices; medium and smaller sizes were also in fairly active request. Extra-large kangaroo, 110s to 135s per dozen; large, 90s to 105s; medium, 60s to 70s; fair, 36s to 50s; small, 12s to 22s; very small, 4s to 8s. Wallaby skins, large and well prepared Roes are firm, 12s to 24s; medium and inferior sorts were rather quiet, 2s to 8s; bear, 2s to 6s. Opossum skins are coming to hand freely and largely of poor quality. Best and well-furred classes sold at 7s 6d to 9s; medium, 5s to 6s; rumpers, 2s to 3s.

Hair remains steady at 10d to 11½d per lb. Cow-washed, 10d to 12½d, dirty, 8d to 10d; stumps, 5d to 7d.

Horns and Bones.—A strong demand for large and well-cared for lots of horns at 27s 6d to 36s per 100; medium, 15s to 20s; small, 7s 6d to 12s; tips and curls, 2s 6d to 5s. Good shank bones quoted £5 5s to £6 per ton; other kinds ranged from £3 10s to £4 15s; common, £2 10s to £2 15s. Hoofs, £1 15s.

Leather.—The business transacted at Thursday's sales was confined to the best qualities of dressed goods, heavy and inferior lines being neglected. Sole was very quiet, shippers being prevented from operating by unfavourable English advices. Stocks of harness descriptions are very heavy, but there was a little better demand. Basils were dull of sale. Quotations: Sole, heavy, 9d to 10d; medium, 8½d to 9½d; light, 8½d to 8¾d; kip, 11d to 14d; cow tweed, 15d to 20d; heavy, 13d to 14d; yearling tweed, 16d to 19d; calf tweed, 21d to 24d; waxed calf, 21d to 24d; harness, best, 12d to 13d; medium, 10½d to 11d; bag, 9s to 11s; bridle, 10s to 11s.

Store Stock.—The demand for store bullocks is checked by the dry weather. Three to six year olds, delivered at Dubbo, are worth 80s to 85s, on the Murray 92s 6d. For wethers, off shears, there is a good demand at from 5s to 5s 6d. Owing to the dry state of the roads business in ewes with lambs at foot is interfered with.

Stations.—No business has been reported in station properties.

PRODUCE MARKET.—Friday.

This morning fairly large supplies of wood and forage were submitted at Darling Harbour terminus. At the auction sale of forage the attendance of the trade was small. The market was dull, buyers' requirements being restricted to prime lots; low prices were realised. A stronger inquiry was reported for bundle wood; other sorts were unaltered. At the wharf the consignments received were below Friday's average, and chiefly from the Hunter River and Southern ports. Business was confined principally to quantities for the days' requirements. Potatoes were dearer. Maize and butter ruled firm. At Darling Harbour sales the following figures were obtained:—

Wood.—Good supplies. Bundle wood commanded most attention. Billet, 9s to 10s per ton; bundle, 7s to 13s; foot, 8s to 12s 6d; bakers', 8s to 11s.

Hay.—Fairly large market. The demand ruled slack, and values were lower. Oaten, in bundles, 4s 2d to 4s 5d per cwt.; extra prime lot, 4s 1d; other kinds, 2s 6d to 3s 11d; bales, 3s; bundled sheaves, 2s 2d; wheaten, in bundles, 3s 5d; oaten and wheaten, in bundles, 3s 8d.

Straw.—Small consignments. Clean and bright wheaten, in bundles, steady, 2s 6d per cwt.; other sorts, from 2s.

Chaff.—The supply forward consisted largely of indifferent qualities. Best oaten, in bags, 4s 8d to 4s 10d per cwt.; faulty to medium, 2s 11d to 3s 10d; straw, in bag, 2s 4d.

At the wharfs the following were the wholesale quotations:—

Maize.—In addition to yesterday's morning shipments a Clarence River consignment was received last night. Prime Northern rivers productions steady, 2s 9d per bushel.

Oats.—Stocks consisted principally of medium sorts. Best stout heavy feed suitable 2s 2d per bushel; milling lines, 2s 3d to 2s 4d; other kinds, from 2s; seed, 2s 4d to 2s 6d. Messrs. Kaye and Carter's fortnightly Christchurch (New Zealand) circular, July 3, states:—"Oats are well held, but trade languishes in the absence of much outside demand, though the more sanguine predict higher rates next month. We quote: Milling, 2s; bright short feed, 1s 11d; and Danish, 1s 10d."

Barley.—Nominal value of Cape seed was 3s per bushel.

Bran.—Unimproved, 9d to 9½d per bushel.

Pollard.—Quoted 9d. per bushel.

Hay.—Moderate shipments from the Hunter River this morning. Stocks were largely of dry brown summer and inferior descriptions, which were difficult of sale from £2; prime well-saved brown or green lucerne in request, £3 15s to £4 5s.

Chaff.—Market quiet. Victorian quoted £3 10s to £4 10s per ton; Adelaide, £4 10s to £5; special brands, to £5 5s.

Onions.—Values of Victorian lines range £7 to £7 5s per ton.

Potatoes.—Firmer. Ballarats and New Zealand varieties worth £3 15s per ton; Circular Head, £3 15s to £4; Warrnambool, £3 5s. Respecting the Christchurch market Messrs. Kaye and Carter, on July 3, writes:—"Potatoes are held by growers for an advance on present rates of 47s 6d to 50s f.o.b. Absence of tonnage alone prevents large shipments from going forward. The future of our market entirely depends on the turns of prices at Sydney side."

Butter.—Best Illawarra, dairy sorts, steady, 1s 10d to 2s per lb.; roll, 2s to 2s 2d; factory-made, 2s to 2s 4d; New Zealand to 1s 6d.

Cheese.—Ordinary colonial kinds moving off at 5d to 7d per lb.; loaf and choice brands, 7d to 7½d.

Bacon.—Hand-cured Southern, 5d to 7d per lb.; machine-cured, 4d to 5d; heavy and rough pieces, 2d to 3d; colonial hams, 4d to 7d; New Zealand bacon, to 7½d; hams, 1s.

Lard.—Finely-rendered, in bladders, unaltered, 4d to 5d per lb.; bulk, from 3d.

Honey.—Still very little doing. Values 2d to 4d per lb.

Eggs.—Smaller supplies this morning than usual. In better demand, 1s 2d to 1s 3d per dozen.

Poultry.—Good lots are salable; other classes are slack. Fowls, 2s 6d to 3s 6d per pair; ducks, 3s to 3s 9d; geese, 5s to 7s 6d; turkeys, 6s to 12s.

Meat.—Mr. H. Macnamara, of the Metropolitan Meat Market, reports sales of beef 1½d to 2¼d per lb.; mutton, 1½d to 2d; lambs in carcase, 8s to 11s. Messrs. John Evans and Co. report having sold during the week, at the new meat market, Pyrmont, 120 hind-quarters of Orange beef, for H. W. Larance, at 2¼d to 2½d; 100 crops, at 1½d to 2½d; 25 carcases, 1½d to 2d; 12 carcases Springfield beef, 1½d to 2d; 10 for Cornwall, from Rookwood, 1½d to 2d; 80 carcases Strathearn beef, 1½d to 2d; 20 hind quarters, 2¼d to 2½d, 247 at 1¼d to 1½d; 1200 carcases Goulburn mutton, 1¼d to 1¾d; 500, for various owners, 1½d to 1¾d; 40 porkers, from Orange, for H. W. Larance, 3½d to 4½d; 50, from Goulburn, 3½d to 4d; 135 small, from Picton, 4d to 4½d; 30 carcases veal, 2d to 2¾d; 40 lambs, 5s to 8s. NOTES EXPLANATORY OF MAP.

In the list of stations, the column headed W.T. gives the state of the weather at 9 a.m., b standing for blue sky; c, detached clouds; d, drizzling rain; f, fog; g, gloomy; h, hazy; m, misty; n, frosty; o, overcast; p, passing showers; r, rain; s, snow; t, thunder; u, threatening. The next column, M'x., gives the maximum temperature for previous 24 hours. M'n, the corresponding minimum temperature; R'n, the rain for the previous 24 hours. The symbols used in the map are explained on the margin. At each station the wind symbol points to the direction in which the wind is blowing, is in fact an arrow flying with the wind. A clear circle with it means fine weather; a circle with bar, cloudy weather; and a black spot, raining. Next to this symbol are placed figures denoting the number of miles the wind is moving per hour. Next, a symbol showing the state of the sea; and, lastly, figures denoting the shade temperature at 9 a.m. The barometer curve shows the state of barometers round the coast from Perth to Cooktown:—Pt, Perth; Ay, Albany; Ea, Eucla; CB, Cape Borda; A, Adelaide; Re, Robe; P, Portland; M, Melbourne; WP, Wilson's Promontory; Go, Gabo; E, Eden; Ma, Moruya; CG, Jervis Bay; WG, Wollongong; S, Sydney; N, Newcastle; PM, Port Macquarie; C, Clarence River; B, Brisbane; R, Rockhampton; Ct, Cooktown. Inland, the state of barometer is given in figures at Albury, Deniliquin, Wentworth, Menindie, Bourke, and Alice Springs. The barometer curve enables one at a glance to trace the depressions, beginning with Western Australia, and passing along eastwards; northerly winds preceding them, and southerly following.

The rainfall on Sundays and holidays, when the map is not published, is in all cases included in the quantities shown by the next following map.

MARRICKVILLE—THE HOME OF TYPHOID.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—Under the above startling heading appeared a letter signed E. E. Guille, which I trust you will allow me, with your usual love of fair play, to answer. I hope I may not be considered egotistical in stating that I have a thorough knowledge of all diseases termed malignant, and if your correspondent, E. E. Guille, is the individual I presume him to be, he will need no assurance to that effect from me. Briefly, a number of gentlemen interested in the progress of Marrickville, knowing my capabilities, retained my services to make an exhaustive inquiry in re the presence of typhoid in the principal localities indicated by your correspondent." The much-abused "Tram Vale Estate," running from the Marrickville railway station to the tram line, occupying a wide stretch of country, on either side of the Sydenham-road, I found singularly free from every kind of disease. A very old inhabitant remembered one case of typhoid away up in Fitzroy-street, towards the Enmore Park, a long time since, in an old undrained wooden shanty, one of a row, where squalor, vice, and drunkenness reigned supreme, with neglected children at every door—now, happily, a thing of the past, as the dens have vanished. [I enclose my informant's name.] And I have learned since that a case occurred in the Warren country, some half-hour's walk from the "Tram Vale Estate." With those two exceptions, I pronounce the district condemned by E. E. Guille to be the healthiest of all the Sydney suburbs, and the death-rate to compare favourably with any part of the world of equal extent. I admit the drain crossing the Sydenham-road. The council allowed the natural creek or drain to be sold and built on, and so destroyed the direct flow; also, that cows drink at this drain; also that, by the neglect of the officials appointed by the council, cows are allowed to roam unchecked over the Tram Vale Estate, and after rain their hoofs sink into the soft ground, making deep holes, which remain full of water for a long period, making the fair vale an eyesore. Yet with all these influences, I challenge your correspondent to name one family in or about the spots indicated suffering from any malignant disease. As for the fair vale being transformed into a cesspit, that is a figure of speech. At all events, my clients invested their capital on the strength of my report, and have received pecuniary indications that my judgment was not erroneous.

I am, &c.,

WILLIAM COOKE.

VALUABLE COUNTRY LANDS.

IN THE MUDGEE DISTRICT.

LOT 1.—BERRIWA, near DENISON TOWN, on the TALBRAGAR RIVER.

3267 ACRES, in three grants, at present forming portion of the Berriwa Run. This FREEHOLD PROPERTY together with about 4300 Acres of CROWN LEASEHOLDS attached thereto, is leased to Mr. D. MacMaster, but occupied by Mr. E. J. Lowe, at the nominal rental of £100 per annum. The lease expires on 1st August, 1888.

The estate is intersected by the main road from MUDGEE towards COOLAH, and by a branch road towards COBBORAH. These roads are fenced off on both sides by wire fencing, and the freehold frontages between these roads and the river are completely enclosed into two paddocks. The back portions of the freehold, together with the leasehold lands, form another large paddock. Altogether, about 10 or 11 miles of fencing, all wire, fall upon the freehold lands, either as boundary fences or fencing on the roads mentioned. The whole of the freehold land has been ringbarked.

The freehold frontages, between the roads mentioned and the river, are generally rich alluvial black soil flats; the remaining portions comprise generally more or less undulating red soil forest country.

11 RICH AGRICULTURAL FARMS, admirably adapted for dairying purposes.
Splendid maize producing country, Oats, Barley, Potatoes, &c., grown with great success.
Rich alluvial flats, three-quarters of a mile RIVER FRONTAGE.
HIGH LAND, suitable for Vineyards, Orchards, or Grazing Purposes.
(See the orchards close by.)

IN ALL NEARLY 1200 ACRES, and pronounced far and wide to be the FINEST ESTATE in the matchless Hawkesbury River district.

THE LILBURNDALE ESTATE, well known as HALL'S PROPERTY, near SACKVILLE REACH, and only 12 miles from the Windsor Railway Station, now being subdivided by Mr. Fowler into 11 magnificent FARMS of from 100 to about 150 acres each.

Unequalled for Richness of Soil, unequalled for Picturesque Scenery, unequalled for Water Resources, unequalled for Useful Timber, unequalled for Rural Beauty, and unequalled in Value; in fact no pen can adequately describe the many advantages connected with this estate.

EARLY AND CAREFUL INSPECTION INVITED. SEE FOR YOURSELF AND JUDGE ACCORDINGLY.

A. CAMPBELL, of Gerringong (in conjunction with T. TATE and CO., of 158, Pitt-street, Sydney), has been favoured with instructions from the vendors to sell by auction on TUESDAY, August 7, at Kiama, at 1.30 a.m.,

The above-described valuable estate, subdivided into 11 magnificent farms of from 100 to 150 acres each, on terms to suit all classes of buyers.

No. 1 FARM is a complete homestead (most of which has been cultivated), and contains a large stone house, kitchen, substantial stone granary, large barn, yards, outhouses, and small and large paddocks, in all

A COMPACT HOME,
ready for immediate occupation, and possessing a large frontage to the
EVER SHINING HAWKESBURY RIVER, with regular steam communication to and from Sydney, independent of boats to and from Windsor.

No. 2 FARM contains an old STONE BUILDING, which could be converted into a comfortable house with but a small outlay.

No. 3 FARM contains a splendid cultivation PADDOCK of about 25 acres, ready to operate upon at once, while the next 7 farms will be about equal in RICHNESS OF SOIL.

Mostly free from stones, stumps, or trees, and ready for the plough immediately.

No. 11 FARM, of about 160 acres, contains about 100 acres of thickly-timbered, yet very valuable land, whilst the additional 60 acres, or thereabouts, are ready for immediate development.

The Estate, undoubtedly, is naturally adapted for subdivision into farms, as abovementioned, as every farm will contain sufficient high land, with gentle slopes, for building purposes, for ORCHARDS or for VINEYARDS, for which such high lands are so admirably suited. In fact the orchards round about the Estate are charming and delightful.

Note.—This ESTATE has been locked up for the last 50 years, and has scarcely been utilised for any other than grazing purposes, with the exception of the cultivation of about 50 or 60 acres from year to year, picked out from various parts of the ESTATE, for

MAIZE, OATS, POTATO, and PUMPKIN GROWING.
Therefore it is not worked out, but contains grand
VIRGIN SOIL,
enriched from year to year by the NATURAL DECAY OF LEAVES and washings from the ridges on both sides.

FARMERS, DAIRYMEN, AGRICULTURISTS, don't let this golden opportunity pass you by whilst such inducements are offered you to secure a HAPPY HOME
on such reasonable terms as these,
viz.,
10 PER CENT. DEPOSIT ONLY,
10 PER CENT. IN 6 MONTHS, and the
BALANCE in 7 EQUAL YEARLY PAYMENTS from date of 2nd payment, thus giving buyers the opportunity to actually make the deposit and first payment off the land before the 3rd payment becomes due.

On No. 1 Farm (the Homestead) an additional 5 per cent. deposit will be asked.

INTEREST throughout on all the Farms at the nominal rate of 5 per cent., payable quarterly, and with the right to pay off the whole purchase at any time, with interest to date of payment only.

TITLE TORRENS',
obtainable with little expense.

BUYERS will have refunded to them any reasonable amount of expenses incurred by them in inspecting the estate and attending the sale.

A VEHICLE and Driver leaves the ROYAL HOTEL, Windsor, every WEDNESDAY and SATURDAY MORNING, to convey (free of cost) intending purchasers over the Estate, returning in time to catch evening trains the same day or otherwise, as desired.

Buyers can leave Sydney on SATURDAY MORNINGS at 9 a.m., inspect the Estate and return to Sydney at 8.55 p.m the same evening.
Return Fare: First-class, 7s; second, 4s 5d.

Inspection earnestly invited.

THE MOUNT COOPER ESTATE,

1,219½ acres of freehold land
12,148½ acres C. P. land, all transferable

13,368
2,488 acres Crown lands, leasehold area

This property lies between Cooma and Bombala, and adjoins the famous Bibbenluke Estate. The head station is only 34 miles from Cooma, which will be in direct communication with Sydney and Melbourne by rail in November next. The surveys for the proposed extension of the railway to Bombala pass through the property—one two miles east, and the other two miles west of the head station.

The country consists of open gum forest and plains, the hills of trap formation. The flats are rich, deep, black soil, capable of yielding 40 to 50 bushels of wheat to the acre. It is abundantly watered in all seasons by the M'Laughlin River, to which it has a frontage of five miles. Also by numerous creeks and never-failing springs.

The run is estimated to carry a sheep to the acre in all seasons.

The improvements consist of upwards of 50 miles of fencing, principally 7-wires, and some stone walls with top wires, &c., all in good order. New woolshed for 12 shearers, with Ferrier's woolpress. At the head station—house of 10 rooms, kitchen, 4-stalled stable, buggy house, storerooms, &c. Two large cultivation paddocks—one sown with wheat, and one with oats. There is also an outstation, with stone house, and other necessary buildings.

The sheep on the property consist of 12,733 wethers, 4-tooth to full-mouth, which can be sold off shears, as fats
3,000 ewes, to lamb in September
1,561 maiden ewes
1,450 yearling wethers

WHY AM I SO MISERABLE?
SO WEAK AND LANGUID?
Why such HEARTBURNS and PAINS IN THE STOMACH, and SUCH ACIDITY, and SUCH AN UNPLEASANT TASTE IN THE MOUTH?
Why at times such a gnawing appetite, and then again SUCH DISRELISH FOR FOOD?
Why is the mind so frequently irritable, desponding, melancholy, and dejected?
Why does one often feel under the APPREHENSION OF SOME IMAGINARY DANGER, and start at any unexpected noise, becoming agitated AS THOUGH SOME GREAT CALAMITY WAS IMPENDING!
What is the meaning of these DULL, SICK HEADACHES, these violent PALPITATIONS of the HEART, this Feverish Restlessness, these Night Sweats, this DISTURBED and DREAMY SLEEP which brings NO REFRESHING REST, but only Moanings and Mutterings, and the HORRORS of the NIGHTMARE?
THE ANSWER IS:
These are but the SYMPTOMS of INDIGESTION, or DYSPEPSIA— the beginning and the FORERUNNER of almost every other HUMAN DISEASE.
INDIGESTION is a WEAKNESS or WANT of POWER of the digestive fluids of the stomach to CONVERT the FOOD into HEALTHY MATTER for the proper nourishment of the body.
IT IS CAUSED most frequently by the IRREGULARITY of DIET, or IMPROPER FOOD, WANT of HEALTHY EXERCISE and PURE OUTDOOR AIR.
It may be induced by MENTAL DISTRESS— the shock of some great calamity.
It may be, and often is, AGGRAVATED and INTENSIFIED, or originally brought on, by EXHAUSTION from intense mental application, of physical overwork, domestic troubles, anxiety in business, or financial embarrassments.
IF THE STOMACH could always be KEPT IN ORDER death would no longer be a SUBJECT OF FEARFUL ANXIETY to the YOUNG AND MIDDLE-AGED, but what would be contemplated by all as the visit of an EXPECTED FRIEND at the CLOSE OF A PEACEFUL and HAPPY OLD AGE.
However, the FIRST HOSTILE INVADER upon the domain of health and happiness is INDIGESTION.
Is there any relief, any remedy, any cure? That is the question of the SUFFERING and UNHAPPY DYSPEPTIC.
What is wanted is a MEDICINE that will thoroughly RENOVATE THE STOMACH, BOWELS, LIVER, and KIDNEYS, and afford speedy and effectual assistance to the digestive organs, and restore to the nervous and muscular system their original energy.
SUCH A MEDICINE is HAPPILY at HAND.
Never in the history of medical discoveries, evidenced by a DOZEN YEARS' THOROUGH TEST, has there been found a REMEDY for INDIGESTION so speedy, so sure, and so surprising in its results as SEIGEL'S CURATIVE SYRUP, but TO-DAY it is a STANDARD REMEDY for that almost UNIVERSAL AFFLICTION in every Civilised Country in Europe, Asia, Africa, and America.
PUBLIC TESTIMONIALS and private letters from military officers, bankers, merchants, ship captains, mechanics, farmers, and their wives and daughters, alike confirm its CURATIVE POWERS.

NEARLY RAISED HIM FROM THE GRAVE.
Swiss Cottage, Walton-on-the-Naze,
August 27th, 1886.

A. J. White, Limited.
Dear Sir,—If a testimonial is of any use to you respecting the remarkable cure I have derived by taking your "Seigel's Syrup," you are at liberty to make any public use of this you may deem best. For upwards of twelve years I have suffered from extreme Nervous Debility and Gastric Catarrh, which reduced me so that I was totally unable to do any business, and caused great prostration and weakness. About three years ago I had the advice of several members of the medical faculty, and under their treatment derived little or no good. Being in town some 10 months ago, I was advised to try your Curative Syrup, and purchased a bottle. I had not taken many doses before I began to feel a fresh man. I could walk with ease, while before I had hard work to carry one leg before the other. My strength gradually increased and my eyes sight got better, which before I frequently lost, owing to the malady arising from a sluggish liver, often in bed for several days with piles, and could hardly move. I am thankful to you and to God for nearly raising me from the grave, for it was nothing but your Seigel's Syrup that has restored me to robust health.
Yours faithfully,
A. RICHOLD.

Revesby, near Boston,
December 31, 1886.

A. J. White, Limited.
Dear Sir,—Your Seigel's Syrup I find has an increasing sale in this neighbourhood, and shall always do my best to further the sale of an article that everyone that purchases speaks highly in its favour. I also have great satisfaction in saying that I quite believe my wife was permanently cured of indigestion and wind on the stomach, from which she had suffered intensely some time previous to taking it.
Faithfully yours,
A. BURN.

Attanagh, Abbeyleix,
Queen's County, Ireland,
December 24, 1886.

A. J. White, Limited.
Dear Sir,—I hope that your Seigel's Syrup and Pills may get the sale they so well deserve. I had a very delicate child, a boy now over nine years, but being averse to eating any kind of vegetable or food from his birth, I began giving him Mother Seigel's Curative Syrup, and after a few weeks he recovered so as to be able to consume as much food as other boys of his age, and to the great astonishment of the neighbours, he is lively, getting into flesh, and thriving as well as boys of his age do. We give all the credit of his recovery to Seigel's Syrup.
Yours faithfully,
S. MAXWEL.

THE KIDNEYS.
SYMPTOMS:
PAINS IN LOINS,
HIGH COLOURED OR COLOURLESS URINE,
INCONTINENCE,
FEVER IN THE PARTS.

Thousands of people have taken bottle after bottle of medicine, under the impression that they were suffering from Bright's Disease, or some other Kidney malady. A correct diagnosis or examination, in nine cases out of ten, would demonstrate the fact that the trouble lay in the Liver, the Stomach, or the Blood. This delusion is consequent upon the varied, startling, or alarming advertisements bearing upon Kidney Disease, which, in embracing the symptoms of Dyspepsia and Liver and Blood complaints proper, are regarded by thousands as proof positive that they, too, have fallen victims to Bright's Disease, or some other form of Kidney affections. In ninety-nine cases out of every hundred, when you experience the symptoms found at the head of this article, you will find that Impure Blood, Dyspepsia, and Biliousness are the fathers of the symptoms; and any remedy that will give tone and healthful action to those organs will remove the last vestige of Kidney Disease. In a large majority of cases the Kidneys suffer purely from sympathy, as do other organs. Purify the blood, rouse the torpid Liver to action, strengthen the Stomach, and it will invariably disperse all traces of Kidney Disease. It is a proven and substantial fact that, with a healthy Stomach and Liver, no such thing as Kidney Complaint was ever known.

BELL'S BITTERS will RELIEVE and CURE you.

For quick baking. Raises bread, biscuit, rolls, muffins, and all kinds of cake, without the aid of yeast, saleratus, or cream of tartar, rendering them lighter, sweeter, and more palatable and wholesome. Avoids all decomposition of the flour as caused by yeast rising, thereby saving a large percentage of its most nutritive elements, making the flour go one-fourth further. Food raised by the Royal Baking Powder may be eaten hot, even by dyspeptics, with impunity. Maintains its full strength in any climate any length of time. Endorsed by the United States Government Chemists, and by the leading physicians and hygienists of America, and adopted for use by the United States Government. Guaranteed absolutely pure and wholesome.

A WONDERFUL REMEDY.
MARSHALL'S "TONIC NERVINE"
is now Universally Acknowledged to be a Wonderful Remedy for Nervous and General Debility, Nervous Prostration, Torpidity of the Liver, Indigestion, Palpitation of the Heart, Nervous Headache, Diabetes, Lassitude, Impaired Nutrition, Neuralgia, Hypochondria, Loss of Energy and Appetite, Female Complaints, Dizziness, Noises in the Head and Ears, Loss of Vital Power, Alcoholic Craving, Premature Decline, Impoverished Blood, Impaired Sight and Memory, Consumption in its early stages, Effects of Youthful Indiscretions, Mania, and all diseased conditions of the system proceeding from Deficiency of Nerve Force. A few doses speedily afford relief, whilst a course effects a permanent cure. Innumerable instances emphatically testify to the truth of this statement. Thousands of testimonials invite the afflicted to test it for themselves.

EACH DROP IS WORTH A DROP OF GOLD.

There is no remedy like Marshall's Tonic Nervine for Female Complaints. Every female should have a bottle ready at hand, because for Irregularities, &c., it surpasses all others. As the nervous system is the mainspring of human vigour and healthful regularity, so where this complicated organism is deranged,
MARSHALL'S TONIC NERVINE

The whole organic system, which depends upon the nerves for its streams of electric force, is recuperated and renewed with this Great Vitaliser. The muscles rebound with the energy of youth, appetite and healthful condition follow. The skin becomes bright and clear, and the winter of disease is made summer by the glorious sun of health. Thousands of restored patients everywhere gladly support the forcible truth of these assertions, and one trial will render certainty doubly sure.

MARSHALL'S TONIC NERVINE
is sold by all chemists and storekeepers at 3s 6d a bottle, and is PREPARED ONLY BY MARSHALL BROTHERS, Chemists, Authors of "The Tonic System, and its Value in Treating Disease."

SILENCE IS GOLDEN.—In the home circle it is extremely disagreeable to be annoyed with discordant sounds. We expect to leave noise and bustle in the busy city, and come to our home for quiet—and after all perhaps we find a whirring racketty sewing-machine, clattering away as if noise was a special requirement in the art of sewing. The remedy for this evil is to put the noisy pest in an outhouse, and buy in its stead one of those SILENT MACHINES known as the AUTOMATIC, or Self-regulating, which give no trouble—make no noise—are liked by all who buy them; can be used by the delicate invalid with safety, and are real home treasures.

Coal, Firewood, &c

AUSTRALIAN GASLIGHT COMPANY.

CHEAP WINTER FUEL.

COKE for Winter Fires and for Cooking Purposes can at present be had from the Australian Gaslight Company at the reduced rate of 13s 6d per ton of 20 bags, or 8s 3d per chaldron of 12 bags, delivered at the Works.
Cartage for City and Suburbs will be charged extra at contract rates.
Persons in the habit of using Coke for the above purposes should take advantage of the present low prices and lay in a stock for the winter before the demand becomes heavy, and delivery slow in consequence. The beginning of the season is the time to secure it promptly and cheaply.
Persons who have not used Coke for fires or cooking should try it, as the next best heat generator to gas. It produces a bright, clear fire, with little ash, is preferable to the dirty, smoky fires of coal and wood, and Coke is now much cheaper than either.
Better and more economical results can be obtained if it is broken up small just before use.
Orders sent in at once will have prompt despatch.
W. JOHNSTON,
Secretary.
